Mary Lowry Ross, one of Canada's foremost women writers, will also be present at the banquet and will propose a toast to women in journalism. All toasts will be responded to by the delegates.

This afternoon Miss Mona Clark, Editor of "Gossip," Miss McPherson, Editor of "The Business Woman," Gregory Clark, the celebrated feature writer of "The Star Weekly," and Hector Charlesworth, Managing Editor of "Saturday Night," will talk to the convention.

Sr. Victoria Women Protest Year Book Biographies Rule

At a meeting of Senior women of Victoria College it was decided to send a petition to the Advisory Board of Torontonensis re biographies. The petition requested (1) that within the 35 words or space allotted freedom for quotation, or any form of biography whatsoever be allowed; (2) that if quotations are barred, we be granted greater freedom of form within the biography, i.e., that we may not be forced to adhere to the stereotyped list of activities and interests.

There was a general feeling expressed that the present ruling causes unfairness to the great majority of the student body, gives undue advertisement to the few, and is stereotyped and uninteresting both to the present and to future generations.

Father Burke to Preach at Newman Club Chapel

Father Thomas F. Burke, of the Paulist Fathers, will preach a special sermon at the ten o'clock mass at Newman Club Chapel on Sunday morning. Father Burke is recognized all over America as one of the best speakers in the Catholic Church. He is going to preach during Advent in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, and is scheduled to give a Lenten Course of sermons in the American Church in Rome.

Father Burke is well known in Toronto, especially in University circles. As the first Chaplain of Newman Club he organized it and directed its policy. The thriving condition of the Club to-day owes much of its success to the foundation he so carefully laid in 1913.

All students at the University are welcome to hear this sermon.

ST. MICHAEL'S PARLIAMENT

Jamaica is of Canada. As second supporter of the motion, Mr. W. A. Donaghy stressed the fact that the conference had established sentiment as the solid basis of unity. The conference, moreover, had effectively cleared the air, and put a quietus on the activities of fanatical nationalists in Canada.

Mr. Harry Sifton, B.A., guest speaker, completed the case for the opposition. He congratulated the government in having made an excellent case for both sides of the question. He showed that the control of diplomacy was still largely in the hands of the British government. Besides, the Imperial veto was still in existence and had been recently used. Hence there was no equality. Furthermore, freedom must come from the Canadian people and not from conferences or legislation.

A lively open discussion followed, in which speeches were delivered by Messrs. Garvey, Scallard, Daly, Moovey and King. The motion was voted down by a large majority.

TIGERS TRIUMPHANT TROUNCE TRICOLOUR IN DECISIVE GAME

Intercollegiate Champions Weakened By Loss of Batstone

TIGERS AT TOP FORM

Leadley's Phenomenal Kicking
Scores Nine of the Points Scored by Winners

By the decisive 21-6 score at the Richardson Stadium on Saturday, Hamilton Tigers defeated the weakened Intercollegiate champions and thereby earned the right to play Balm Beach for the Dominion title. Unfortunately Queen's were without the services of their star half-back, Harry Batstone, and minus him they did not look like the same team that overwhelmed McGill last Saturday. As a result of this the wise birds are still at loggerheads as to whether Leadley or Batstone is the better half. Judging by Saturday's game, the Tricolour star would have to be at the top of his form to have any show against the Tigers' kicking half. Not only was Leadley's kicking outstanding, for he scored three field goals in five attempts, but his ball-carrying gained Hamilton many a yard.

Queen's were outclassed in every department of the game. Though ten of the Hamilton points came off Leadley's toe, the Tiger line held like a rock, giving him all the time in the world to get his kicks away. The plunging too was so good that it can honestly be claimed that there is no better line in the Dominion. Queen's, on the other hand, could not get yards through the line once, and Howard certainly did not repeat his performance of a week ago.

In the first quarter Queen's got a break right off the bat when Walker picked up the kick-off and gave them the first play in Tigers' territory. Soon after, Leadley kicked to mid-field, where play remained for a few minutes, but when Langany muffed Carter's low punt, Britton grabbed it and plunged five yards for a touch, which he failed to convert. Queen's 5, Tigers 0.

QUALITIES OF PERETZ TOPIC AT MENORAH SOCIETY TEA

Miss Gussack's Paper Basis of Lively Discussion
Among Members

"Peretz was a great Jew, fully conscious of the unique qualities of his people, their failings and their spiritual gropings. He was their inspiring leader, yet his dynamic style marks him as much an artist as a 'reformer,'" said Miss Anne Gussack in her paper on "Peretz" at the Menorah Tea on Saturday, at 26 Northcliffe Blvd. She went on to illustrate her statements by a very adequate paper urging the members to view Peretz as an artist primarily. He was the only outstanding Yiddish writer of the century and endeavoured to raise the social and ethical ideals of his people as well as emancipate the condition of Jewish womanhood. It was gratifying to see that the attendance was as large as usual. Many new members took advantage of this opportunity of meeting their fellow-students under an atmosphere at once socially and intellectually stimulating. A very active discussion followed about the influence of Peretz on contemporary literature and the preservation of the Yiddish language. Refreshments brought one of the most interesting of Menorah's study groups to a close.

Trinity College Alumni To be Honoured by Ball

Trinity College Alumni will be honoured by their successors in the student body, through the various features of the annual Old Boys' Day. Perhaps the most important event of the day will be the ball to be held in the evening. The committee were surprised by the interest shown in this affair and they promise a dance of unusual and delightful character. The occasion will also be celebrated by a College versus Old Boys rugby game in the afternoon, and by a special dinner in the dining hall tomorrow at 7 p.m. Many of the city graduates and some from outside the city are expected at the College for the occasion.

PROVINCIAL PREMIER TO SPEAK AT DEBATE

Will Uphold Affirmative in Motion Regarding the Constitution

PREMIER'S FIRST VISIT

The Honourable George Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, will take part in the Hart House debate on Wednesday, November 30th, upholding the motion, "That it would not be in the best interests of Canada to assume the right to amend her own constitution."

Subject to Mr. Ferguson's approval, the following order of procedure on this evening has been arranged by the debates committee. There will be four undergraduate speakers "on the paper," each of whom will be allowed ten minutes instead of the usual quarter hour. The debate will then be thrown open to the House, and the first four members catching the Speaker's eye will be allowed five minutes each in which to speak. The Prime Minister of Ontario will then speak for half an hour on the affirmative side. The House will then divide.

In this the first visit of Premier Ferguson as a debater considerable interest is expected, particularly because of the parallel between this and the most important debate of last year in which the Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King defended his course on Imperial relations on his return from the Imperial Conference. This year the Premier of Ontario, back from the Conference of Provincial Ministers, will give his views on a question which has been much discussed as a result of the Ottawa meeting.

FIT ONLY, SURVIVE IN TORRID COLONY OF THE GOLD COAST

Sir Gordon Guggisberg Speaks
Before R.C.I. Members of Africa's Progress

NOT WHITE MAN'S GRAVE

Explains Government Policy Towards Social Treatment of Natives

That the colonies under English rule were the best governed of any in Africa was the statement made by Brigadier General Sir Gordon Guggisberg, Governor of the Gold Coast, in his address to the members of the Royal Canadian Institute, in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening. "Canada is not slow in bringing her light from under the bushel, so I think I should bring England's light from under the bushel," stated Sir Gordon, affirming that the British were the best colonizers.

Before proceeding with his subject, "The Government of a British Colony in Africa," the speaker observed that many Canadians confused South and West Africa. It was with West Africa with which he was particularly years there and having acted as Governor, having spent twenty-five years of the Gold Coast since 1919. The colonies were governed by one man, "under the kindly and careful eye of the Secretary for the Colonies in Downing Street." Sir Gordon stated that the English officials regarded their work as a trusteeship for the natives. The day of exploitation of the natives by private companies out to make large dividends was past. "In order to obtain the co-operation of the natives we must help them. We must give them a leg up to a higher state of civilization."

Of the continent of Africa the speaker noted that it contained three-fourths of the tropical land surface of the world. Its trade of a thousand million dollars could be trebled, quadrupled, multiplied by ten. The intelligence of its people he considered proven by their record on this continent since they had been given educational opportunities. They had to be of strong physique, he explained, according to the survival of the fittest (Continued on page 4)

PREMIER FERGUSON WILL BE SPEAKER AT CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Informal Address to Precede an Open Discussion by Members

MRS. H. FOLLIS TO SPEAK

Only Woman to Address Recent Winnipeg Convention

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, will make his first visit to an undergraduate organization Wednesday evening when he will address the Macdonald-Cartier Club at their meeting in the Graduates' Common Room at 8 p.m.

Another guest of the Macdonald-Cartier Club on this occasion will be Mrs. Howard Follis of Peterboro. Mrs. Follis is one of the leading women Conservatives of the province and was given the great honour of being the only woman to speak at the Winnipeg Convention. Quite recently she was appointed Organizing Secretary of the Young Conservative Movement in Ontario and will outline the aims and objects of her work. She will likely explain the ways in which the members of the Club can assist in the promotion of this Movement.

Although this is Mr. Ferguson's first visit to a meeting of the Club, he has taken a keen interest in its welfare since its formation. In fact, many of the members are his personal friends. This was quite apparent at Winnipeg, where he had several friendly chats with the twenty undergraduates who attended the National Convention.

"Young People's Interest in the Province and Nation" will likely be the subject of Mr. Ferguson's remarks, which will be most informal and will be followed by an open discussion. The members will also have the opportunity of asking any questions they wish.

Judging by the eminent guests who will be present and the important subjects on the agenda, this meeting on Wednesday evening will be one of the most important meetings in the history of the Macdonald-Cartier Club. All members and those who contemplate joining the Club are urged to be present.

Rush To Beauty Parlours Anticipated As Result of New Method of Recording

And now identification by picture. No less an authority than Professor Bladen, who guides budding entrepreneurs through the intricacies of modern industrial structure, is the authority for the announcement.

Friday morning he imparted the news to his second year class that they were due to be "shot," in the less blunderbuss sense of the term. At the same time he distributed cards questioning the recipient much in the manner of a psycho-analytical test.

In the upper left hand corner of the card lay bare an oblong space marked "for photograph." This, he informed his auditors, was "mapped" out for the countenance of his pupils. His next intimation of the dark secret behind these mystic rites came with the urbane remark that "sometimes we know a student by his face only."

He advanced the explanation that when the bureaucrats of the registrar's office wanted to know how a certain embryo bank executive was progressing, or suffering, under the law of diminishing returns, the departmental members would only have to run to their files, recall the face and pull out picture and history as writ by the moving hand which intrepidly filled in the card Friday. By certain mental juggling, elucidated Mr. Bladen, there would come to the seeker's mind the history of the student's conduct, progress, deportment, et al., in class. Thus would be obtained in simple and novel mode, the solution to the registrar's query.

The assumption is that the boys with the moronic features will suffer from the consequences, although Mr. Bladen did not enlarge upon the subtleties. The cognoscence with the broad expanse of forehead may, peradventure, reap the rewards of this picture-memory system. Should it happen that on the night before the registrar interrogation showed up that one of the department concerned had dwelt too long on weighty tomes, or have suffered the consequences of too intimate acquaintance with the entrepreneurs whose characteristics they expound, he might rely on his knowledge of facial characteristics to supply the answer rather than exercise a fagged mind.

In further anticipation of the future—oh, well, anyhow, if the weather man gives the right dope next Tuesday, the lads are due to have a free picture taken for the ghastly records.

BANQUET ENDS CONVENTION

One hundred and seventy-seven high school students have returned to their homes in various parts of Ontario with a glowing impression of the University of Toronto and with more complete ideas concerning the publication of high school papers. The second convention of collegiate journalists was another proof of this University's being the educational centre of the province. The programme was filled with educational, practical and entertaining features, and was intended to raise the standards of writing and publication in Ontario schools.

Friday morning Sir Robert Falconer welcomed the delegates on behalf of the University, and W. J. Dunlop, B.A., Director of University Extension, explained the aims of the gathering. Then C. H. J. Snider, News Editor of "The Telegram," told of the mysteries of "Scoops and Scaps." A representative of an engraving house followed with a technical address on the illustrating of magazines.

MEMORY OF FALLEN REVERED AT TRINITY

Archdeacon Scott of Quebec
Preaches at Service in Trinity Chapel

PROVOST OFFICIATES

"Our thoughts of those who sacrificed their lives for their country are not weak or sentimental but full of vigour and life," said Archdeacon Scott of Quebec, during his sermon at the annual memorial service held in Trinity Chapel yesterday.

It was almost profanity, according to the former Canadian army chaplain, to try to preach a sermon on such an occasion. The finest sermon was in the list of the names of the dead which the congregation had heard read out. It was no easy thing to analyze one's feeling on such an occasion. The world was lost in admiration of those who with unselfconscious splendour little realized when they fell how their memory would be revered.

"There is a lesson for all of us," declared the preacher, "in the lives of those who died because they were determined to win their objective no matter at what personal cost to themselves. We should not mourn their death but exult in their glory."

The chapel was crowded by many friends and graduates of the college who gathered to honour the members of the college who fell in the war. The provost conducted the service and the choir led the special singing for the occasion.

Former Ages Awaken and Live Again

2,000 ATTENDED

U.C. Couples Winners of All Prizes

Two thousand masqueraders thrilled to the rhythmic throb of a quarter score perspiring orchestras, as the annual Hart House Masquerade passed into history last Friday night. A veritable riot of colour—every conceivable type of costume—soft-toned, delicately-tinted lights—a brilliantly varied background of decoration outside the new-fallen snow, silver-sparkling in the light of an auspicious moon—the Masquerade. Grotesque shadows leaped along the halls as mediaeval knight and lady fair tripped from dance to rendezvous. Mysterious Chinese girls with mandarin bold fitted tightly hither and yon. Silken Spanish girls and tulle ballet dancers floated listlessly across the floor, lightly as wreaths of vapour. There were gandhis and sores, Pierrots and Pierettes, a Beauty and a Beast, "Varieties" and Christmas Presents: and—yes—the royal note was not lacking—Empress Josephine held her regal sway.

Shortly before 10 the Grand March past the judges' stand commenced. Seated upon the platform in the main gymnasium, Mr. Arthur Lismer and Mr. Henry Sproatt had a really difficult task to perform. After considerable deliberation and careful comparison of artistic effects, the judges finally decided upon the winners.

It was a gala night for University College, for all four winners hailed from there. Miss Mary Moorhead and W. F. Arnold, 370, were judged the most beautifully costumed couple. Their attire spoke of the sumptuous richness of a Keatsian poem. The couple taking the prize for the most original costumes was Miss Isabel Brown, 371, and S. H. Dale, 273. Handsomely framed photographs are the prizes in both cases.

Not an epoch in history, not a clime of the world, not a nationality under the sun, but had its representative in this gayly-bedecked throng that tripped merrily through the judges' stand. Orient and Occident, North and South; simply-dressed Koreans, turbaned Turks, Arabs in their tempera (Continued on page 4)

INCREASE IN ATTENDANCE SHOWN BY DIRECTORY

Decrease in Dentistry Due to Raising of Standards to Honour Matric

The Directory of Staff and Students, to give it its official title, is at last in our midst. Great excitement reigned in the tree-ham camp on Saturday morning when eager freshmen and freshettes feverishly hunted through the lists of first year students to behold their names in print for the first time, bursting forth in all their glory.

The grand summary of attendance shows that the total registration for last year was 5,003 as compared to 5,456 of this year, an increase of 453. Of this number the Faculty of Arts is responsible for an increase of 299. This year's figure is very close to the 3,000 mark, being 2,907.

The Faculty of Medicine is less this year by five students, while 38 less embryo Dentists are re-registered, when compared with the figure of 322 for last year. An increase of 60 is found in S.P.S., and a decrease of 11 in (Continued on page 4)

WHAT CAN WE OFFER THEM?

On Friday and Saturday, approximately one hundred and fifty high school students, keenly interested in journalism, assembled in Toronto to discuss and receive advice concerning their publications. The great proportion of these were intending to proceed to the University. What are we going to do with them when they arrive?

The Registrar of Victoria College once stated that the most frequent question asked by in-coming students was, "What course should I take to be a journalist?" And what, indeed! We have no course in journalism. We have no course that takes the place of a course in journalism, and the students are forced to choose their subjects in the pass course, or to follow an honour course formed for the teaching of specific high school subjects. Honour English, a subject most desired for such a training, cannot be had in the pass curriculum, while the honour course entails a great deal of language study, which is unnecessary, and even impossible for many.

Until the University of Toronto comes to realize that it is incomplete without a course in journalism, could we not have some substitute course, or a shifting of subjects to fill the need? For such training would not be for individual benefit, alone, but would aim to act as an uplift to the whole realm of present-day journalism.

WHAT IS OUR ATTITUDE ON THE CARILLON?

Just what should be the reaction of a carillon audience has been, and will be again, the subject of much discussion. The average undergraduate is totally at a loss to know what is expected of him, whether he should stand, with his hat removed, for the entire ceremony at whatever place on the campus he may be when the chimes peal forth or whether he should exhibit this attitude of reverence within a certain defined area. And if there is a certain area, just where is it? Or is it necessary to go through any demonstration whatever except when the National Anthem is being played? Or is it necessary then if lectures, executive meetings, or other matters of business have a prior call? And is the attitude at a ceremonial to be different from that at an ordinary recital?

Dr. R. T. Noble, president of the Alumni Federation, is stated to be strongly in favour of the audience springing to attention with a baring of heads when "God Save the King" is being played, while others feel that an attitude of silence is a sufficient tribute. In any case, there appears to be a wide divergence of opinion on the subject, and there are not a few taking the attitude of the humorist who advises that "He mistook the key of the Anthem and thought the carillonneur was playing 'America'."

Our own attitude would be that neither a feeling of reverence nor patriotism should be forced. As such, it is but a hollow sham that is no tribute and that certainly has no meaning, and that would most certainly work against rather than for the acquiring of any appreciation. In such matters man should follow the dictates of the soul, the heart, and the mind rather than rules, regulations, precedents or standards, and, if doing such, he finds himself antagonistic to the ceremonial, he should most certainly be allowed to follow his own inclinations.

The majority of us will desire to exhibit reverence, not so much because it is the National Anthem that is being played but because it is the University of Toronto Memorial Carillon in the Memorial Tower. Our sympathies are with the gallant dead, and our tribute is to their sacrifice of life for country.

And with things so, with wonderful bells in a glorious setting, it is fitting that the type of music played be in keeping with the best, and the Carillon Committee is to be commended because of its act in securing the Dominion Carillonneur to play on certain specific occasions. The dedication of the bells leaves too sacred an atmosphere to allow for the practising of the embryo carillonneur, and rather would we have them rust and crack in idleness than to be forced to sympathise with tortured bells.

We would recommend that the audience regulate its actions just as individual desire or necessity dictates, for patriotism comes not always with an attitude of attention nor reverence with a saddened mien.

Art, Music and Drama

Sunday Evening Concert

The forty-second of the Hart House Sunday Evening Concerts was given by the Music Maker Singers under the direction of Mr. Campbell McInnes.

The Music Makers, seven young ladies attired in picturesque fancy costumes of the seventeenth century, sang very prettily a rather lengthy programme of five groups of songs. Of especial interest was the second group of six English madrigals, and the best of these were the joyous "Now is the Month of Maying," and "Love Learns by Laughing," and the pastoral "Thyrsis, Sleepest Thou?"

The third group of Brahms' "Ave Maria," the plaintive "Schwesterlein," and a lovely berceuse, "Wiegenlied," was delightfully rendered with charm and feeling. The fourth group of French Psalm Madrigals and Brunettes of the 15th and 16th centuries was opened with the solemn "A Toi Mon Dieu," followed by the light and pleasing "Ah que ces bois," "Gris-eldi's," "Allons au vert borage," and the delightful "Ce mois de Mai," repeated for the appreciative audience.

The last group was distinguished by a pleasing arrangement made by Mr. McInnes of "Drink to me only with thine eyes," which was followed by a rollicking lilt, "Follow me down to Carlow," Mrs. L. A. Hamilton accompanied the ladies with perfect finesse.

"THE RIVALS"

The performance of "The Rivals" by the Loretto College Players was well received by large audiences. Sheridan's exuberant sallies received their meed of laughter. The spirited opening scene between Fag (Miss Madeline Hamilton) and Thomas (Miss Isabel Devlin) struck the keynote of the play. Miss Helen Radigan as Lydia Languish gave a charming impersonation of that romantic and sentimental young woman, with Miss Frances Fitzpatrick as the dashing and self-sufficient Captain Absolute. Of special merit was the acting of Miss Mac Rouselle, who achieved a notable success as Bob Acres, of Miss Sara Dwyer as the choleric but delightful Sir Anthony, and of Miss Helena McGrath as Mrs. Malaprop, excelling in the use of her "oracular tongue" and her "nice derangement of epitaphs." The scenes with Faulkland, usually uninteresting to a modern audience, afforded some of the best comedy in the production due to the fine acting of Miss Muriel Smith. Julia, the only serious character in the play, was charmingly portrayed by Miss Monica Boyes. The challenge scene, with Bob Acres and Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Miss Josephine Brophy taking the part of the fire-eating Irish baronet, was perhaps the most amusing in the play. David, the soft-hearted servant of Acres, with his Falstaffian analysis of honour, was played by Miss Tillie Jackman.

DENTS. vs. ST. MIKE'S IN MULOCK CUP SEMI-FINAL TO-DAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Tigers came out of their game with Queen's victorious by a margin of 15 points. The great attraction at the game was the expected conflict between Leadley and Batstone, but the duel did not materialize. The famous "Red" was unable to play, but it is hardly likely that, valuable as he is to the Queen's team, he would have been able to turn the tide that was running against the Tricolour. Tigers were just too good. Leadley accounted for 9 points on three field goals, which was enough to win.

The Hamilton line was too strong for the Kingston outfit. Howard and Kilgour are a smart pair of line men, but the Tigers have strength all across their front line, and for that matter on their rearward too.

It looks as if the Interprovincial Union was in for a period of supremacy in Canadian rugby. The Intercollegiate ruled the rugby roost for a period of years when Queen's were at the top of their form, but it looks as if the Big Four were getting their turn now. True, they have not won the title yet, as Balmy Beach have to play off with Tigers on the coming Saturday. Beaches are a decided threat and are easy meat for no man's team, but there is little doubt that Tigers will be odds-on favourites. The Hamilton entry gained a lot of prestige by their decisive victory over Queen's, although Beaches have a lot of supporters they will probably ask for long odds on their pets.

There will be plenty of hockey teams at the University this year, and Varsity will have an entry in the Senior Intercollegiate and Senior O.H.A., and probably in the Intermediate sections of both the aforementioned leagues. Besides this the Blue and White will be entered as usual in the Junior O.H.A. Indications are that the Blue teams will be strong as ever this year. There is a great flock of players turning out with all the squads, and Coach "Mike" Pearson should have no difficulty at all in getting three strong teams. The only difficulty he will have will not be in getting teams, but in selecting them from the abundant supply of available material.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANOTHER RAP FOR
"POSTUMUS"

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Having read "Postumus" letter in Thursday's issue of "The Varsity," I beg space to remark on the same. As an undergraduate in Arts, it seems to me that your correspondent displays some very lop-sided ideas which are most unworthy of one who would be cultured.

Surely "Postumus" realizes that education is very narrow at its best. If he does not, then his University course has not done for him what it should have done. To infer that a man is not cultured because he lacks knowledge in the branches of learning in which "Postumus" is obviously enough an ardent student, is nonsense. It would be just as sensible to say that a student in English or Classics was uncultured because he did not know calculus or had an inadequate knowledge of Political Science.

To brand the graduates in Medicine, Dentistry, etc., as uncultured is nothing less than slander on these esteemed professions. I agree that culture should be the purpose of every University course, including the Sciences, and I believe that this purpose is being nobly achieved in every department of the University of Toronto. Further, the word "culture" is not intended to mean the ability to philosophize on any particular subject or group of subjects, and therefore the awkwardness of "Postumus" terminology.

Yours respectfully,

U.C. 29.

"POSTUMUS" CRITICIZED

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

I am an Arts student, and in third year. I am intending to be frank in what I have to say, and unreserved in my judgment. Hence, allow me to infer that "Postumus"—in his article of the 17th—is somewhat perverted in his judgment re an Arts man.

He does not tell us whether he is one of the so-called "miserables" himself or not. If he is not an Arts man he certainly has much to learn about one. If he is, he is lamentably self-critical and a living example of what he is knocking.

But to be more or less constructive in my remarks, might I suggest to my friend "Postumus" that if he were to transfer his attentions to a more noble-minded group than that with which he apparently associates at present, his estimate of an undergrad might appreciably rise. For a man is judged by the character of his associates, but a word to the wise is sufficient.

With regard to his so-called butter-and-egg man, etc., men with B.A.'s trailing their names, they, likewise, are not so degraded as my unfortunate friend sees them. Why, he is not even consistent, for he himself acknowledges them to be "masterminds." And just here I ask him—What more does he expect of a Med grad or a Science wizard than to be a master-mind in his vocation?

Furthermore, as for culture, I vehemently protest against the rank insinuation implied in his question—"Just what amount of culture can the graduate in Arts show?" Are we nothing more to my friend than dupes? Are we merely the semblance of Pup-

JUNIORS IN FINAL READY FOR M.A.A.A.

Stiff Battle with Montreal Eagerly Awaited by Team in Great Shape

WILL FIELD STRONG TEAM

Varsity Juniors are in the Eastern Canada finals. The Blue "kids" are given their chance to score a win for the University when they hook up with Montreal's favourites on Saturday next. The M.A.A.A. team are nobody's fools and the way they bowled Ottawa over in the Eastern Canada playdowns mark them as favourites over the Intercollegiate champions.

The Blue and White twelve have the chance to wreak some sweet revenge when they travel down to Montreal next week-end, as these M.A.A.A. Juniors prevented the Blues from getting the highest Canadian honours last year when they polished off the Varsity outfit.

The Juniors have a smart aggregation and have been playing good consistent football all season, and if they are at their best they will give Montreal one sweet battle, and these Eastern Canada champions are going to know that they have been in a game.

The Jimmie Douglas clan has the support of the entire student body in their attempt to bring further laurels to the University.

The "kids" should be "raring" to go, and if the Montreal hopes find themselves at the bottom of the heap in their sudden death fixture it will be because the Blues are a better team.

The Juniors have had a chance to rest their bumps in their two and a half week lay-off and will field their strongest team in the crucial affair next week.

Pets of Chance, guided about for four years by the skilful and yet deceptive fingers of our masters—the professors? Certainly not, and I challenge the implication.

We may not know all about these illustrious men whose names, perchance, "Postumus" has culled from some encyclopaedia—nor are we expected to. And I question if even that is the essence of culture. But even I can, at least, quote one of his friends—and it is Pindar, who said:

"Shall I make justice my high tower, or shall I fortify myself with crooked deceit?"

Pindar, my friend, recognized the ambiguity of life, and my advice to you is—Go thou and do likewise, for in relation to Arts men, you are grossly deceived. But before I should merit Pope's subtle denunciation, where he says:

"Words are like leaves, and where they most abound, Much fruit of sense, beneath, is seldom found,"

I shall close,
With no undue offence,
"Bungus."

KNOX COLLEGE SOCCER MEN MOVE MEDS FROM FINALS

Presbyterians to Play Vic. in Final Battle for Interfaculty Cup

The Knox College soccer team defeated the Medical School team Saturday afternoon in a hard-fought battle to the tune of 1-0, making the score for the round 2-1. Meds were thus eliminated from the semi-finals of the Interfaculty series, and Knox won the right to meet Victoria College for the cup.

Playing under difficulties on an ice-covered field and in a chilling breeze, both teams put up a strong fight and played one of the best games that the front campus has seen this year. Despite the fact that the lines were covered with snow, a field was improvised and the game went on as scheduled.

D. Davidson, playing centre forward for the Presbyterians, played a wonderful game, although he received a nasty kick early in the game. Rowland displayed his usual good checking, and W. Jack, Knox captain, did some fine work in the back field. Irving in goal made some more of those spectacular saves for which he is becoming famous, playing gamely even after he had been knocked out by a hard shot. The Presbyterians were considerably weakened by the loss of H. Davidson and Skelton, who were unable to play owing to injuries.

The teams were as follows:

Knox College: Irving, W. Jack, D. Jack, D. Perry, Rowland, McCullough, Johnson, Young, D. Davidson, Kerr, Hall.

Meds: Benson, King, Whitla, Nodwell, West, McKinney, Dixon, Ayras, Lee, Ririe, Taylor, Wilford.

Referee: Hadley.

"TAKE A CHANCE," NO GOOD WYCLIFFITES LAUD SAFETY

Government of Wycliffe Upset By Opposition on Floor of Student Parliament

After a decidedly stormy session the Government, led by N. T. Newby, was defeated in the Wycliffe Parliamentary debate held on Friday evening. The motion which proved the government's downfall read, "Resolved that safety first as the principle of human nature is to be deplored." The speaker for the government based their arguments on the assumption that the motion referred to "safety first" as the predominant principle of life. The opposition, on the other hand, claimed that a different motion had been submitted to them and that "safety first" was mentioned as merely a good principle for life but not the predominant one. As a result of these two interpretations of the motion the debate at times developed into something of a farce.

The opposition showed a tendency to place all the emphasis on safety and leave the "first" part of the motion out of the debate altogether. Safety according to them was merely a precautionary measure, and its advan-

NATIONAL GALLERY SERIES MOST COMPLETE IN WORLD

Masterpieces of Many Artists of All Ages Are Described in Grange Lecture

"No other gallery in the world can show such a consistent series of paintings of the Italian school as we have," said Mr. Stewart Dick, in the second of a series of lectures delivered at the Art Gallery on the National Gallery in London. By means of a number of slides, Mr. Dick took his audience on a tour of the Italian rooms of the Gallery. All the rooms around the dome are devoted to this school. "It would take ten hours to go over the space we shall cover to-night," he stated.

The earliest pictures were marked the thirteenth century and dated from 1260. They were after the Byzantine school—somewhat crude and with primitive colourings. There were twenty-two great schools of Italian art. The Gallery contains three paintings of the school by Duccio, which mark an advance in grace of line and delicacy of colour. Fresco painting was in great vogue until the end of the fourteenth century, and among the beautiful pieces shown was Spindello's Rebel Angels. Fra Angelico was also among those famous painters of the fourteenth century, and his works exemplify the great influence of the church.

The beginning of the fifteenth century marked the beginning of the Renaissance, and the influence of the great sculptors is predominant. A certain fullness and roundness was introduced through the art of modelling and Mosaic, 1401, was a landmark in the history of Italian painting. He observed from life and gradually got away from the influence of the church. Secular paintings began to come to the fore. Study of perspective and general enlarging of the field of painting began. Subjects were drawn from the classics. In the Umbrian school Piero de la Francesca dominates with his two pictures—The Baptism of Christ and The Madonna and Child.

The dome of the Gallery is Renaissance in type and is filled in with altar pieces, designed for churches. The great Florentine pieces are outstanding, through their copious use of gold and bright blue. There is an elaborate harmony in the colourings, but something was lost in the advance—there is always a loss in every advance of art. Raphael added the full roundness of sculpture to his figures and introduced dark shadows—but he had to give up the bright, colourful hues for realism.

Room three of the Gallery is the Florentine Room. One of the great glories of the Gallery is the series of Botticelli paintings. The second of tages in the realm of history, science and everyday life were fully enlarged upon. The government, following its own interpretation of the motion, proceeded to show that "safety first" as the guiding principle of life led only to selfishness and that history had been shaped by men who disregarded it as the guiding star of their lives. Apparently these arguments failed to convince the majority, and therefore what was the opposition led by H. R. Perkins is now the government. The government except for one notable exception seemed to suffer from an attack of over earnestness, while the opposition specialized in a continual stream of heckling.

DEBATING SPIRIT REVIVES IN ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Slump in Interest Followed Change of System Two Years Ago

Since 1919, when the Gough Trophy was awarded for the first time to J. A. Kehoe and M. F. Flannery, debating at St. Michael's has always held the interest of the students until two years ago, when a change of system and the general lack of desire to hear forensic display caused the trophy to be withheld due to insufficient competition. This year the Students' Council has sponsored a debating tournament to the winners, of which the coveted cup will be awarded.

The imposing silver bowl, which occupies an honoured place in one of the trophy cases in the College Dining Hall, has passed through many vicissitudes in regard to the manner of awarding. The donor, Mr. R. P. Gough, laid no stringent rules as to how its winners should be named, and at first it was given to the team which survived a series in which all the best orators took part. Later on, in 1922 and 1923, it was awarded to the man who in the opinion of the Students' Parliament had acquitted himself most creditably in the debates of that body. This method enjoyed but short sway, and it was succeeded in 1924 by a reversion to the first method. As stated above, debating in all branches of the University lost much of its former vogue in 1925, which it is but slowly regaining at the present. The winners to date have been: 1919—J. A. Kehoe and M. F. Flannery.

1920—G. R. Redding and Henry J. Lassaline.

1921—J. H. May and Alphonse Page.

1922—J. E. McGeahay.

1923—Paul J. J. Martin.

1924—J. Edwin McKeon and B. Russell Callaghan.

the series at the Uffizi Gallery is Florence. His paintings dominate this room.

With Raphael, there came an approach to perfection and finality that was his peculiar quality. Michelangelo painted but little. His greatest works are the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel walls. He has only three other paintings, two of which are unfinished and at the Gallery. The study of the nude reached its perfection in his figure of Christ in His Entombment. Correggio is the master of the Fornese school. During the latter sixteenth century, Italian art died down and was saved by the growth of naturalism. The religious paintings seem a little empty. The Spanish school of the seventeenth century arose from the school of this naturalistic period.

The Venetian school was left out of its place—but the two rooms devoted to it are among the largest in the Gallery. First is the Milanese school, largely influenced by Leonardo, who lived in Milan for eighteen years. His Madonna of the Rachs shows the grandeur of his conception and his wonderful intellect. There is no more beautiful head than the Madonna's or a more beautiful figure than the Christ Child's. The other room is dominated by Bellini's Doge Leonardo Loudano.

TWO ISSUES DIVIDE
MODERN PROTESTANT
SAYS DR. R. ROBERTS

God of Evolution Does Not Correspond With Creator of Genesis

MODERNISM IS UNDEFINED

Real Struggle Between Static and Progressive Views of Religion

"Modernism" was the subject of Dr. Richard Roberts' lecture delivered at Hart House. In defining the term "Modernism," the speaker emphasized the fact that there was no hard and fast meaning for the word; just as there were as many philosophers, every Modernist would have an individual definition to offer. "The abuse of the word is a warning against labelism," said Dr. Roberts. An infinite number of shadings of the basic idea were possible, yet that idea itself remained—the acceptance, in varying degrees, of a scientific attitude towards religious life and thought.

Modernism had its rise in Roman Catholic Liberalism—the view that certain portions of Catholic dogma needed reform in the light of modern knowledge. The movement gathered impetus until, in the pontificate of Leo XIII, the hierarchy saw fit to solemnly warn its leaders against any unorthodox pioneering. With the accession of Pius IX, the Bull "Pascendi" was promulgated, which condemned the reforming element in the church, lock, stock and barrel. Several of the proponents of the movement were excommunicated, and they immediately developed more radical tendencies.

In Protestantism, Modernists and Fundamentalists were opposed upon two main issues; around these centred the controversial mainstream which is just subsiding. Should the Scriptures be subjected to critical analysis to determine what we shall accept as reasonable, and what we shall reject as erroneous? Does the God of Evolution correspond with the Creator of Genesis?

To grant that the Scriptures were open to error would, by implication, be a denial of their divine inspiration. It was a question of the greatest importance. As to the second bone of contention, Dr. Roberts was of the opinion that the Force behind the Evolution Theory did differ considerably from the Biblical conception of God. The latter was essentially a Transcendental God—a God existing for, but distinctly apart, from his creatures; whereas the Deity of Evolution was One who realized himself gradually, as the process of life continued ever upward.

G. K. Chesterton had said that a Pessimist was one who, of two evils, embraced both. Postulating the truth of the epigram, the speaker found himself having a dark outlook upon life. "I accept both the Biblical and Evolutionary conceptions of God in part," said he, "although I believe a third term, yet undiscovered, which combines the basic ideas of the Transcendental and the Immanent Deity, will more accurately convey the true notion."

Such were the public issues in the Modernistic controversy; yet they were really but the manifestation of an underlying incompatibility. "The real culprit," Dr. Roberts said, "is between the Static and the Progressive views of religion." From the Static point of view, religion stands still; it mental robes, swarthy Mexicans, beaming Scottish lassies—a dazzling, overpowering array of colour, with endless variety. The Enlivened History of England was present in perambulating form. Elizabethan courtiers, demure Victorian maids, bold English earls, Polish peasants, darkling Italian maidens, and a towering Russian Cossack—the Grand March was a disarranged pageant. This intimate intermingling of race and social caste would do a League of Nations supporter much good indeed.

Satonic personages occasionally appeared amidst the throng; again a rollicking Peter Pan, closely followed by a rather boisterous clergyman of dapper undercarriage, poured through the crowd. A laurelled brunette was the sole representative of the Fiji Island group.

The great gymnasium was decorated in blue and white, while the West Common Room spoke volumes of our respect for old McGill. In the Reading Room the Tricolour proclaimed Queen's. Confederation was commemorated in the Lecture and Music Rooms. Fine orchestras rendered a thousand couples' feet uncontrollable.

The upper gymnasium was used as a sitting-out room, while the Library and Pool were both opened to the revelers. The fountain in the pool was wondrous to behold, with its splashing sparkling waters ever changing in their hues and tints.

The Middle Common Room was the centre of the Camera Club's operations. A large number of photographs were taken. Supper was arranged very nicely in the Great Hall.

Approximately two hundred graduate members of Hart House were guests, together with a considerable number of the faculty.

The patrons of the Masquerade were: Lady Falconer, Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, Mrs. W. Secombe, Mrs. H. Westney, Mrs. Vincent Massey.

Delegates were present from the three leading Canadian universities—McGill, H. Quackenbush; Queen's, Allan Broadbent; Western, Frank Turvil.

The House Committee consisted of: Prof. J. H. Parkin (chairman), Mr. J. Burgen Bickersteth, Warden; Mr. Kenneth Perfect (Secretary), Prof. G. H. Duff, Mr. A. G. Long, J. R. McGillivray, W. F. is eternally unchangeable. It allows of no future addition, discovery or revelation. On the contrary, the learned lecturer regarded religion as subject to all the laws of growth. Religious experience was ever increasing. As an illustration, during the five and a half centuries the Apostles' Creed was developing into its present form it underwent no less than twenty alterations.

Gregory Clark, of "The Star Weekly," also addressed the convention, and advised the delegates not to bother with fancy language, but to present their story as forcefully as possible in plain English. Hector Charles, of "The Saturday Night," welcomed the delegates on behalf of the newspapers of Toronto, and concluded the list of speakers. A trip to the McLean Publishing Company followed.

In the evening a grand banquet was held in Burwash Hall, and toasts were given and responded to by Mr. Clarke Ashworth, Mr. W. Arthur Irwin, of McLean's Magazine, Mr. R. C. H. Mitchell, Miss Eve Powell, Mrs. Mary Lowry Ross, and delegates from London and Stratford.

Saturday morning John Elson addressed the gathering on the opportunities in writing for young people, and Mr. Mark L. Haas, of the "American Boy," Detroit, gave a wealth of advice on practical matters in journalism. A discussion led by Mr. J. P. S. Nethercott, of London, ended the programme.

In the afternoon the delegates went to the Winter Fair as the guests of the sponsors of the Convention. The gathering was held under the direction of Sigma Delta Chi, the Professional Journalistic Fraternity, the Department of University Extension, and Sigma Phi, Women's Journalistic Fraternity.

as the infant mortality was from 350 to 500 deaths per hundred thousand in the first year of life.

"The climate of the Gold Coast is not that of a health resort, neither is it a white man's grave," said the lecturer. The white civil servants were given a trip home lasting eighteen weeks after every eighteen months of work, and this kept them fit.

Sir Gordon described the tremendous increase of the trade of the Gold Coast in cocoa and manganese. The Gold Coast now exports half the world's supply of cocoa, and the trade in diamonds and gold is also being developed. He stressed the fact that these achievements were those of the native and showed what could be done by so-called "lazy negroes."

In connection with the social policy of the government, the speaker stated that he was preventing in his colony what had happened in India, namely, the production of a small class of men westernized by education, who, though brilliant and of high character, were cast off from the mass of people and unable to lead them.

The government did not encourage indiscriminate mingling of black and white outside certain official occasions. Black and white, said Sir Gordon, were naturally farther apart in nature than French and German, and the wiser policy was to develop in the native a pride in his own race.

Hamilton Tigers Triumphant

Till now Queen's had had an edge, but from this point onward they faded badly, and to the end of the game Tigers completely outplayed them.

The beginning of the second quarter found Tigers in possession on the Tricolour 35-yard line. After Small had made a 3 yard, followed by a 12-yard gain, Timmins failed on his buck, so Leadley dropped back, and behind a stonewall line kicked his first drop. Queen's 5, Tigers 3.

Leadley gained 15 yards on the kick-off, and when Tigers carried the ball right up to their opponents' 15-yard line, he kicked his second goal, which he followed up by a kick into touch behind the Tricolour line and a rouge before the end of the period. Half-time score—Tigers 8, Queen's 5.

Starting the third quarter with an attempted comeback, Queen's opened an offensive and forced play into Tigers' territory. Unfortunately they could not keep it up, and when Hamilton carried the ball down the field Leadley kicked his third goal. Tigers 11, Queen's 5. On the return from the kick-off, which put play on Queen's 10-yard line, Small intercepted a bad pass and romped over for a try, which sewed up the game. Tigers 16, Queen's 5.

The old Kingston fighting spirit flared up again, however, and just before three-quarter time they scored their last point on a rouge from Carter to Langnay. Tigers 16, Queen's 6.

In the last quarter Timmins scored another try for the Tigers, but Leadley's two attempted field goals both failed. Queen's tried to open up the play, but the hoped-for break did not come, and when the final whistle blew, Tigers were in possession on the Tricolour 20-yard line. Final score—Tigers 21, Queen's 6.

Increase in Attendance

O.C.E. Students pursuing post-graduate work this year increased by 33, and small increases are found in Household Science, Forestry, Social Service and Occupational Therapy. The course in Public Health Nursing has increased from 32 to 98.

The largest faculty, that of Arts, gains its increase this year not from University College, where 1,284 of the 2,907 are registered, but from the other Arts colleges. Trinity, Victoria and St. Michael's all show proportionate increases, but U.C. shows a decrease of 11.

According to the names given in the Directory, the staff for this year has taken a corresponding increase of 78, this bringing the figure to just over 1,000.

A comparatively small registration in the first year in the Faculty of Dentistry may be traced to the raising of the entrance requirements to the honour matriculation standard.

Members of the Port Arthur Board of Education and University Extension Committee have forwarded a resolution to the Department of Education asking that a Junior University be established at the head of the lakes.

FLEMISH ART IN NATIONAL GALLERY DESCRIBED BY MR. STEWART DICK

Lecture Illustrated By Slides Shows History of Dutch
School of Art

THIRD LECTURE IN SERIES

Southern Influence is Often Exerted on Northern Artists Visiting Italy

Mr. Stewart Dick continued his tour of the National Gallery of London by means of picture slides last night at The Grange. The subject of this third illustrated lecture was Flemish Art.

Beginning in the early 1400 he brought his audience by means of a carefully selected group of illustrations up through the early Dutch school from the "Eyckes," who founded the Flemish school, contrasting it with the Italian school in so far as southern art expresses its difference in geographical and climatic condition through the idealism of its paintings "Poetry of Art." The northern European artists paint in prose.

The early Flemish art was rugged, harsh and typically northern, but containing much depth and beauty of colour. This work was very detailed in treatment. The strictly Flemish school soon gave way to Italian influences, and for more than half a century before Rubens the Flemish school reflected only the south. Rubens was the revolutionist of Flemish art. On his return from Italy he gave to the world of art through his school of tuition, an essentially Flemish school. He did much classic work but was not at his best in that sphere.

Van Dyke was a pupil of Rubens and shows considerably more of Italian influence than his noted teacher. His work, although no less versatile than Rubens, was perhaps more cosmopolitan. He spent much of his later life in England, where he did many famous portraits.

The Flemish painters who immediately followed Van Dyke have given us perhaps our best pictures of Dutch landscapes and marine life. And Franz Hals left for us many a dashing painted portrait of Dutch celebrities.

The National Gallery contains some twenty-eight pictures by Rembrandt.

Second Hart House Debate Will Be Held Wednesday

The second Hart House debate of this term will be held in the Lecture Room at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 30th. The motion, "That it would not be in the best interests of Canada to assume the right to amend her own Constitution," will be moved by Mr. D. J. Walker, University College, and opposed by Mr. J. M. King, St. Michael's College. Mr. D. D. Gunn, Trinity College, will speak third, and Mr. B. J. Thomson, University College, will speak fourth.

The Honourable G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, will close the debate.

UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT SETS ATTENDANCE RECORD

Preparations for Christmas Activities Are In Progress

The aggregate attendance at the University Settlement in October, 1927, was 1,000 more than in October, 1926. The Music School has now over 100 pupils with seven associate teachers of the Conservatory helping make it a success.

The Women's Auxiliary of the University Settlement held its first meeting at the Social Service Department, where Miss Freda Held of the Neighbourhood Workers addressed the gathering.

Preparations for the extensive Christmas activities are already being made. The dolls will be ready for dressing by next week. It is customary that the women of the various colleges assist in the making of the dolls and bags.

Workers are still needed to help in the Library, and also assist in the direction of the many clubs connected with the Settlement.

St. Joseph Literary Society Arranges Dramatic Program

The first meeting of St. Joseph's Literary Society was held yesterday afternoon in the main Lecture Hall of the College. The plan of procedure for the year was outlined. The Society's activities are to be largely dramatic, with each year taking charge of the programme for a meeting.

S.A.C. CONTROLS MANY UNIVERSITY STUDENT SOCIETIES

Student Council Runs Rooters' Club, Students' Parliament and Debates Committee

FACULTY TRUST COUNCIL

S.A.C. Unites All Colleges and is Representative of Men Students

The undergraduates of the University of Toronto are almost self-governing in every phase of student activity. The extent of this self-governance is illustrated by the widespread power of the Students' Administrative Council, a democratic body composed of representative undergraduates from each college. That the faculty trust this student body is indicated by the fact that the Caput and the Senate of the University almost always back up the Council in its decisions.

The Students' Administrative Council of the University aims at acting "as a unifying force in University life, and as a representative body of the men students." Other bodies may have the same end in view, but the S.A.C. represents and unifies all the colleges. The members of the Council are elected annually. There are twenty-six representatives and the presidents of the leading organization in each college.

The diversity of activities controlled by the Council is illustrated by the number of different organizations that it controls. Among these are the Rooters' Club, the Students' Court, and the Literary and Debates Committee. In conjunction with the Women Students' Administrative Council it also supervises the publication of "The Varsity," "Torontensis," "The Students' Hand Book," etc.

The Students' Court is the Standing Judicial Committee of the Council. The Court consists of the President, elected by the S.A.C., Presidents of Engineering and Medical Societies, the Dental Parliament, U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, the Mens Council of Victoria, with the senior undergraduate representative of each faculty and college not above mentioned, and the President of the S.A.C.

VIC. DRAMATIC CLUB TO STAGE THREE PLAYS

Presentation on Wednesday Night with Caste That Includes Many Stars

On the evening of Nov. 23, Vic. Dramatic Club will stage in Burwash Hall three one-act plays. The production of these performances is later than anticipated due to the "Great Plague," which necessarily postponed all rehearsals.

All the plays are particularly well cast. In fact, Wednesday night will bring into prominence more new stars in Vic. dramatics from the first as well as other years, while many other bright lights of the society such as "Si" Birge will be seen in advantageous roles.

The evening's programme consists of three plays, "Sir David Wears a Crown," a one-act play cast from the first year and directed by "Rome" McCulloch; "The Deserters," by Lascelles Abercrombie, written in poetry and of quite unusual interest, to be directed by Alma Wales and "Buzz" Daily, and a play cast largely from the fourth year—A. A. Milne's "Murrel Flummery," directed by Kathleen Christie.

PROFESSOR DALE LECTURES ON VERGIL'S POEMS

Not An "Achilles" but Rather an "Odysseus" Chosen as Hero by Vergil

TRANSCENDANT SUBJECT

Four Distinct Purposes for the Writing of the Aeneid
Are Outlined

"In Aeneas Vergil has portrayed not a man of the Homeric age only, but a man who might stand well in the estimation, and have a value to men and women of his own age," said Prof. Dale in his lecture on Vergil, delivered in University College as one of the series of lectures being delivered on the world's poetry.

Vergil, writing for a people who had just passed through the horrors of civil war, and who were wondering if there were any meaning in life and anything for which to live except money and pleasure, made his hero not an "Achilles" but rather an "Odysseus"—a man who suffered through war rather than rejoiced in it.

Of the four purposes for which Vergil wrote the Aeneid—to glorify Roman grandeur and achievements, past, present and future—to create for Rome an epic after the style of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, but having Roman ideals and traditions—to foster religion in an age when the ancient religion and tradition were breaking down—and lastly to sum up all that was greatest and best in his predecessors, Prof. Dale stressed the religious aspect particularly. It was not as a theologian with a dogmatic system that Vergil wrote, but as one with the traditions of morality. The Aeneid was not without gods because Vergil had no desire to report the common beliefs of common people.

S.M.C. French Club Meets on Friday, November 25th

The Senior division of St. Michael's College French Club will hold its inaugural meeting on Friday, November 25th, in the College Library. Circling Dancers Rival Spectrum's Splendour Depicting Whole World

More brilliant than the seven colours of the rainbow, more gorgeous than the rays of a tropical sunset, a veritable kaleidoscope of entrancing and bewildering colour, such was last Friday's Hart House Masquerade. From the lowly ape to the lordly King Richard, the awkward rustic to the swirling dervish, pirates, Indians, soldiers, priests, clowns, tango dancers, pseudo cops, ad infinitum.

The Reading Room, decorated in the contrasting Tricolour of Queen's University, was not to be outdone by the crimson and white of old McGill in the East Common Room, while the blue and white, intermingled with various faculty colours, dominated the Big Gym. In the Little Gym silence reigned supreme under the pop-eyed lanterns, broken only now and again by some insidious giggle from the many lounges, scarcely visible in the subdued light.

The height of interest for the evening was the Grand March held in the Big Gym. Here the contestants for

VARSITY PROFESSORS WRITE MANY BOOKS

Impression Is That Writing Completes Literary

LISTS FOR 1926 AND 1927

University professors have a habit of writing books. Almost inevitably the urge crops up at some time or other during the professional career, and a book is the outcome. Indeed the general impression is that no such career would be complete without at least one literary milestone.

The staff of the University of Toronto have always responded to the urge. The following are some of the works which they produced during 1926:

Common Procedures in Paediatrics, by Alan Brown and F. F. Tisdale. This Canada of Ours, by C. N. Cochrane and W. S. Wallace.

Ice Ages, Recent and Ancient, by A. P. Coleman. Henry James, Man and Author, by Pelham Edgar.

The United States as a Neighbour, by Sir Robert Falconer.

Economics of Transportation, by W. T. Jackman.

Lord Elgin, by W. P. M. Kennedy. Studies of Student Life, by W. J. Loudon.

The Dictionary of Canadian Biography, by W. S. Wallace.

The Canadian Manor and Its Seigneurs (new ed.), by G. M. Wrong. Faust, done into English verse, by W. H. Van der Smitten.

The Modern State, by R. M. MacIver.

Although the data for 1927 is not yet available, we learned that the following books appeared:

Life of Doughty, by B. Fairley. Makers of Nineteenth Century Europe, by R. Flenley.

History of the University of Toronto, by W. S. Wallace.

History of Clarke and Darlington Townships, by J. Squair.

Ontario Ancient History, by N. W. DeWitt.

Destructive Criticism and Education

RESULT CLOSE

Judges Give Decision To Negative

"Our present system of education is the subject of more destructive criticism than any other institution," stated Miss Mary Winspear, Varsity debater, and leader of the affirmative in the intercollegiate debate with Queen's, held last evening in Trinity College. "This House is of the opinion that the present system of education affords adequate preparation for modern life," was the subject under discussion, supported by the Varsity debaters and opposed by those from Queen's. The question, in Miss Winspear's opinion, was whether or not our educational system gave that keenness of mind, strength of body and steadfastness of spirit that was necessary to meet the five-fold requirements of modern life, as found in the spiritual, civic, cultural, economic and physical spheres.

Concerning the civic phase of life, the child was early taught that he must not throw banana peelings on the sidewalk for fear of impeding the lives and dignity of his fellow citizens. Although he received his readers free of charge, yet he quickly learned that through the taxes his father paid for them; and they must be cherished as part of the property of the state. The world good will day, the day upon which the eyes of the children were turned outward and saw that others in other lands have similar thoughts and habits, played an important part in forming the minds of future generations to the ideal of world peace. Through this movement the little stranger from alien lands became the subject of interest and curiosity at the schools and an added stimulus was given to geography. The reduction in working hours has resulted in an increase in the amount of leisure time of the workers who do not know how to use these moments to the best advantage. The child must be taught to use this spare time to his own cultural advantage. Despite the cosmopolitan character of our country there was but little illiteracy.

Miss Erma Beach, from Queen's, and leader of the opposition, emphasized the fact that among the demands of modern life, that of public

DEPARTMENT OF PHYSICS WILL HOLD A SEMINAR

Consideration of Special Subjects Will Take Place on Nov. 22

The Department of Physics will hold a Seminar on Thursday, November 24, 1927, at 4.15 in Room 32. The following subjects will be considered:

"Recent Papers on Absorption of Radiation and Dissociation." Franck, Huhn & Rollefson, Zeits.f. Physik, 43, 3-4, 1927. Professor J. C. McLennan.

"A Continuous Current Generator Without Collector or Rubbing Contact of Any Kind." Corbino and Trabacchi, Nuovo Cimento, Vol. IX, Jan-Feb, 1925. Professor H. A. McTaggart.

"Union of Helium with Mercury." J. J. Manlye, Phil. Mag. Nov. 1927. Dr. A. B. McLaugh.

"On the Surface Tension of Rock Salt." G. V. Antonoff, Phil. Mag. Oct. 1927. Mr. R. J. Monkman.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Unanimous Approval of Masque

"The Varsity" has decided to inaugurate a new department, to be known as "Diogenes." Each day a reporter will stop five undergraduates and ask a question having a bearing on current matters of interest.

To-day's question is: "Do you believe that there should be a Hart House Masquerade, and why?"

Mr. Sidney Howard, U.C., II E. and H.—"Certainly, there should be a Masquerade. It is the most widely known social event of the season. Witness the demand for tickets. It is self-supporting and a powerful force for unity within the University. And what would the Camera Club do—and Child's—if it were abolished?"

Mr. R. K. Ker, Knox, II year S.P.S.—"I see the Masquerade as an institution; it is a premier social event in the city, and as such it enjoys a deserved prestige. Despite the objections of the perhaps over-pious, the Masquerade affords an opportunity for the artistic penchant."

Down in the Anatomy Building, Mr. Wilf. Brennan, II year Meds, dropped the skeleton he was playing with—"The Masquerade is as much a part of the social activities of the University as Convocation is of the official activities. A University education should include the social side,"—and so back to the bones.

Mr. George Power, IV year Classics, St. Mike's—"While a thriving social life in the University is desirable, perhaps the ordinary students' existence is a bit too heavy socially. It is a question whether the social side is not overdone. However, the Masquerade itself has justified its existence.

Mr. "Mike" Ferbur, II year S.P.S.—"Yes, I believe the Masquerade should continue at all cost. I think it is more valuable than ten smaller dances. Were the Masquerade the only social function in the University, the programme would still be rich."

THE S.A.C. SHOULD MAINTAIN ITS STAND

When the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council followed the advice of the Advisory Board of Student Publications and passed a resolution to the effect that no quotations be permitted in this year's Torontonensis, it was felt by the majority of those closely in touch with undergraduate activities throughout the University that the value of the Year Book has been increased one hundred per cent. But since that time certain bodies in the University have, as anticipated, declared themselves to be thoroughly antagonistic to the proposed change.

Just why custom should consider quotations as part of a biography is difficult to understand. Certainly the majority of them were never written to, or for, the persons appropriating them, and many of them have not only been inapt but also inane. They have often been selected by a friend in a hurried moment without due thought as to whether they were applicable or not, and at times their inference has been most ludicrous. And their chief excuse lies in the fact that, for those who have nothing to say for themselves, Tennyson, Wordsworth or Shakespeare have something that may be taken to be said for them.

For those who failed to stand out in student activities while at the University, a blank space following a name may fail to look impressive to "the folks back home." But a thousand times more impressive it be than any obvious publication of that fact by a mass of empty words. Whether it be dancing, or studying, or debating, or supporting some organization, the majority of us have had some interest in University life, and ample provision has been made this year for the statement of that interest. And it is not hard to appreciate that such a statement would be sought for and appreciated more by our children than the brazen statement that "They love me as a sunbeam."

SING-SONGS FOR WOMEN

Although there is a great number of college organizations, there are, for women students, relatively few opportunities for Interfaculty meetings, and of these few, none provide scope for musical interest or ability. The only Interfaculty organization which did offer such opportunity, the Stringed Instrument Club, seems to have perished, though whether its decease is from lack of interest or other causes one cannot say.

The fact that in the University of Toronto there is only one musical organization, and that open to members of one faculty, seems to us extraordinary. The men, however, have been at some pains to remedy this situation, and besides the privileges of Friday Afternoon Recitals and Sunday Evening Musicals which they enjoy, they have created for themselves opportunities for the exercise of their talents in the frequent noon sing-songs and songsters which are held in Hart House.

Though Victoria College women hold occasional sing-songs, yet there are no such gatherings for the women of the University as a whole. We are assured, however, that this is not through lack of interest in them. Several women on the Staff have expressed their approval of Interfaculty sing-songs, and many prominent undergraduates are strongly in favour of the idea.

In view of these circumstances, we should like to see an attempt made to arrange for women of all faculties to meet together for singing. We are convinced that if such an attempt were made, the work caused by it for the few would be fully justified by the interest and co-operation of the many.

Student Verse

THE NORTH STAR (Villanelle)

O stately, silent, northern star,
You seem too cold, too ghostly white!
Have you been chilled by death afar?

That Dipper sure must think you are
The unpunged source of delight,
O stately, silent, northern star.

If your concurring has no par,
Why taint a joy with fits of fright?
Have you been chilled by death afar?

No weakening face, no salient scar
Has interrupted centuries' flight,
O stately, silent, northern star.

But stay! There's something quite bizarre
Which captivates the eye to-night.
Have you been chilled by death afar?

Your light, which space still lists to bar,
Takes forty years to reach our sight.
O stately, silent, northern star,
Have you been chilled by death afar?

A PLATITUDE

The day is fading in the west
And night is coming on,
So number it among the rest
That were, and now are gone.

O it was full, and happy too,
And though the hours flew fast,
I never guessed I wandered through
O dream that would not last.

But what is gone will not return,
And what is here won't stay—Strange that should be so hard to learn
Which is so plain to say.

THE TOREADOR WAVES HIS CAPE

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Surely the maledictions of paranoics such as certain pseudo-learned contributors to this column concerning the imagined depravity, licentiousness, and total disregard for the traditions, conventions, and precepts of this University cannot be disregarded with the impunity evidenced by the total lack of refutation apparent in your apathetic contributors. With this in mind we can now proceed with the discussion of the rapid vapourings of this voluminous nondescript.

To begin with, this would-be saviour of the undergraduate attempts to give himself an air of pedagogy by using such words as "Fröhllichkeit" and "shibboleth," and with glib references to such great minds as those of Pindar, Voltaire, and Thales and by serenely taking unto himself the nom de plume Postumus, which is quite belied by the mediocre and puerile trend of his letter. This attitude is typical of a fraternity found in every centre of higher learning.

Postumus would have us believe that the commercial world is peopled by a horde of graduates who have wasted four years of their youth in petty and inconsequential escapades under the guise of learning, of which the illusion is strengthened by the use of examinations which your hypercrite would have us believe were as easily disposed of as the demagogues from the Athenian Acropolis. He would picture the ideal student as a wan-featured, anaemic devotee of Minerva who has dedicated his existence to the pursuit of culture as typified by Hellenic civilization and Faddist philosophy, to the exclusion of all pursuits which would savour of the virile or altruistic. He further adds to the absurdity of his idea by bemoaning the fact that the student does not engage in such mental tasks as "janitor work and window washing." In direct refutation of this idea, we advance the fact that a large percentage of those attending university are earning their own way, by

We submit, in spite of Mark Twain and others, that puns are not quite so low as generally made out. Take the example of the two lads from Burwash, who, at the risk of being instantly struck by theological lightning and made to answer telephones for two weeks, took the afternoon off from meditation and prayer and went to the Riverdale Zoological Gardens. Upon viewing the prospect of the Himalayan Jumping Goat, the one said to the other: "That goat is a stronger butter than your mother uses for cooking." Their parents have been sent for.

There is also on record the chap who said to his side-kick: "Did you know that the Hart House Tuck Shop is a Kosher store?" In amazement, his alter ego answered "No." "Well," he resumed, "I bought a sweater there and the man said—'This will Kosher a dollar fifty.'"

Yesterday the Editor came into the office with that bluff manner of his, singing the "Hart House Rhapsodie" in seven raps by Postumus, and started off "Diogenes" on his career. We beg of you to be indulgent, and if an earnest soul comes up to ask personal questions, do not haul off and bat him one. Diogenes, as you are aware, went around looking for an honest man—and a question is therefore a compliment.

With the Theatres

BUSTER KEATON AT LOEW'S

In what is undoubtedly the greatest production of his film career, Buster Keaton made his debut in "College" at the Loew's Theatre last evening. The sad-faced contortionist of laugh-producing antics attempted to disprove that old proverb about the leopard changing his spots. And he did!

Ronald is a first-class scholar, who simply detests sports. But he turns, and, because of a winsome little freshette, he takes up athletics. And how!

The role of the fair co-ed is excellently filled by Anne Cornwall, and that of the college dean is taken by Snitz Edwards.

On the whole, the picture is of a rather nice type, providing lots of wholesome fun; but it tends to exaggerate (as is the prevalent custom in college productions) the frivolous part of college life.

And, to complete a college programme, we have offered us a really rare treat—none less than the celebrated Harvard Collegians. Their performance must certainly have been appreciated, to judge from the continuous rounds of applause which met every one of their selections.

DENTS. DEFEAT ST. MIKE'S TO MEET VIC. IN MULOCK FINAL

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Intercollegiate hockey situation is finally cleared up for this year at least. There has been considerable talk of an International Intercollegiate series, but this was definitely spiked yesterday when a wire was received from McGill to the effect that the American colleges would not be found in the series this season. The wire from the "Daily" goes on to say that Princeton, Williams, Yale, and Dartmouth are all favourable to the idea of an International series and may be found in a league next year with the Colleges on this side of the line. It is to be hoped that the powers that be can arrange matters satisfactorily, as a series such as proposed would attract a great deal of interest.

Despite the fact that the Squash courts are not in the best ventilated section of Hart House, the reservations are usually pretty well filled up a day or so in advance, both the faculty and undergraduates indulging in this favourite pastime of H.R.H. At present the Interfaculty series is being arranged, with probably the grads and faculty adding interest to the struggle. It is expected that this series will get under way around the first of December.

The Arts cup games this season have been remarkably close, and in the four semi-final games played, only four goals were scored. An average of one goal a game is very tight soccer, and the final tilt this week between Knox and Victoria should prove a good game—providing the snow stays away.

The other fall Interfaculty sport is nearing completion also, and the Dents-Victoria struggle for the Mulock Cup on Friday should be a real game. It is generally conceded that Victoria has the stronger and heavier wing line, which should do a lot of plunging, but Dents have a snappy back division which has given a good account of itself up to date. Doubtless Vic and Dent rooters will be out in full force.

Ground hockey is one sport which has been given the go-by in our University. Apparently Queen's have a rousing inter-year series which peps the boys up in the Limestone City. The nearest we ever get to that game is the inter-house "shiny" battles conducted in the wee sma' hours of the morning.

DENTALS NOW ENTER MULOCK CUP FINAL AGAINST VICTORIA

Defeat St. Michael's 11—0 in Semi-finals at Stadium Yesterday

WINNERS' BACK-FIELD BEST

Moore and Hudson Star for Dents, Regan, McIsaac and Garry for Saints

Dents defeated St. Mike's by a score of 11 to 0 in the Mulock Cup semi-final at the Stadium yesterday afternoon and thus earned the right to meet Victoria in the final for the championship. The Dental outfit did not have as big a margin as the score shows, and their touch came in the last few minutes of play when St. Mike's did not have a chance to overcome the early lead.

The game was comparatively even for the first half, and any edge the Dents had was in their kicking and running back punts. Their great edge over St. Mike's throughout the whole game was in the backfield. The Bay Street boys had a little the best of the play on the line, and led by McGarry plunged for many good gains. But the Dent halves overcame this and ran up a score.

Moore, who called the signals and then went back for the kicks, was the most effective man on the field. He caught faultlessly and was a flash in the open field. He and Hudson, who also starred on the rearguard, were mainly responsible for Dents' victory. Time after time they broke away and made twenty and even forty yard gains.

The Dental outides also performed well and gave St. Mike's halves little chance to break away. Regan and McIsaac on the half line and McGarry at quarter were the best of the Saints' team.

Dents scored their first point in the first quarter on a kick to the dead-line after they had secured 25 yards out on a fumble. They had a chance for a touch in the second quarter when they got possession only ten yards out, but they could not get over the line and an onside went into touch-in-goal for a single.

The drill sergeants got two more single points in the third quarter on a deadline and a rouge. They had another chance as the period ended for a try when they got the ball within ten yards of the line after a successful onside. On the first down on the last quarter they got a single point.

They added another rouge, making it 6—0. Hudson grabbed a St. Mike's onside kick and took the play to the 30-yard line. A break through the line brought 25 more yards, and Moore went over for a touch on the first down.

Line-ups:
St. Mike's: Flying wing, Clarke; halves, Regan, McIsaac, and Radley; snap, Burns; quarter, McGarry; insides, Warren and Riley; middles, Crusoe and Flick; outsides, Parabocki and Clarke; subs, Patterson, Fawcett, Prado, Hilborn, Flick, Sammon, French, Carter and Shannon.

Dents: Flying wing, Brown; halves, Hudson, Sinclair and Layter; snap, Lipson; quarter, Moore; insides, Grant and McDougal; middles, Keenan and Lappin; outsides, Hotton and Rowlands; subs, Marrit, Shaver,

QUALITY STREET—EMPIRE

At last the Empire Company have chosen a really fine play and shown how well they can act when the merits of good drama made demands on their ability. Hitherto the Empire Company have been only a little more meticulous than the Victorians in their choice of plays, and confining their efforts to the popular rather than the permanent type of drama. But "Quality Street" is the first step in a noble direction, mayhap Shaw will be the last.

"Quality Street" is a superb and delightful play by that master of whimsical fancy, Sir James M. Barrie. The play opens in the year 1813 in a sleepy old English town where two maiden ladies live on Quality Street, amid inquisitive and decorative neighbours, who draw aside the window curtains every time that the dashing Valentine Brown calls on Miss Phoebe and Miss Susan. It is anticipated that Mr. Brown will propose to Miss Phoebe, but he calls for the last time to say that he has enlisted to keep Quality Street safe from the Corsican Ogre. Poor Miss Phoebe dons a spinster's cap, teaches school, and it is ten years before Valentine Brown returns to Quality Street.

Quite by accident he finds Miss Phoebe without her cap, and in her long-treasured white dress that was to grace the wedding of ten years ago Miss Phoebe masquerades as her own niece and is the belle of the military balls. After much delightful comedy, the dashing Captain Brown reveals his affection for Miss Phoebe, and after shepherding the unwelcome niece of illusion out of Quality Street, he proposes and is accepted.

As Miss Phoebe and Miss Susan, Edith Taliaferro and Ann Carew were perfect, and Robert Leslie was manly and dignified as Captain Brown. Nice bits of acting were contributed by Baker Jameson as Ensign Blades, and Frank Camp as Major Linkwater. After seeing a play as thoroughly pleasing as "Quality Street" one wonders why there are so few like it, and perhaps the real answer is that there are very few James M. Barries, in fact only one, and it is a great pity that he has so long ceased to make English drama what it should really be.

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED—VICTORIA THEATRE

The Malcolm Fasset Players are offering this week a somewhat strong drama based on one of Kipling's greatest novels, "The Light That Failed." Mr. Fasset, the promising young artist whose "light fails," takes his heavy part rather well, while Hal Thompson (the stout Creature) and Viola Roache as the housekeeper, provide just levity to relieve an almost Shavian atmosphere.

Admittedly the first two acts are rather quiet, providing some forced humour and a nice introduction to the play proper, which has a somewhat quicker action. The feeling of imminent tragedy is felt throughout and the boisterous off-stage hilarity just at the moment complete darkness envelops the artist, is a fine and effective piece of work.

Bessie Broke (Margaret Doty), the abandoned and recovered street waif, is very effective, making the best of her parts. Mr. Godfrey and Misses Sinnott and Gilmore also took leading parts.

Northerners Beat East House by One Point in Fast Game

In a stirring gridiron struggle in the dim early morning light yesterday, North House trod on their bitter rivals from East House. When the mud was cleaned off at the finish it was found that the Northerners had scored one more point than the losers, making it just 1—0. A good time was had by all.

VIC. GIRLS DEFEAT U.C. BY OVERCOMING LEAD

Brilliant Pitcher Saves Game for Winners Who Now Lead Group

The most thrilling baseball game of the season was played on Monday afternoon at Grace Church when Vic won against U.C. by a score of 12—11. Up to the fifth inning U.C. maintained the lead. The score was tied on the sixth, when the suspense was at its height. Vic broke the tie in the seventh with one run, and in the last half of the innings O.C. put forth a supreme effort, but owing mostly to the brilliant pitching of Kay Ferguson they were unable to make a run. On the whole it was a keen game, although at times the playing in the field was a little weak.

Line-up:
U.C.: Noble, Dickson, Blackwell, Dale, McKinley, Hiltchie, Batchelor, Essery, Hogg.
Vic.: Dean, Lindsay, Ferguson, Service, Snyder, Tilley, Quance, Hilliard, Jarrett.

SENIOR VICTORIA WIN THEIR FIRST GAME BY BEATING JR. U.C.

Vic. Girls Run Up Score Fast But U.C. Comes Back Strongly in Second Half

NEW PLAY SUCCESSFUL

Score 47—12 Not Indicative of Close Character of Game

The women's Interfaculty basketball series started with a bang yesterday afternoon, when Senior Victoria defeated Junior U.C. by a score of 47 to 12. From the first toss-up the game was played with an energy and vim surprising in the fair sex. Marian Forward, side centre for Vic, showed the excellence of the new rule allowing side centres to shoot, by scoring the first two baskets.

From then on Vic ran up the score rapidly so that at the end of the first half it stood 26 to 2. The U.C. girls played with an energy that was at times feverish, so that the more clock-like work of the senior team made it very hard for them. In spite of the big lead against them, the U.C. squad fought right on the bitter end. In the second half they scored five baskets, while Vic put in ten baskets and a free shot.

Vic introduced an amazing new play which was exceedingly successful. If the U.C. squads captured the ball under Vic basket, the forwards promptly deserted the field and the whole team formed a solid red wall at centre. If this game is a forecast of others to come, the series should be a very interesting and exciting one.

The line-ups of the two teams were as follows:

Vic: Forwards, Ede Buchanan, Jean Bateman; centres, Dot Ker, Marian Forward; guards, Al Muckle, Grace Keffler.

U.C.: Forwards, Beatrice Child, Jean Robertson; centres, Edith Peake, Hazel Bredin; guards, Marian Henderson, Phil Ferguson.

FAVOURS BIOGRAPHIES

Dear Sir:

It is the unchivalrous conduct towards the young ladies of the University by the S.A.C. and the absurd defence of that august body by Mr. Archer Baldwin in Friday's "Varsity" which arouses me to this outburst of words.

It seems to me, Mr. Editor, that when the S.A.C. find nothing else to do they turn to Torontonensis. By their latest action they have merely displayed that strain of mediocrity which is so common in democratic societies and in democratic governments. Verily John Stuart Mill had reason to fear for individuality when even the University threatens to make itself a standardized article. Standardization, sir, is the curse of modern society. It delights my heart when a man is courageous enough to wear an odd pair of trousers with his coat, and when a young lady is able to discover a quotation which she thinks suits her personality I regard that as a proof of her originality. For my part, I find the quotations the bright spot in the book—but the S.A.C. must have uniformity, and so the poetry which can never be standardized must go.

Coming from a college where so much talking is done, Mr. Baldwin is strangely intolerant, but, worse than that, he shows the influence of his surroundings by being ridiculous. Perhaps he imagines he is debating in the Trinity Literary Institute. As I understand it, he would have the young ladies write their biographies thus: "Mary Jane Jones, Smithville, attended Varsity-Queen's game and cheered voraciously, I, II, III; McGill-Varsity debate, II; went to U.C. Follies, III; Hart House Masquerade, IV."

As for me, Mr. Editor, I prefer to have the young ladies describe themselves as "little rays of sunshine fitting through life"—many of them are; whereas as spectators at rugby games, debates, etc., they are often uncertain quantities in their appreciation. The truth of the matter is—if I could find a quotation I would use one myself—if the S.A.C. would let me and I had sufficient originality to select one.

Yours for quotations,
Reginald N. Soward,
IV U.C.

Concerning Honolulu, Sir Arthur upheld the view that it was an appropriate place for the holding of a conference of the character of the institute of Pacific relations. VISITORS FROM FRANCE TO EXAMINE HART HOUSE

Their Purpose is to Secure Information for Cite University in Paris

Towards the latter part of this week two distinguished French gentlemen will visit the University in general, and Hart House in particular. These gentlemen are Monsieur A. Desclos, who is the assistant director of the National Bureau of Universities, and Senator Honnorat of Paris.

Monsieur Desclos and Senator Honnorat have been visiting some of the universities of the United States, paying particular attention to the student club houses. The purpose of this investigation is to secure information and ideas which might be of service to the Cité University in Paris. It will be remembered that the English section of this University was opened by the Prince of Wales last year. It is expected that a study of Hart House will reward these gentlemen with some valuable ideas.

oriental," he said, and called attention to the fact that it has been called "the crossroads of the Pacific."

speaking was a very consistent one. The lecture system in vogue in modern universities gave no opportunity for training in oratory, as it "destroys initiative and stifles thought." This was not the fault of the lecturer but of the system of appointments and promotions which estimated his ability not as a teacher but as a research explorer.

Although modern life demanded individuality and imagination, the present system of education did not fulfil this need, as its aim was mass production. Just as the factory prided itself on the number of products and by-products produced, so the leaders take pride in the number of subjects taught, emulating Heinz fifty-seven varieties.

Among the defects of our educational system was the lack of fundamental applications of health and cleanliness, defects more prevalent in the rural districts due to inadequate medical examination. To play the game was instinctive in every child, and there should be a fuller appreciation on the part of educational authorities to supervise and control games.

Miss Beach contended that there was little in our present system to inculcate love of art as the classes were large and no individual attention was given to those who might be geniuses. In the field of music, even university graduates could not distinguish between Yankee Doodle and the Dooology. Music was a mind trainer, and its advantages as equipment for post-school life must not be overlooked.

Miss Timima Litner, second speaker for the affirmative, opened her speech with a refutation of some of the remarks made by the speaker for the negative, after which Miss Litner declared that the greatest problem in modern life was one of finances and whether our educational system realized this and the attempts to meet it. This was provided for by the system of vocational schools in which instruction was given in technical, vocational and commercial subjects. The slogan "Back to the land" was the aim of the agricultural schools which attempted to stem the influx to the cities. Night vocational and commercial schools looked after those adults who desired further education but whose daytime hours were filled.

The question of what our system of education was doing to help a man find his life work was dealt with by Miss Jean Royce, second speaker for the negative. There were many misfits wearing out their lives in jobs they disliked, on account of bread and butter differences. The modern world several of which Mr. Stewart discussed as to subject, colour depth and tone. He contrasted the two self-portraits, one of early youth, the other of mature manhood.

The work of Claude Lorrain was illustrated briefly, followed by several pictures from the Spanish school. The works of Velasquez, Spanish, with slight Italian influence, are in many cases difficult to distinguish. An eminent English critic said once that Velasquez's paintings may be divided into two classes, "the silver ones and the brown ones, but the brown ones are not his." His best pictures are those in silver tones, and they alone are recognized as "his."

ranked the professional man higher in the social scale than the day labourer, and the fault lay in the system of education, the basis of such judgment. That our system affords an inadequate preparation for one's life work was shown in the case of the medical student, practising in a rural district, having no laboratory equipment and unable to cope with the emergency. The part of education was to develop the public taste and train its mind to fine things. Education has fallen down in this respect, as the people prefer vaudeville to drama and cheap novels to good literature.

At the conclusion of the speeches, the speaker, Miss Rhoda Howe, called upon the judges to give their decision, which rested in favour of the negative. Upon a vote of the House, the affirmative won by a majority of fourteen.

HAVE WE A NATIONAL LITERATURE? U.C. LIT IS NOT UNANIMOUS

Miss Rhoda Howe Gives Paper on Some Canadian Authors at Meeting

HEATED DISCUSSION

"Jalna" and "Wild Geese" Come in for Much Favourable and Adverse Criticism

"Is there a Canadian literature?" was the much discussed question with which Miss Rhoda Howe began an unusually interesting paper on "Mazo de la Roche and other Canadian authors," given at the meeting of University College Women's Literary Society held last evening. Miss Howe admitted that it was very difficult to define any literature as being distinctly Canadian where not one but many civilizations were represented. The fact that there was a larger and more prosperous country close to us had a tendency to intimidate and destroy enthusiasm. However, it was felt that there was a type of nature distinctive to this country which had already been interpreted in art by the Group of Seven and that Martha Ostenso and Mazo de la Roche were forerunners of a similar movement in literature.

A comprehensive outline was given of Canadian writers and their work from John Richardson to Nellie McClung and Peter MacArthur, most of whose work was found distinctly mediocre and of no significance as Canadian literature. However, the poets, including Bliss Carman, Wilson MacDonald, and especially Archibald Lampman, did show some indication of what was to come later in "Jalna" and "Wild Geese." In prose this new impulse in Canadian literature could be traced in the work of Marjorie Pickthall and Louis Hemon, where might be found a haunting picture of natural phenomena and the interweaving of nature with human life.

Martha Ostenso's "Wild Geese" and Mazo de la Roche's "Jalna" were dealt with in detail. The conclusion arrived at was that nature was not the controlling influence in "Jalna" as in "Wild Geese," but rather the

Union Theological College Is Knox College in United Church

Editor Does Not Choose Make Formal Statement

In reference to the new ruling of the Students' Administrative Council barring quotations from Torontonians this year, the editor, W. E. Shute, when interviewed yesterday, was not prepared to make any formal statement to the press as to the reasons for the actions of the Council.

Presbyterians Retain Name of Knox

Union Theological College, although it bears a new name, has in reality a continuous history extending over eighty years. As a proof of this, the College officials state that over eighty per cent. of the students and graduates of Knox College are connected with Union Theological College. The College is, in fact, Knox College, continuing in the United Church.

Although the property, name and charter of Knox College were transferred to the continuing Presbyterians, the essential college the civil power did not touch. As an organ by which the church trains its young men for the ministry and promotes theological learning, Union Theological College is a continuation of Knox College. On June 10, 1925, all the professors and lecturers, eighty per cent. of the students and approximately eighty per cent. of the graduates and alumni passed into the United Church.

In spite of the fact that it is now under the control of the United Church, the College will continue to have a separate identity.

For the future Union Theological College will be very closely associated with Victoria College. In 1922 a plan of co-operation between Knox College and the Faculty of Theology of Victoria University was arranged by which students of each college were admitted to lectures and library privileges in the other, and by which the duplication of lectures was reduced. Each College remained an independent institution with its own governing body, its own staff of instructors and its roll of students subject to its discipline. Each College had its own curriculum of study framed to meet the requirements of the Church to which it belonged. The work was carried on in two buildings.

A further step was taken in 1925. While the two Colleges remained distinct in name, the curricula were made one and the staff worked together as one body.

A third step was taken in 1927. The students are to be housed together and share a common life in buildings adjoining Victoria College. There will be one registration, so that no student will think of himself as of one College or the other. The prizes and scholarships offered by both will be open to all. Internal arrangements for both Colleges are entrusted to a Commission consisting of the professors.

Cam Mabey Elected Track Club President

The Track Club held its annual dinner Tuesday night for the Inter-collegiate champions. After an excellent repast the incoming executives gave short addresses.

Mr. Lou Siebert, the new honorary president, presented his special prize to Johnny Fitzpatrick for breaking the 100 yards record in the last Inter-faculty meet.

Mr. Halbus, the coach, urged every man to work hard to try to make the Olympic team. He advised that a start be made immediately. He stated that at least two men were sure of places and he saw no reason why at least five men shouldn't make the team. After the new track captain, Cam Mabey, was elected, the club dispersed.

"MONDAY BLUES" IS HANG OVER FROM WEEK-END Psychological Tests Show Human Body Needs "Warming Up"

THURSDAY BEST DAY

Difference Due to Three Factors, Says MacPhee

"Blue Monday" is a psychological fact. The matter has been thoroughly investigated, but the problem is seriously complicated by the important contributing factor of overtime, type of work, season of the year, personal interest in the work, etc. Investigations are unanimous in finding Monday a least effective day in work. This is found to be true both when output is measured and in more simple tests used in the psychological laboratories. Huntington, who plotted a piece-work curve, showed that there was a difference of 20% between the production on Monday and on the peak day, Thursday.

In the opinion of Professor E. D. MacPhee, of the Department of Psychology, this difference may be due to several factors.

First—to a certain physiological process which requires a sort of "warming up" in order to achieve the greatest efficiency.

Secondly—to a careless habit which permits of a general showing up in routine, and a laxity in discipline after the week-end.

Thirdly—to the element of resistance which occurs in most people to the change from play to work, a condition under which each one does what he wishes, changed for one in which he must do a limited and prescribed group of activities.

Professor MacPhee said, "The modern tendency to use Sunday as a day of recreation, as well as the general imposition by modern industry of a routine system upon individuals who were not constructed in order to comply with its demands is responsible for the existence of 'Blue Monday'."

DR. CURRY WILL LEAD DISCUSSION AT TRINITY

Has Had Wide Experience in Leading Student Conferences in U.S.

Students who do not attend Dr. Curry's special Group Discussion Course in "Life Problems in the light of the Teaching of Jesus," will be sorry for it afterwards. He is described by the Christian Century as "probably the most successful interpreter of the Bible appearing in Student Conferences in America." He is the author of "Facing Student Problems," "Jesus and His Cause," and other discussion courses. Students who have heard him have found him not only a keen thinker and an extraordinarily able leader, but a delightful personality as well. An alumnus who spent two days in one of his groups said: "Those two days were worth more than any single course during my whole four years at College."

During the past four years Dr. Curry has met and led in discussion groups thousands of students throughout the United States, Canada and engineers for reconstruction of the river bed above the Horseshoe Falls, whereby the constant rapid erosion at the centre of that cataract might be lessened, and also there might be a greater use than ever of the water.

COMPARATIVE ILLITERACY EXISTS AMONG UNIVERSITY STUDENTS?

Interfaculty Swimmers Meet December 3rd

The annual Interfaculty swimming meet will be held in Hart House tank Saturday, December 3rd, at 8 p.m. Managers of Inter-faculty teams should hand in their entries to Mr. W. Winterburn before noon on Saturday, Nov. 26. The order of events will be published in a few days.

M. AND E. CLUB HOLD NEW PLAN MEETING

Workers' Problems Discussed, Paper on Co-operation Read by George B. Smith

PROF. ALCUT SPEAKS

"Workers' Problems" was the subject of the first meeting of the M. and E. Club, under the new plan whereby there are two sections, the Mechanicals and the Electricals, held last night in Hart House.

Professor Alcut very ably defined the word "Club" in opening, and developed it by carefully defined stages from the cave man's club by means of which he obtained and subdued a wife, to the present day club, for the protection of the poor hen-pecked husband.

Mr. Caldwell, the chairman of the Mechanical section, then introduced George B. Smith, who delivered a paper on "Co-operation in Industry."

In course of the lecture it was pointed out that in the past it has been felt that if workers secured higher wages and better conditions they would be contented. But with this to-day the unrest has not disappeared. The root of the unrest is the straining of the spirit of man to be free.

It has taken nearly fifteen years of observation, experiment and thinking to discover the real meaning of industrial management. That it must be essentially co-operative and without co-operation it cannot exist.

The co-operative movement as it exists in various countries and the local characteristics of each were presented. The Co-operative Society was defined as an association for the purposes of joint trading, conducted on such terms that all who are prepared to assume the duties of membership share in the rewards in proportion to the degree in which they make use of their association.

The aims of co-partnership societies and many interesting illustrations of practical examples where these were put into successful operations were given in conclusion.

TRINITY SCIENCE CLUB HOLDS FOURTH MEETING

Mr. Turnbull Gives Paper, Power Development at Niagara Falls

The fourth regular meeting of the Trinity College Science Club was held last evening at Trinity House. After the business of the meeting, the president, Mr. Turnbull, gave a very interesting paper on the power development of Niagara Falls. He sketched briefly the history of the harnessing of Niagara from the first efforts of Chabert Joncaire, French fur trader, and stressed the more recent methods of utilizing the available power.

In concluding, the speaker described the plans of the government to

Prof. Davis Declares Spelling Psychological Impossibility For Some

HURRIED READING USELESS

More Proficient Can Spell and Punctuate After Four Years

The average university student is strangely deficient in the use of his own language, if the opinion of varied authorities who have commented on the subject are to be credited. The whole university fabric is being assailed on various grounds, but it seems as if those who claim that the undergraduates can hardly write fifty per cent. English have grounds for their complaints.

Last week at the High School Editors' Convention, the editor of a women's paper complained of the difficulty of getting women graduates who could observe the common rules of grammar and spelling such as the apostrophe in the boy's book.

Professors of English in our own University seem to feel that the standards of English are not what they should be.

"There is not exactly illiteracy among the students," remarked Professor H. J. Davis, M.A., of University College, "but there is a great deal of poor grammar and poor spelling, especially in the past two years. We have a lot of pure 'school work' to do in our English classes here, and we must do it. Students, though, do read and write a certain amount in their courses, and by the fourth year the better ones can spell and punctuate and write correct sentences."

"Of course," he continued, "there is the occasional person to whom the art of spelling is psychologically impossible, and it is true some people graduate from the University who never ought to have come at all. I think I might say, though, that the great majority of graduates who have taken English throughout the course are reasonably literate."

"Shakespeare uses a vocabulary of 15,000 words. Milton a vocabulary of 8,000. It has been estimated that the ordinary man uses a vocabulary of less than 4,000. I doubt if our ordinary Freshman or Sophomore has a vocabulary of more than 3,000 at his command," says Professor E. K. Broadus, of the University of AL.

DENTAL NOCTEM CUCKOO TAKES PLACE FRIDAY

Promises to Surpass All Previous Events of Its Kind in Every Department

Only three more days and the cold gray walls of Hart House will reach the sounds of laughter, music and of dancing feet. Earl Maynard and his Noctem Cuckoo Committee have the programme well under way and promises all an evening which will break all former records as a night of rare novelties, frivolities and dancing. To the senior it will be a night of joy together with sadness, for no more will he make gay in those halls as an undergraduate. To the freshmen it will be a new experience and something to look forward to in the coming years of his course.

So by all means make arrangements early, and come with all troubles cast aside and join in a real evening of enjoyment, as well as to pay homage to those who have done so much for Noctem Cuckoo in the past.

Tickets go on sale this afternoon at 75 cents.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Diverse Views on Co-ed's Courses

This is the second of the series of answers to the questions to be asked daily by "The Varsity" reporter on the campus. Readers are invited to submit questions of general interest to "The Varsity" to be used by "Diogenes."

To-day's question is: "Do you think that woman's place is in the home and that the only course at college suited to her is Domestic Science?"

D. M. Tanner, Dents II: "I certainly do not believe that girls must be confined to Domestic Science courses. A girl taking any other course will be just as fitted to take her place in the home as one taking a course in Domestic Science."

Phyllis Ferguson, II E. and H., U.C.: "No, I don't. I don't see why any course in Arts isn't as good as one in Domestic Science to fit her for life in the home. The modern woman desires a liberal education."

Alex. J. Stringer, II, U.C.: "Woman's position has changed in the last few years, and she has many other spheres in life. Domestic Science is perhaps a fine course for those who feel so inclined, but an Arts course has a more broadening influence in the life of the individual."

Marjorie Jordan, I year Household Economics, Vic.: "I think that woman's place is in the home. If she is going to take a course at the University I think that Domestic Science is the best one to take."

A. F. W. Plumtree, IV year Political Science, U.C.: "Certainly! Only yesterday I read of an unfortunate small republic which had been dominated by an entirely female government for several years. When such a situation arises here we may well sing, 'O Canada, our fathers' land—of old.'"

"Flappers who titivate their faces Unblushingly in public places."

Such as the U.C. rotunda, are an abomination to education. In Domestic Science, a course attended solely by women, I suppose they don't feel called upon to do that sort of thing. Good cooks are more necessary to human prosperity than good looks."

THE CANADIAN IN THE UNITED STATES

While many speakers and newspapers vehemently protest that Canadian youth shows no marked tendency to leave our country for that of our great neighbour to the south, it must be admitted that many undergraduates contemplate the United States as a field for their life's work to no small degree. Just as demand creates the supply, so do these United States offer certain inducements to the young Canadian that cannot be denied, nor whose appeal can be altogether offset.

With a large percentage of its population foreign born and lacking in advanced education, and often in moral value, the sturdy Canadian youth, coming from a country whose inhabitants are, by law, required to spend at least ten years in school, and who has had, as a rule, a fine degree of training between right and wrong, is eagerly sought for in many sections of the United States. The field there for mechanics, artisans, science men, bankers, accountants, and, in fact, all those with a specialized training, has long been recognized, but it remains to a writer in the October issue of McLean's Magazine to point out some vital information in this connection.

He says, in part: "A Canadian of English-speaking parentage who removes to the United States has a forty per cent. better chance of getting into the American 'Who's Who' than a native-born American." That is, English-speaking Canadians in the United States produce forty per cent. more great men per hundred thousand of their total numbers than do the native Americans. And, also, that they produce a far higher ratio of great men than any other non-American element, with the single exception of the Australian.

All of which may be highly flattering to the Canadian or Australian, but which also gives thought to further consideration and rumination. "The plain deduction," says the writer, "is that Canadians who remove from their birthland to the United States are on average a much higher type not merely than Americans but also than their fellow Canadians. And, therefore, that the American drift represents not merely a loss in numbers, but, what is far more serious, a very deplorable loss in quality."

The fact is that fortunes cannot be made in Canada with the rapidity, or ease with which they may be acquired in the United States, and the young man with a good education cannot altogether be blamed if he seeks to rise above the financial plane of his fellows in another country more rapidly than he can do here. While this is to be regretted, it must be recognized that there is not yet the available funds in Canada to recompense the chap who has spent years of study and much money in acquiring a degree on a competitive or commensurate basis. Nor is the average employer as appreciative of the highly trained men where, in proportion to population, there are so many.

Consider the matter as one will, the field in the United States does appear more open, and it is likely that it will so remain until Canada is flooded with capital and a greater wave of immigration, together with a more abundant usage of her own raw products in her own field.

A CREDIT TO THE UNIVERSITY

A list of recent publications by our own professors appeared in yesterday's issue. We cannot but pay tribute to the splendid contribution that graduates and professors of the University of Toronto are making in the literary world. The publications this year are too numerous to mention. They include works on every branch of science. Even the modern novel has not been neglected. History plays an important role, and Canada seems in a fair way to secure adequate treatment of her romantic and worthy past. It is only when Canadians themselves picture conditions in Canada that a true estimate of affairs is given to the public, especially to Britain and the United States.

Men and women connected with centres of learning and culture ought to be the best prepared to give facts to the public. The University of Toronto has always done her share in stimulating literary productions, and, according to this year's reports, she continues to add an important contribution to Canadian literature and to the literary world at large.

Art, Music and Drama

Sketch Room

Lovers of art entering the Sketch Room this week have been surprised and pleased by the different class of pictures now on display. Instead of the usual purely Canadian art we find an exhibition of water-colours, etchings, pencil and crayon drawings from English artists.

We are familiar with most of these artists through the English studio. They are: Rowley Smart, Alison Martin, Carter Preston, Frederick Carter, Charles Sharpe, Jessie Malcolm, Carl Thompson, George Harris, John Robinson, Mary Adshead, Barnett Freedman, Emmanuel Levy, Albert Liperzinski.

For this, one of the finest exhibitions of art ever held in the Sketch Room, we are indebted to Mr. Tyson Smith, the Liverpool sculptor, who arranged it. The group will be here for two or three weeks, including Sunday, Nov. 27th (Visitors' Day), after which they will be exhibited at the Grange.

These seventy pictures with their sombre skies and delicacy of tone are typically English and any other exhibitions of this class will always be welcome.

CHAMPUS CAT

Just when we were getting in a much-needed twenty-four hours' sleep, someone conceived the "Diogenes" stunt of asking people who are ordinarily quiet, silent and sensible to put their heart-felt feelings in print. Once a human being sees his own words in a print, it's all up with that human being. He joins a newspaper or a divinity college and "delivers his message" earnestly. Look at Bernard Shaw! Someone probably came up to him in 1880 and said:

"What do you think of the proverb 'Silence is golden'?"—and G.B.S. has been answering ever since.

C.C.

To-morrow Diogenes will sally out with his lantern, tub and reporter's note-book to ask one of the following:

"Which of the Deans is Postumus?"
"Why are Theatre Guilds?"
"Have you ever seen a Students' Christian Movement? Is it up or down?"
"Do you believe in Occultism or are you an honest Atheist?"
"How far can you go with Dr. Brebner without going farther than you want?"
"Do you like Mr. Martin?"

MORE RE BIOGRAPHIES

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In reference to yesterday's letter on the subject of Torontonensis biographies, it seems a pity that Mr. Baldwin should not have spent a moment in perusing the reasons why the women of University College objected to the form suggested, before he dismissed their protest as being grounded on neglect, lack of interest or vicious selfishness. Mr. Baldwin's ability as a literary critic is widened by his scathing comments on the efforts of his predecessors in Torontonensis. He does not, however, seem to consider repetition a literary crime as do the women of University College, who feel that as a large portion of the year book is already devoted to executives, clubs and activities, it seems a pity to recapitulate all this mass of detail in the biographies of the individuals. Surely the more cultural, the more human, side of college life is better revealed by a brief and apt quotation.

It is of course apparent that all the quotations will not attain a height of (Continued on page 3)

"What Price Glory," in our opinion, narrowly misses being a great picture. Nine years afterward, the war can form a magnificent setting for heroic comedy without the feeling of being too horribly near. The characters were well drawn, consistent and well played. There was a moral to it, the inhuman ghastliness of war, but unlike most morals, it did not kill the picture, for it was artistically brought in, almost as an undertone. There was real tragedy, real comedy in the grim sort such as men indulged in in the moment of death. But there were some flaws: Germans were depicted as inevitably throwing up their hands when attacked. One got the impression that the Allied forces consisted of the Americans and one old French officer, that the said Americans won every engagement, and that they rushed out into the trenches, fought a battle of a few hours and rushed back again to the billets. There was, perhaps, a trifle too much slapstick, a trifle too little plot; it was a good picture, but when we remember "The Four Horsemen," perhaps just a shade tawdry.

Victor McLaglen played "Captain Flagg," a very hard-boiled officer who had been in the Marines all his life and had obviously risen from the ranks—a courageous and true man at heart but by no means "an officer and a gentleman." Edmund Lowe was his life-long rival Top-Sergeant Quirt a Yankee smart-Alec. Dolores del Rio was a little French peasant girl. These parts were fairly difficult and well done. There was not a great deal of plot: just war: men dying and men "raising hell" back of the lines.

The organ in the Uptown can make a very realistic bugle sound: this was a great help.

With Jack Arthur, is a Maple Leaf baseball player, "Steamboat" Lucas, who is passing the long, dull winters by singing baritone. He is not too bad, but some of the voices are—well—fierce.

TIVOLI

"Les Miserables" is to our mind a very good adaptation of the Hugo novel considering the obvious difficulties in the way of anyone attempting to make the translation to the screen. Many people to-day refuse to sympathize with the kindly sentiment of the old bishop's character, but we have always thought it worth while to read through volumes of Hugo if only to get to the part where his grace, when Mde. Magloire has given him the lowdown on Jean Valjean, orders la belle Magloire to set another plate.

The parts were taken by French actors and were uniformly well done. Incidentally we might suggest that the sub-titles are too much, both in quantity and quality and that "My Rosary" need not always be played on the organ. (Continued on page 4)

VIC.-KNOX IN FIRST SOCCER FINAL ON FRONT CAMPUS TO-DAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Interest in swimming this year is fairly bubbling over, and to see Hart House tank any afternoon one would think that the ambition of every student was to be a marathon swimmer. The U.C. team has held the Fitzgerald Cup for a number of years. Their nearest competitors have been Meds and S.P.S., but we expect keener competition this year. U.C. have lost one of their outstanding swimmers, Fran Lorenzen, besides Ted Keast, their premier diver. Fran won both the 50 yards free style and the 100 yards breast stroke last year, making a new record in the last named event.

Johnny Goss of S.P.S. and Leo Latchford of U.C. provided the "thrillers" both last year and the year before in fighting out neck and neck in the free style events. Goss's fame as a swimmer has become widespread since he knocked off a few Canadian records last year in Intercollegiate swimming. He spent a healthy summer as swimming instructor somewhere up in the "sticks," so it should be a treat to watch him now.

Those of us who found time yesterday afternoon to drop in to the Stadium were rewarded by as exciting an exhibition of football as has been seen for some time. It was the Junior high school finals, and though the field was ankle deep in mud the boys certainly gave a thrilling exhibition. The games provided many of the thrills that are lacking in the average senior contest. And to the average spectator were more interesting than some Intercollegiate contests. But to the close student of the game it is readily seen that the popularity and thrills of these high school games comes not so much from the wonderful quality of the rugby played as from their uncertainty. In Senior rugby every play is worked out scientifically and timing plays a very important part. Besides in the Senior game a single fumble may cost a game and the chance of losing far outweighs any advantage to be gained by taking a long chance that has only an even chance of succeeding.

Academica

Popular pastimes at the cow college as revealed by this illuminating despatch from Guelph:

"The first hazing of a student at the Ontario Agricultural College in many years occurred last night when one of the English students, for failure to recognize some of the freshmen's unwritten laws, was the victim. "The student's offence is not known, but his fellow-classmates are alleged to have dragged him through a pig alley and then crated him in a pig crate, paraded him downtown and auctioned him off in front of a theatre. "The college faculty met this afternoon to consider the episode, and there was a possibility that expulsions would result. The student concerned is one of a class of selected young men sent to the college from England."

"It's not the brains that you have, my boy—
But the pin that you wear on your vest!"

as substantiated by a schnitzel from Yale:

New Haven, Conn.—Fraternities at Yale are a "destructive influence," "The Yale News," official organ of the student body, says, pointing out that one must be prominent to gain election to a fraternity, and the effort to achieve prominence dims the appreciation of college as a preparation for life, and emphasizes immediate success as the great goal of four years.—New York Herald Tribune.

Pulchritude and erudition on the banks of the Wabash as revealed in the following:

Indiana University.—An "It" section, composed of four men and four women, will take the place of the usual beauty section in the 1928 Arbuteus. Sections comprising the book include administration, campus life, Indianapolis section, features, and eight pages of campus scenes.

High winds in the great open spaces featuring England and the Oklahomans:

University of Oklahoma.—"Resolved, that in the opinion of this house, compulsory military training should form a part of the education in all schools and universities," is the subject of a debate which will bring a representative team from Cambridge University, England, to meet the University of Oklahoma debate team in November. Oklahoma men will argue the affirmative.

Cradle snatching and creche running at the University of the father of the w.k. land to the south of us:

George Washington University claims to have the youngest college student in the country in Erik K. Reed, just turned thirteen. Young Reed, who claims he has the advantage of other college students in not being rushed for fraternities nor being flattered with co-eds, is majoring in botany and has a heavy schedule. He intends eventually to become an industrial chemist.

"Scotch Aunt" is Next Effort of U.C. Players' Guild

"The Scotch Aunt" presented by Mr. Walkinshaw at the U.C. Players' Guild should be of great interest since it is written by a Toronto man, Mr. Girdler of Harbord Collegiate Institute. It is the picture of a highly religious but hypocritical household who extend a doubtful hospitality to their widowed daughter-in-law who has cared for her dissipated husband through fifteen years of poverty. The curtain rises with the prospect of a large inheritance from an aunt of Scotch extraction who has been killed in an accident near the old Glen Road bridge. The rebellion of the daughter-in-law and the reappearance of the aunt afford an interesting plot, and it is to be hoped that a large audience will demonstrate their appreciation of home talent.

Experiment has shown that it takes around six years for wage-earning students to graduate.

literary merit such as to win the approbation of one of Mr. Baldwin's calibre. Yet personally I find it difficult to account for the charm urged by Mr. Baldwin in several hundred lists proudly stating without any of the condemned prepositions or adjectives, "attended debates, sing-songs, dances, lectures, the library." Doubtless such elements as the presence or absence of the suggested "Varsity Rink" would add variety and interest.

In conclusion, I should like to remind Mr. Baldwin that the women of University College are only too eager to allow those who desire a list of activities after their name, perfect freedom. All they ask is that they too be allowed their peculiar way of displaying themselves for the admiration of posterity.

It seems a pity that in our last act of self-expression before leaving the University, there should be no toleration of individuality.

A REPLY TO MR. SOWARD

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Mr. Soward, the self-styled defender of the ladies, calls for an apology from me. Sir, it is forthcoming to all those whom I may have offended, but I still stick to my position. I took the ladies' action as an opportunity to express my views, and perhaps in haste have been misunderstood. I don't mind, as long as I have begun the discussion of a controversial subject and may be allowed to make myself more plain. I am in favour of this innovation, so as to see how it works in practice, and then our opponents will have a concrete example to attack instead of, in their ignorance, raising all sorts of bogies. There are other reasons too.

Not content with maligning me, the good gentleman proceeded to besmirch the good name of my college. Sir, I deliberately signed my name without my college, as a member of the University and of the graduating year in the University. May I, therefore, be allowed to point out to my friend that talking is not the only thing we do at Trinity. (Yesterday we had an Old Boys' Day, and Champus Cat would say we only drink tea.) Had he left out the word talking, the sentence would read better, and have some value as criticism. "Coming from a college where so much (talking) is done, Mr. Baldwin is strangely intolerant, but, worse than that, he shows the influence of his surroundings by being ridiculous."—How? Sir, I ask the gentleman to be particular.

Mr. Editor, the good gentleman throughout his letter shows his misunderstanding of me and ignorance of my position; may I suggest that he read my letter more carefully three or four times. Again, Sir, if he hopes to further his cause by personal attack on someone who does not know him, and not by the use of criticism of the subject under discussion, I think he had best learn tolerance himself before looking for intolerance in others.

To conclude, I ask Mr. Soward to explain this sentence of his: "It delights my heart when a man is courageous enough to wear an odd pair of trousers with his coat, and when a young lady is able to discover a quotation which she thinks suits her personality I regard that as a proof of her originality." How does he relate originality to using other people's ideas? Does Mr. Soward wear odd trousers? If so, here's to Shakespeare, where I find this noble line, (perhaps Mr. Soward would like to know of it): "Remember who commanded thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered."

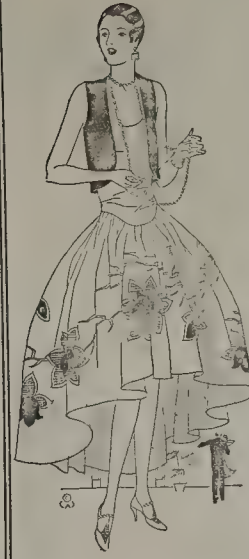

Sir, to the ladies, God bless 'em.
Yours respectfully,
Archer Baldwin.

DOES NOT FAVOUR SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Youth Dances In Bouffant Grace

Light as the proverbial feather these charming new picture and period frocks that have come to the Debutante Shop—the very latest arrivals for the mid-season activities.

Crisp taffeta with the quaintest of pink frills, soft, shimmering satin, evanescent tulle, sheer crepes fashion these essentially youthful dance frocks with their snug little bodices and their expansive skirts. Demure as can be, they yet show such very modern ideas as uneven hemlines, bow necklines, trailing flowers. In peach, ocean green, rose, flesh, yellow. Sizes 14 to 18.

VICTORIA VICTORIOUS OVER ST. HILDA'S QUINTET

Large Crowd Ardent Supporters See Women in Fiercely Fought Battle

By the very narrow margin of one point, the women's basketball team of Victoria College won the game against St. Hilda's which was played at the U.T.S. gymnasium on Tuesday evening from 7 till 8 o'clock. The score was 14-13. More than a hundred ardent supporters of both teams turned out and the game was well worth watching. The scarlet and gold uniforms of Victoria and the blue and gray ones of St. Hilda's made an effective colour scheme.

The St. Hilda's team consisted of M. Johnston, R. Harrison and D. Langley, guards; B. Borbridge, M. Dickinson, B. Sutton and C. Cockbourne, centres; and M. Lewis and P. Tilston (captain) as forwards.

W. Mahoney and M. Parkes were forwards on the Victoria team, H. Beal and M. Beattie centres, N. Bateman and E. Taylor guards. H. Merritt, R. Moore, B. Doyle and K. Carscadden were substitutes on the Victoria team.

69-19 IS FINAL TALLY

In a basketball "free-for-all" last night U.C. Senior team ran up a score of 69 points against 19 scored by the Medettes. It was anything but a team against a team. Every girl played her own game in her own particular way. Everyone worked just as hard as they possibly could, and when time was called two exhausted squads were stretched on the floor.

Willene Wallace scored a basket—or two—for U.C. whenever she saw fit. The last three minutes of the play were the most exciting of the whole time, when the Medettes brought their score up from 13 to 19 and U.C. kept pace a basket for a basket.

The line-ups were as follows:
U.C.: Forwards, Conny Smith, Willene Wallace; centres, Conny Wilkins, Emma Weir; guards, Mildred Wilkins, Phil Howard.

Meds: Forwards, Marian Brick, Mary Jackson; centres, Marian Laird, Alda Moffat; guards, Marg. Brown, Vi. Henry.

Victoria Seniors Discuss Torontonensis Biographies

At a meeting of the Senior year of Victoria College yesterday afternoon, the form of this year's biographies was discussed, and arguments in favour of the biographical form presented by Mr. M. T. Newby of the Advisory Board.

Many arguments against the new regulations were brought up and discussed, but no constructive criticism evolved. It was decided to go ahead with the biographies, and the members of the year were asked to have them ready as soon as possible. After a short business meeting conducted by the President, Mr. Frederick Wansborough, the meeting adjourned.

For those who did not like the romance and sentiment of the picture there was a very complete jazz programme given by Romanelli. We might note that his boisterous accomplice, the trappist, was put in the shade by the usually retiring tuba, in the mouth of which there glowed a crimson light at intervals.

"The Collegians" appeared in the comic, and this instalment is the worst yet, as the guests said when Helio-gabalus served the dessert.

The programme has been so arranged that nearly every one will like something in it. We really think that the picture was worth while, and although no great actor gave the touch of realism to it, it shines by comparison at least.

JUNIOR LEAGUE REVIEW—ROYAL ALEXANDRA

On Dir:

Although we were never inclined to be very uppity socially, we feel at last that we deserve the award of the Silver-Plated Charlotte Russe, for we have actually occupied an orchestra seat at the Royal Alexandra during a Junior League Review. Last year we were there and they put us up in the drama-lover's perch, the "gods"—consequently we knocked the show. It didn't look well from Parnassus, but now that the true worth of "Varsity" dramatic criticisms has been recognized, they gave us two aisle seats in Row G—and down there among the élite, the cognoscenti, the beau monde and "tout Toronto," we felt as if we had mounted another step towards fame—and no one ever guessed that we lived below Bloor Street. It was a good show.

The audience was a very distinguished one, and many "toppers" were seen in the lobby—we mean foyer. There was an atmosphere of just one bit happy jolly and refined family about the whole of "Lo!" Solman's arena. A box party of sprightly fellows shouted the cutest remarks to their friends on the stage—it was such fun!

The Review itself, held for a charitable if decorative purpose, is well worth seeing, for it is, despite its title, Big League Stuff. No more lavish costuming, or more orb-tickling scenery has been seen in a long time in this quiet hamlet. The costumes and settings were really beautiful and there was a happy jolly and refined family about the whole of "Lo!" Solman's arena. A box party of sprightly fellows shouted the cutest remarks to their friends on the stage—it was such fun!

As for the serious side of the Review, Miss Jean Macpherson delighted even a hardened reviewer with some glorious scarf-dancing; various colourful spectacles of Versailles, Roman, Rainbow-Land and Heaven were a treat to the weary eye after November weather in our sunny city. We advise those who would see a very good Review to go this week to the Royal Alexandra—but one must be prepared to do two things—assume a tuxedo and pay heavily for a smart programme.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

Shea's presentation this week is good. We waited in line for fifteen minutes, got the two worst seats in the house, with three fat American ladies on either side of us, and we came out grinning. Ergo, it must be good! But we do wish that reviewers at Shea's got some consideration! The picture is "The Crystal Cup," and depicts the final denouement of a beautiful young lady who thought all men were beasts—until "the" man arrived. All's well that ends well. The acting was distinctly well done, the settings beautiful. In fact it is a good picture, but rather spoiled by promiscuous cutting.

The Keith-Albee vaudeville was far above the customary trash that has inundated from Shea's stage in the past weeks. Noel Lister opens with some clever mystery and sleight-of-hand. His balancing act featured the bill, together with the act of Lady Margaret. Coupled with a pianist without the usual vaudeville voice, a violinist that could really play, she does some dancing that proves beyond doubt that some people have elastic spines.

Dooley and Sales made us laugh just after one fat lady had ruined our fedora, and their wisecracks have a unique appeal.

Florrie La Vere undoubtedly has the neatest and most agile feet we underlying spirit of the former work. The grandmother, an Englishwoman, transplanted to Canada, hadn't any feeling for earth or nature. Her sons felt of earth as Martha Ostenso had pictured it, but the young children, Finch and Wakefield, had the more distinctly Canadian feeling—that of nature, pervading without directing.

A heated discussion followed the paper over the questions as to whether or not there was a Canadian literature; whether "Jalna" was characteristically Canadian; and whether or not there was good characterization in the work.

TORONTONENSIS EDITOR REPLIES TO CRITICISM

Barring of Quotations is Due to Unwarranted Increase in Size of Volume

SITUATION EXPLAINED

Lack of Appropriateness and Inanity Derivates from Dignity

Due to a misunderstanding of the facts of the case, there has been some opposition to the ruling of the Advisory Board of Student Publications barring quotations from the biographies in this year's Torontonensis. W. E. Shute, the editor, has cleared up the affair by answering the organized protests of the women of Victoria and University Colleges. On account of the large yearly increase in the number of the graduating classes, and due to the old systems of biographies, the volume has become thicker year by year till it has reached such a size that in order to pursue the old course a substantial increase in the price of the volume would have to be made. In order to avoid this and to add to the neatness and appropriateness of the pages, it has been decided to limit the biographies to a short account of the students' activities, interests and accomplishments while at college, which is limited to a maximum of 35 words, with an average of 20 words.

W. E. Shute and N. T. Newby explained the situation in answer to their protests to the women's graduating class of Victoria College, who then decided to abide by the decision of the Advisory Board of Student Publications, who have been forced into their action by the order of the Board of Governors to cut down in every possible way in the cost of producing Torontonensis.

It has also been found that quotations, due to their inanity and lack of appropriateness, had detracted greatly from the dignity of the year book, and it is believed that their total elimination will not only accomplish a decided improvement in the Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Boyish Bob or Towering Tresses?

Readers are requested to submit questions that "Diogenes" may ask the undergrads on the campus. This is the third of our series.

The following students were yesterday "Diogenized" on the question "Should co-eds let their hair grow?"

B. R. English, II Yr. Classics: "I think the effect of cropped hair in the majority of cases is delightful. But why question us on such a detail? Deus omnipotens! If only it could have been their tongues!"

Miss Edith Martin, III Yr. Philosophy: "In the average case certainly not! Of course to a certain extent it depends upon the shape of one's face and the back of one's neck. It is too much trouble to a co-ed to bother about long hair. It is time enough for that when the days of housekeeping approach."

Miss K. L. O'Brien, I Yr. Pass: "I think the average girl of from seventeen to twenty should keep her hair bobbed. Everything depends upon her hair, her head and herself. If bobbed hair is unbecoming to a girl she should let it grow so that it may cover her ears. Personally I think bobbed hair is the thing."

Gordon Galbraith, II Yr. Pass: "I consider that nature knew best, and if it is naturally long then let it be long, for I believe that is the most beautiful. If fashion decrees long hair, as it is rumored, I think it is up to the co-eds to keep abreast of the fashions as they usually do."

M. T. Newby, B.A., Chairman of Publications Committee: "The young ladies themselves are in the best position to judge the pros and cons of the question, and I have sufficient confidence in them to say that they will reach a judgment to leave the matter entirely to them. She may not wear woman's so-called glorious crown, but a girl's a girl for a' that!"

Miss Helen Allen, III Yr. Pass: "I think bobbed hair very attractive and convenient and is becoming to most women. I believe that those who do let it grow have never had it long before and are doing it as an experiment. It is my opinion that bobbed hair is here to stay and all will eventually return to it."

DENTISTRY ORATORS DEFEAT ST. MIKE'S

Debate Subject "Resolved That This House Pities Its Grandchildren"

INTERFACULTY SERIES

The Interfaculty debate season opened last night when the Dentistry debaters defeated St. Michael's in the latter's college in what proved a good debate on a second-hand subject: "Resolved that this House pities its grandchildren."

Throughout all time the elder generation has pitied the younger generation," declared Vernon Burke of S.M.C., opening the case for the affirmative. He continued with a summary of world conditions to-day, and pointed out that if matters continued to grow worse for another half century, our grandchildren were indeed deserving of pity.

Hugh McCaffrey, of Dentistry, leader of the negative, showed that as we had solved our own problems so also would our successors. "Our grandchildren will accept what pleases them and reject what pleases them," Science, in all its branches, was making the world happier year by year.

"The world since the industrial revolution has gone machine-mad," was the opinion of George Power of St. Michael's. Industrialism was creating a new slavery among moderns which would be even worse in later

Hon. Dr. Monteith at Conservative Club

FERGUSON ABSENT

Plans for Organiza- tion Discussed

The intimation that this year there would be a provincial surplus big enough to pay a large sum on the provincial debt as prophesied in the last budget speech, was the chief statement of the Honourable Dr. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, in his speech to the Macdonald-Cartier Club last night. Dr. Monteith, who consented to speak to the club when Premier Ferguson found he could not be present, stated that when the annual financial statement is issued next week Conservatives will be proud that they belong to a party capable of producing such a statement. His request for silence in the press prevents the publishing of definite figures, but he stated to "The Varsity" that the intimation that last year's budget statement would be fulfilled was quite in order.

D. J. Walker introduced the Provincial Treasurer, who spoke on the duty of young men to prepare themselves for citizenship. They should ally themselves with a party of principle, integrity and accomplishment as was the Conservative party. It might be defeated, but it was never discredited. Sometimes it made mistakes, but its aim was always to remedy its mistakes and to advance.

At this point representatives of down-town papers were seen in the meeting, and in accordance with the policy of the Macdonald-Cartier Club they were requested to withdraw. Dr. Monteith went on to explain the necessity of sound financing in private and public life, and described the plan of debt retirement being followed by the province.

Mrs. Howard Fallis was the first of the speakers of the evening. She showed the difficulties in the way of a national party, and explained the steps that were being taken to organize a National Young Conservatives' Association. Mrs. Fallis spoke of the important part the Club could play in this work, suggesting that speakers from the Club should go through the province and help organize similar clubs.

R. Soward and K. Marden moved a vote of thanks to the speakers. After the speeches the election of officers took place. The results were: Hon. Pres.: Premier Ferguson, Hon. R. B. Bennett.

Past Pres.: D. J. Walker.
Pres.: W. T. Aitken.
1st Vice-Pres.: W. D. Matthews.

W.U.A. Council Discuss Plans for Annual Christmas Party

At a recent meeting Mrs. Kirkwood and the W.U.A. Council discussed the former's annual Christmas party for the women of U.C. It has been decided to present the same French play of the Nativity that proved so successful last year. Christmas carols will be an important part of the programme as well as refreshments. Mrs. Dow is training the choir, which sings off-stage, and all girls interested in singing and music are asked to sign the poster in the Women's Cloak Room. Mrs. Wallace is directing the cast. Notices of carol practices, which will be held in the Women's Union at noon, will be posted later. This party will take place in the last week of college or Christmas week, and all U.C. women are cordially invited.

PROFESSOR DAVIS SPEAKS TO WOMEN ON REALISM

"Poet Can Only Make Poetry
Out of What He Himself Has Felt"

QUOTES WORDSWORTH

Hardy Arrives at Opposite
Conclusion as to the Reality in Life

"If you watch the pageant of life that the poet has conjured up for you and when it is over approach him and ask his meaning, do not be disappointed if he does not answer you," Professor H. J. Davis advised a large group of students yesterday at the Women's Union. His subject was "Reality in Poetry."

"Although complete sincerity is always found in poetry, we can never expect any absolute answer to a problem. The poet can only make poetry out of what he has himself felt. For example, let us go to the poets for a solution of the riddle of nature. Wordsworth has found for himself in nature a consolation for all the ills of human life. He turns from man to the trees and hills and open air for consolation." Here Professor Davis read one of Wordsworth's poems and almost in reply to it one of Thomas Hardy's telling how "he finds not consolation but only the same strife and turns back again to man, where at least smells and discourse are to be found. Hardy and Wordsworth are both conscientious and sincere, but they come to opposite conclusions."

"The poet may sometimes seem to be expressive of his whole generation, not because he listens to and gathers from other people but because being over-sensitive, he feels those things and can give to us those less clearly realized, more dimly felt experiences. Thinking of poetry, as a whole, we have a book—the Bible—in which is treasured a record of feelings and emotions as realized and expressed by those most able to express their feelings in that period."

REV. F. A. MOORE SPEAKS IN HART HOUSE CHAPEL

Change in Student Attitude from Missionary Zeal to Thrill Seekers

Referring to the fact that he had noticed a singular difference in the attitude of the students of the University in the year which followed the war years and now, Rev. F. A. Moore went on to explain the change in attitude which had taken place, in a sermon delivered in Hart House Chapel yesterday noon.

Young men in 1919 had returned from the war inflamed with a great missionary zeal and a burning desire to reform the world. Somehow or other this had died out, and in its place students are seeking after life, or, to use the parlance of to-day, after thrills. They seek life and know not where to look for it. They attempt to find happiness in study, in pleasure, in seeking after wealth, and by immersing themselves in the whirl of the business world, but still they are unsatisfied and unsuccessful. Not through a blundering quest of life in material things may happiness be found, but only through a perfect union with Christ in religion may this be accomplished. Rev. Mr. Moore spoke in the place of Rev. W. R. Sclater, who was to have spoken yesterday, but whose sermon has been postponed till next week.

ENGLISH STAFFS PLAN CONVENTION

Professor Wallace Expects
All-Canadian Gathering of English Professors

MEET HERE IN MAY

That there would probably be an all-Canadian conference of English professors next year, was the statement made by Professor M. W. Wallace, head of the Department of English in University College, in an interview with "The Varsity" on Wednesday. Hitherto there has been an annual convention of the English departments of the four western universities, those of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Professor Wallace has just returned from this year's conference, which was held in Edmonton. Special invitations for the meeting were extended to Professor McMechan of Dalhousie University, Halifax, and to Professor Wallace. Various papers were read on technical subjects dealing with the teaching of English, both from the administrative point of view and that of the scholar. The aim of this convention is to promote the study of English, and to discuss problems which can best be decided by united action.

The all-Canadian conference, which, it is hoped, will be inaugurated next year, will probably be held in Toronto during the month of May. It will be of great service in binding together all Canadian universities, and also in promoting Canadian union. The difficulty of maintaining relations between east and west is illustrated by the fact that Professor Wallace was away for eleven days, only three of which were spent in Edmonton.

The suspension of the private meetings of the Students' Administrative Council and their replacement by open meetings to which all undergraduates would be invited to attend, was the important outcome of a regular meeting of the Council last yesterday afternoon. The new move came as the result of a recent editorial in "The Varsity," to the effect that Council meetings should be thrown open to the entire student body, and the motion by Mr. Archer Baldwin that "The rule of order regarding private meetings of the Students' Administrative Council be suspended in order to hold meetings open to the entire student body," was unanimously passed.

Various members of the Council expressed the opinion that the average undergraduate was unfamiliar with the work of their executive body, and it is expected that the open meeting will prove of educational as well as of informative value. Council meetings are held on every second Wednesday, which would indicate that the first meeting under the new arrangements will be held on Wednesday, December 7.

The Union Theological College was admitted to provisional membership on the council, and, after the completion of some detail, are to be allowed one representative. Following a temporary suspension of the ruling whereby each faculty is entitled to but one representative on the Joint Executive, Mr. Torrance, of Medicine, was appointed as chairman of the Literary and Debates Committee, W. A. Donohue, acting chairman since the resignation of Mr. W. L. Smith of Trinity, retiring. It was reported that Lyndon Smith, Trinity, M. K. Kenny, Victoria, and W. Plumtre had been selected for the coming debate with the University of Minnesota, while the same team may debate with representatives of Marquette University on the return trip.

It was stated that, with the business in connection with undergraduate participation in the centenary practically completed, a meeting of the Undergraduate Centenary Committee would probably be called next week. It is understood that a final report on student activities will be prepared for presentation to the Council, while the time and place for the donation of the centenary float awards will also be set.

Household Science Club Hold First Informal Tea

The Household Science Club held an informal tea Wednesday afternoon in the Common Room at Lillian Massey. Dr. Benson poured and the President presided. This tea was an experiment. Due to the new ruling that Household Science partisans may no longer attend University College functions, the Club tried this innovation of a tea, managed entirely by undergraduates. The attempt was a decided success. The next meeting of the Club will be held at 7.30 next Wednesday.

Open house has been held at the University of Illinois Observatory on clear nights during the summer, those interested being able to view the planets through the telescope.

OPEN MEETINGS OF THE STUDENTS' ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

That the members of the Students' Administrative Council are prepared to do everything in their power to strengthen the Council and to provide a more harmonious relationship with the undergraduate, is indicated by their unanimous approval of the motion that The rule of order regarding private meetings of the Students' Administrative Council be suspended in order to hold meetings open to the entire student body.

For some time it has been felt that not only was the average student too far removed from undergraduate executive affairs but that he had also, to a certain extent, formed certain adverse opinions regarding the Council and its procedure. While, under the new system, the visitor will be permitted no occasion to express his views, he will be given an opportunity not only to learn why the Council is coming to certain decisions on his behalf, but also the manner in which decision is reached. It should provide a more personal touch between the executives and the faculties they serve, and, as well, create a greater sense of responsibility on the part of the executive. Moreover, with the anticipated increased interest on the part of the undergraduate, it is to be expected that the year representatives will be more dutiful in their attendance and will give greater attention and thought to the subject under discussion.

It must be admitted that the new move is purely of an experimental nature, and its continuance rests solely on the undergraduate. It has been introduced to meet the demands of those who feared "secret diplomacy," to inspire confidence in and appreciation of the executive, to train future candidates for office in the Council, and, as well, to demonstrate to the electors the requirements to be looked for in the prospective office holder.

It is unnecessary to point out that the scheme can be successful only if the undergraduate exhibits his interest by attendance at these meetings.

ONE SPORT FOR THE WOMEN

The recent ruling of the Women's Athletic Directorate that women students in attendance at the University shall play one inter-faculty sport only during each term has caused much comment, adverse and otherwise. The idea behind this regulation may be likened to Bentham's "the greatest good for the greatest number." It has been pointed out that the ideal of physical education in universities and colleges is not the further development of a few athletes—rather the training of that middle class which will never reach great perfection but which has an interest and an average skill at games.

It has been the custom in several, if not in all, the colleges for some few girls to hold positions on two teams at the same time. This is not fair to the girls themselves—they are often practising one sport and playing the other on the same day—not to other girls who are almost, but not quite, so proficient. On the other hand, the absence of even one star player from a game is a serious handicap to any team. In the larger colleges the gap may be filled comparatively well, but in the smaller ones it is sometimes almost impossible.

As things are at present, the basketball and baseball schedules are played off during the fall term. For several girls in each college this necessitates a choice between the two sports. If the year could be divided in such a way as to have the schedules of the three major sports—basketball, hockey and baseball—run off so that none would overlap, even in practices, it might be possible for some to play all three. This would allow the best players to be on all teams and would perhaps help them to win, but, on the other hand, it would not be helping the average player and would defeat the aim of "the greatest good for the greatest number."

Victoria Dramatics

The Victoria College Dramatic Society last evening produced three one-act plays which most certainly displayed a great deal of clever amateur ability and promise.

The first play—"Sir David Wears a Crown"—whose cast was mostly of the first year, was a rather modern fairy tale with old-fashioned clothes and dialogue. It was rather simple and childish for college students to attempt, but each character was well carried out. The prologue and definite contact with the audience was both unique and successful, and by far the best about the play.

"The Deserter"—the tragedy of the programme was in the beginning—a bad play, and in the end—unsuitable for amateur production. The acting, however, on the ladies' part, was admirable, especially that of Marion Partridge and Helen Price.

But the third play of the evening—"Wurzel Flummery," by A. A. Milne—was without doubt the most successful of them all. A. A. Milne's delicious humour and ability to devise new and weird-sounding names was cleverly shown in this first attempt of the now well-known playwright Emily Aitchison as Mrs. Cranshaw, and Si Birge as Mr. Robert Cranshaw, M.P., did some very clever acting, while the other members of the cast supported them very well, although at times it was rather hard to hear all the dialogue. It was, however, by far the most charmingly done and pleasing performance of the evening.

This is the first (and probably last) of a series of questions which Champus will ask prominent members of the undergraduate body each day.

To-day's question is:.....

Mr. O. U. Fruitree, IV, Shield's:

"No, I have absolutely nothing to say out the question—I never speak for the press. However, if you wish to quote me, you may say that I am heartily in favour of this movement, and hope to see it succeed."

Miss Phyllis Uppenburg, II, Wicktor: "No, I think it is like a slightly frosted cake with raisins in it. The raisins provide the irony."

G. Stiffer Upperrip, VI, Oxford:

"Tell your editor-in-chief that he may have an interview with me to-morrow at 11.36 in the morning."

J. Instant Postumus, II, Victoria:

"This is merely another manifestation of the general frivolity of the students. Millions now studying will never graduate. Those who do will spend at least sixty years out of college. This does not apply to those who died in infancy."

Will. U. Shoot, VI, P. and M.:

"Yes, there should be no biographies in Torontonsense. I am heartily opposed to this move and refuse to make any formal statement on this question until I have gone into conference."

C-C

Anthem for those in peril in the wimpy-pool:

"Icy-cold Poppa, Don't you Frigidare me!"

Just to get the Greek point of view, let us take a look at the Classics and ask some jolly riddles. Now, why did old Horace refer to the River of the Underworld as "slow and sluggish?" Well, it Styx.

Having sent a petition to the Registrar, we were permitted to re-enter lectures after that. Now, why did Aeneas, in Virgil's eminent epic, have to clear out of Carthage so suddenly? Well, the w.k. Queen of that town was cutting up Didos.

And now for the loud war-cry (suggested by N.A.B.):

Guelph must be quite a place. The collic spirit is evidently quite strong up in the Reformatory town. A Pig-wallow should be standard f.o.b. equipment at all respectable universities.

Miss E. Roach Speaks at Tea on French Summer Course

Tuesday the cheery fireside of the Common Room at the Women's Union offered delightful retreat for those who attended Mrs. Kirkwood's Tuesday tea. Miss Edith Roach spoke to those girls who were particularly interested in French about a summer course which she had taken in Paris. This informal tête-a-tête added greatly to the general charm of the afternoon.

Taking advantage of the fact that they outnumbered the men in the class of 1928, Washburn College, Kansas, elected co-eds to every office in the class elections just held.

JUNIOR FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS PLAY IN MONTREAL ON SATURDAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Mulock Cup final on Friday between Dents and Victoria will bring together two of the best teams that have competed in the Interfaculty series in several years. The battle at the Stadium will be a real one, as both teams are out to win. The backers of the teams are confident that their respective favourites will be the victors and are prepared to back their choice both vocally and with cold hard cash.

The first appearance of a Varsity hockey team this season will be tomorrow evening when Frank Sullivan's Junior outfit takes the U.T.S. team on in the second half of a double-header in the S.P.A. series. There are some smart boys with the Juniors this year, and Beal and Moon of last season's squad provide a good start for building up a new team. Bean, who played on the Intercollegiate wing line this fall, looks as though he should prove a real strength on the defence. There were over fifty turning out with the team at the beginning of the season, but now only fifteen have survived the weeding.

The second appearance of a Varsity hockey team will be on Saturday night when the Grads stack up against Marlboro's in a Senior S.P.A. game. The Grads are contenting themselves with this short series and a few exhibition games before going over the water to make a bid for the world's championship.

The Junior football team is Varsity's last hope in the gridiron game. They handily walked off with the Intercollegiate title this season and are now on the trail of the Montreal team in order to get the Canadian championship for a change.

In the first game of the finals for the Interfaculty soccer title, Victoria secured a comfortable three goal margin over Knox. So far this season the Victoria team has not yet been scored against (and that is a record which any team may well be envious of)—it is reported that they shall try to finish the season along the same lines.

Within a week or so the boxing ring will be assembled in the upper gymnasium, and then the various faculties will turn out in full force for the Meds, S.P.S., etc., assaults-at-arms. These take place usually in the first week or so of December and then immediately followed by the Junior Assault. These "preliminary assaults" although not providing the best exhibition of the art of boxing, wrestling and fencing, certainly give earnest exhibitions and each entrant goes into the fray as though his University colours depended upon the result. And yet some good material is always unearthed by these assaults and gladdens the hearts of the coaches, who are only too willing to encourage promising mat, ring or foil artists.

WATER POLO GAMES ARE CLOSELY CONTESTED

Standing in Various Groups is Announced—Two Games To-day

Those who saw the water polo games last Monday witnessed two of the most closely contested games of the year. To-night (Thursday) at 5 o'clock, another game that looks like a real fight is called between Junior U.C. and Junior Meds. When these two teams met earlier in the season Junior U.C. were somewhat lucky to come out with a draw of 1-1. The winner of to-night's affair will in all probability figure in the play-offs.

Senior U.C. and Victoria play the second game at 5.30.

The standing to date:—

VARSITY JUNIORS MEET M.A.A.A. ON SATURDAY

Varsity Team is Only Bright Light Shining in Toronto Football World

SUDDEN-DEATH GAME

Montreal Team Have Beaten All Opposing Squads by Large Scores

Saturday is a big day in the annals of the Varsity Junior team when they meet the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association Juniors, the Canadian title holders, in a sudden-death affair at the latter's home town.

The game is the big thing in the minor football world, and although the Blue "kids" will enter the battle against odds, it is a certainty that they will give the Montreal hopefuls the battle of a lifetime.

The Eastern Canada "under 21" title is the thing at stake, and the Infants are bound to go at it hammer and tongs for the holder of that honour is the highest in minor football.

The Varsity team is the only bright light shining in the Toronto football world, and the "kids" realize that the entire undergraduate body is behind them to bring at least one title to an otherwise barren shelf in the Blue football cupboard.

The Varsity team has yet to lose a single game, and is one of the best collections of footballers ever gathered together in the history of the Juniors. They have a brilliant half-line that can run back kicks and can catch faultlessly, and the line is on a par with the best in the finest Intermediate company. The "kids" are nobody's fools on the gridiron, as they have all at one time or another starred in their local teams back at the Collegiate.

They are a well-drilled gang in the finer points of the fall pastime, and the coaching of Jimmie Douglas has moulded the outfit into a well-oiled machine that will take some stopping. If this M.A.A.A. clan can put a halt to the triumphal march of the Blues it will richly deserve the laurels as the best minor aggregation in Eastern Canada.

The M.A.A.A. twelve put all their opposition to sleep by big scores, and the first play-off with the Ottawa Rideaus was no exception to the rule that they have established in the past few years.

SENIOR SEXTETTE START HARD GRIND

Battle for Positions Waxes Merry—Only Few Men Sure of Places

MURRY SNYDER IN NETS

Varsity's Senior puck chasers are getting down to real hard work these days and are showing form that warrants the high hopes held by their supporters. It is far too early as yet to predict the starting line-up. There is a merry battle on for positions, and only a few men, even of the veterans, are sure of their places.

Murray Snyder looks just about good enough in goal to hold the position against anyone, and he will probably be in the nets when the season opens. On the defence Kirkpatrick is looked upon as a sure starter. Kirk is going as well as ever this season and promises to be one of the stars of the team. "Red" Whitehead has been out skating around, but is in no shape yet to indulge in serious practice. When he gets into shape he will probably be teamed up with Kirk on the rearguard.

In the meantime the two "Bobs" of last year's Intermediates, Crosby and Graham, are having a merry battle for the vacant defence position. Graham appears to have a slight edge as a defence man, but Crosby has had a lot of experience as a forward, playing left wing last year. The latter player may get the call on account of his ability to perform both on the forward line and the defence.

Last year's forward line of Harley, King and Richards is showing up well, but they have little edge on the rest of the candidates for the front line positions. "Red" Legon, who played for Queen's for several years, is making a game effort to catch a place. He is not as finished a performer as the hardest workers on the ice. Unsome of the squad, but he is one of the Intercollegiate series, but he will be available for the O.H.A.

McMullen and Stewart are showing up surprisingly well. The latter is a centre player who bores in and is always dangerous. Park is rapidly rounding into the form that gave him a place on the team a couple of years ago.

Taking the squad as a whole, there is every reason to expect that Coach "Mike" Pearson will have a team to be proud of when the season opens. Varsity plays the winners of the Grads-Marlboro, and if the Grads win the sight of two Blue teams meeting should attract a big crowd. The Undergrads are all set to take the measure of the boys with degrees if they get the chance, and are wasting no time getting into condition.

VICTORIA DEFEAT KNOX IN SOCCER 3-0

Win First of Interfaculty Finals on Slippery Field

SHIELDS AND JACK STAR

In the first game of the Interfaculty soccer final between Knox and Victoria Colleges yesterday afternoon, Vic emerged victorious by blanking Knox 3-0.

Some 175 fans of Knox and Victoria braved the chilly winds of the front campus to cheer their team on to victory. In spite of the soft and slippery condition of the ground the two teams gave a real classy exhibition. The slippery condition of the ground did, however, prove rather dangerous, as a considerable number of players experienced some nasty falls. Towards the middle of the first half K. McMillan of Victoria had his knee dislocated and was forced to retire for the remainder of the game, while S. Kerr of Knox received quite a gash on the head.

Play opened in the first half quite briskly. Knox seemed slightly the better, boring in well after their shots. Here the accident to McMillan happened, which seemed to have an effect upon the team. Realizing that they were now absent one of their best men, they began to "come to." Gradually working their way down the field, Vic gets in close on the Knox (Continued on page 4) goal; a scramble followed, in which "Red" Allen of Vic shoved one in past the Knox goalie.

VICTORIA DEFEAT KNOX

Vic kept up around the Knox goal until the last of the first half making exasperating attempts to notch another one, but they did not seem to be able to steady their shots on the treacherous ground.

Play throughout the middle of the second half seemed quite even. Vic finally broke away, with one of their players having a comparatively open shot on the goal some 25 yards distant. The Knox goalie ran out to meet him, and things looked mighty dangerous for Knox. However, one of the Knox backs caught up and booted the ball back down the campus. Vic came back again, Moore was given a kick on a foul, making Vic's total two. The lusty chorus from the sidelines of "Hors-Hosto! Zora-Zostal! Zachariah Zahl! Victoria Victoria! Rahl! Rahl! Rahl! urged them on to try and pile up a score. H. Hall responded to the enthusiastic support with a punt into the Knox goal, making it 3-0 for Vic. The remainder of the play during the period was practically all in Vic territory, with Knox making a desperate effort to overcome Vic's substantial lead, but to no avail.

For Victoria, Shields played a consistently effective game, as also did Kenny by his many saves. "Bill" Jack of Knox stood out for the staunch defensive work he exhibited.

Line-up:
Knox: Goal, G. Irving; full backs, W. Jack, H. Davidson; half backs, D. Jack, D. Roland, D. Perrie; forwards, S. Kerr, S. Johnston, S. Davidson, D. McCullough; sub, J. Young.

Vic: Goal, M. Kenny; full backs, G. Simpson, K. McMillan; half backs, H. Snell, A. Moore, E. Allen; forwards, H. Hall, J. Houston, S. Hall, G. Shields, C. Searle; sub, D. Westington.

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD PRESENT "SCOTCH AUNT"

Local Setting and Clever Dialogue Make Play Enjoyable

"The Scotch Aunt," by Mr. Girdler of Harbord Collegiate Institute, was the very interesting play presented at the U.C. Players' Guild by Mr. Jack Walkinshaw. Its local setting, amusing dialogue and clever character sketches make the play good entertainment. The story is about a most religious though decidedly hypocritical family. The father, Mr. Smith, is a self-satisfied God-fearing money-grabber, who preaches his Philistine cant to his family and his Bible class and to all who come near him. At the opening of the play, news has been received of the death of a Scotch aunt, whose irreligious views and love of "three ounces of whisky in a glass of hot water, with the sugar put in first," had met with disapproval of the Smith family. But the prospect of an inheritance excites them exceedingly. The widowed daughter-in-law, Mary, who had devoted fifteen years of her life to her dissipated husband, disgusted with the smugness of her father-in-law, at length rebels against their inhospitable treatment of her and prepares to leave the household. The reappearance of the Scotch aunt complicates matters and in the end justice is meted out all around.

FAVOURS CHAIR OF JOURNALISM

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
Your correspondent, "Dynamite," makes a tremendous explosion in yesterday's column, yet like an explosive which goes off without being properly set, no damage can be seen after the smoke has cleared away. "Dynamite" has a hazy and nebulous idea of a school of journalism. Let us take the school with seven members on the staff, two being practical newspapermen, which he mentions (presumably Columbia). "Would a school give any more than a superficial knowledge of the technical end of the game which could be acquired far more easily and much more thoroughly in a few weeks' work on any daily paper?" he asks. Will not four years of training at a school of journalism in newspaper work by the two men who have had experience on daily papers be of value? "Would such a school provide any background or any real education?" The five members of the staff who are not newspapermen will give instruction in English, History, Classics, and other impediments commonly known to the great unwashed as "background." It is not expected that a graduate in journalism will be able to write world-shaking editorials two weeks after getting his diploma, but he will, although starting at the bottom, go faster and farther than the conscientious objector like "Dynamite."

"The Varsity" will not necessarily be controlled by the journalistic faculty. The ideal situation would be a chair of journalism, with journalism an option in the Arts course. The students of journalism would of course flock to "The Varsity," but it would be equally as feasible for one who had spent two weeks on the staff as an outsider to compete with them, if "Dynamite" is to be credited. The Professor of Journalism would not necessarily have any connection with "The Varsity," and should not "Dynamite" seems to have motives other than the altruistic in his Philipine.

Yours, Delta.

DENTS AND VICTORIA MEET TO-DAY IN MULOCK CUP FINAL

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity's Junior rugby team plays M.A.A.A. in Montreal to-morrow for the Junior Dominion championship. The Juniors have had little difficulty in the Intercollegiate series for the past few years, but they will find the going somewhat harder when they meet the Montreal team. Still the Blue and White kids are a game lot, and more than that, they have a team that is capable of putting up a stiff contest against any man's team.

Another Varsity team swings into action over the week-end when the Junior hockey team takes on U.T.S. in the S.P.A. series. Coach Frank Sullivan has rounded out a smart team this year, and the boys are all set to give the U.T.S. outfit the beating of their young lives. The Varsity boys have been down to real serious practice for a couple of weeks now and are showing a smart lot of hockey in their daily workouts. Not much is known about the respective strength of the two teams, but there is one thing about these Junior games and that is that they always provide a real struggle.

The Grads open up the Senior amateur season Saturday night when they take on Marlboros in the S.P.A. series. The Grads of last season presented one of the most colourful line-ups seen in amateur hockey for some time. This year they have their team intact and have been putting in some serious practice in preparation for the coming season. The game should be one of the best of the season and should attract much interest from the students.

One of the best rugby games of the season will be staged at the Varsity Stadium this afternoon when Dents and Victoria meet in the final for the Mulock Cup, emblematic of the Interfaculty rugby championship of the University. Both faculties have strong teams this season, and the supporters of the respective teams are counting heavily on a victory for their favourites. This game will be as hard fought as if the Dominion championship depended on it, and anyone who finds time to attend will not find the time wasted.

Varsity Juniors Meet U.T.S. To-Night

Opening Game of the Season at the Arena Gardens in S.P.A. Fixture

PROMISING RECRUITS

To-night the Varsity Junior hockey team opens its season by meeting the University of Toronto Schools' outfit in a S.P.A. fixture. Frank Sullivan has had the boys working out in the Varsity Arena every day for some time past, and now they are ready to show their wares to the public.

Beal and Mooney of last year's team are again on the line-up, and along with some smart recruits should be able to give a good account of themselves. Bean, who played on the Intercollegiate football squad, is playing defence, and he surely is a big man to try to go around. In practice at least he has had not much difficulty in breaking up attacks; both puck and man seem to stop with him. A smart forward line helps to round out the team, and when these boys get working together they surely know how to put forward attacks which are more than formidable. In goal Hunnisset and Morgan are battling for a permanent set of pads, and there is not much to choose between them. The former has turned last year's luck to skill, and the latter certainly knows how to get in front of the old disc.

It is only in the past year or so that the Toronto hockey fan has come to realize that Junior hockey is real hockey.

INTERFACULTY SWIMMING MEET AT HART HOUSE

Good Swimmers Are This Year Scattered Through Various Faculties

The Interfaculty Swimming Meet, which is to take place Saturday, Dec. 3, at 8.15 in the Hart House tank, is bound to be interesting. Other years U.C. had more or less of a monopoly on swimmers, but this year the good swimmers are scattered through the various faculties.

School have such outstanding men as Goss and Nimmo; U.C. have Latchford and Thompson; Meds have Gundy and Gunn; Dents, Eddie Sinclair; Vic, Glover Howe. With these men in competition there are bound to be some records broken.

There will be a dance in the big gym after the meet. Managers of all teams are reminded that entries must be in the hands of W. W. Winterburn not later than Saturday, Nov. 26, noon.

HAMILTON TIGERS MEET BALMY BEACH

Varsity Stadium will be Scene of Hard Fought Battle for Championship

CAPACITY CROWD EXPECTED

To-morrow at the Varsity Stadium the Hamilton Tigers, champions of the Big Four and victors over Queen's, meet Balmy Beach, four times champions of the O.R.F.U., in the Eastern final of the C.R.U., which this year is practically equivalent to the Dominion championship.

Tigers this year have one of the greatest teams that has represented the Ambitious City for some years, and they are confident that this year will see the return of their former glories. It is twelve years since Tigers have been Dominion champions, and the veterans on the Tiger squad are determined to win a championship this year, as many of them are playing their last season.

Balmy Beach, on the other hand, are just as determined to come through to the title as Tigers. This is the fourth successive season the Beach's have been represented in the C.R.U. play-offs, and they feel that this is their year. The team has been badly crippled by injuries to star players, but they have plenty of material and will be able to put a team on the field that will give the Jungle Kings a real run for their money.

There has been a big demand for tickets for this the final game of the season, and it is probable that there will be a capacity crowd present when the two battling teams meet to-morrow. Tigers by virtue of their victory over Queen's, if for no other reason, will probably be favourites, but Beach's have many strong supporters who refuse to concede a victory to the Tigers.

SNOOKER CHAMPIONSHIP IS WON BY HILLIARD

Breckenridge Defeated—Good Style Displayed by Contestants

D'Arcy Hilliard won the Hart House snooker championship by defeating Don Breckenridge in the Billiard Room yesterday afternoon. The first game was close despite Hilliard's run of 22. Breckenridge was a trifle off, and Hilliard gained the verdict by a scant 7 points.

Hilliard played in great style to take the second game. Lack of luck for Breckenridge gave him a commanding lead which was impossible to overcome. The last game was practically a repetition of the first, with neither having any great lead, so that Hilliard's points from the previous games were enough to gain him the championship.

Varsity Jrs. to Play for Canadian Title

Big Chance for Juniors to Bring Victory to Toronto in a Lean Season

MONTREAL HOLDS TITLE

To-morrow is the big day in the life of the minor footballers of Varsity and Montreal Amateur Athletic Association when they lock horns for the Canadian title at the M.A.A.A. stamping grounds. The game should be one of the best in "kids" football and there is bound to be a real battle when these two teams meet.

The Montreal crowd is the holder of the Canadian title for the past year and are out to repeat at the expense of the Blue clan. Last year when the Blue and White had an exceptionally strong team the Montreal idols put the Toronto Infants out of the running, and it is up to the Blues to revenge the defeat of the last season's clan; and don't think that the locals will take the game for granted and not fight. The Juniors are taking nothing for granted and are working out as if their lives depended on the outcome.

The Montrealers will find the Blues in there fighting to the end, and there will not be a great deal of surprise if the Varsity twelve defeats the Eastern leaders, although the supposed talent are all calling the last year champions to win the sudden-death fixture. There has been many an upset in the dope buckets, and here's hoping the Jimmie Douglas coached clan do their bit in providing another upset in the famed receptacle.

The Juniors have their big chance to bring victory to the University in its present lean football season, and the students are right behind them in their attempt to uphold the Varsity reputation as a football centre.

Varsity Grads Will Meet Marlboros

Harry Watson of Olympic Team to Play Left Wing for Marlboros

GRADS TO BE IN UNIFORM

The Varsity Grads, holders of the Allan Cup, and Canada's representatives at the Olympic Games, play their first game of the present season at the Mutual Street Arena to-morrow night when they meet Marlboros in the first game of the Senior S.P.S. series. The Grads were by far the fastest team in the East last season and attracted a large following by the flashy performances. There is no reason to believe that they have slowed up any this year, and a large crowd is expected for the first Senior amateur game of the season.

The whole of the Grads team which went through the season last year will be in uniform for the game. Marlboros have a formidable team this year and they have an added advantage in that they defeated the Grads in the S.P.A. competition and are confident that they can turn the trick again this year.

Harry Watson, former Granite star and member of the Olympic team, will be at left wing for Marlboros, and the famous star should be a big drawing card. Among other members of the Marlboro squad are Ross Paul, Fred Miller and Fred Radke, who performed in the colours of the Parkdale Canoe Club last season, along with several of the stars of the Toronto Canoe Club.

The famous Sullivan-Taylor-Porter-Plaxton-Hudson-Trotter line-up speaks for itself, and fans may be sure that with this aggregation on the ice they will see an exhibition of a high standard. The only one who will be missing from the Grads bench is Connie Smythe, the master-mind who built the team up and coached it to the championship.

I quite agree with him when he says that working one's way through college is an evidence of serious interest, and that too many of our students are here merely because they have been sent by an opulent parent, and have no great desire to profit by that opportunity; but I heartily disagree with his suggestion of part-time work, and venture to say that that is one of the curses of the American universities. To secure employment during the term has become so much the fashion there that every student feels that he must work or violate tradition. It absorbs so much time that academic work is frequently relegated to secondary importance. I remember having been told of two engineering students in the University of Wisconsin who, during three years of their course, owned, managed

Cars may be parked around the front campus on both sides of Devonshire Place and on one side of Hoskin Avenue. There will be ample parking for a limited number of cars on the road north of the Tower to Hoskin Avenue.

It will relieve the congestion greatly if guests will walk to their cars instead of waiting to be called for. Guests are requested to have the exact fare to pay their taxis if they desire to do so on their arrival at the House.

It will save time if some arrangement can be made for payment elsewhere.

Guests should note carefully the cloak room arrangements. Ladies will use Lecture Room upstairs. The gentlemen will use the Tuck Shop Cloak Room.

No one will be admitted to the House without a ticket or allowed to re-enter. Anyone forgetting his ticket must go and get it before he will be admitted.

and did most of the work in a downtown restaurant. I don't know whether they graduated or not, but would such a distraction be possible for a student in the University of Toronto, with the standards we have? To give due attention to study, and to participate a very little in some university activities, is about all for which any student has time.

Summer employment, however much it may be a "mild spree" for "Postumus," is certainly serious for some, and, I believe, many students, whose belief in the value of a university education has been sufficient to take them away from comparatively lucrative positions (or at least from the prospect of such) for four years, stay in Toronto at their own expense. And while the revenue from summer work is not enough to permit much luxury, it is sufficient, and I know several students who are living on that alone. Part-time work at best gives only very small recompense for the valuable time it takes; so let us give due honour to those who are willing to live on a bare sufficiency, and sacrifice to their uninterrupted study the frivolities in which they could indulge with the money "Postumus" would have them earn.

A PROPOSITION

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Having just read a letter in your column from a member, presumably female, of the class of 278, concerning Torontonensis biographies, I am provoked to laughter.

Might I suggest to your correspondent that he, or she, submit for publication several quotations which in his, or her, opinion express "individuality," the same to be original, and not cribbed from former editions of the book. There being some hundreds of graduates, a short list of, say, one hundred "original" quotations would, I think, entirely prove her contention.

Yours, etc.,

the fracas which is fanciful, to say the least.

Another member of the Staff in History also agreed that the recent American historians are fairer than their predecessors. Mayor Thompson, in his opinion, is the kind of man who thinks that history ought to be a recital of national virtues, and if there be facts which do not fit in with that theory, they must be suppressed for the public welfare.

Further light is thrown on this question by Prof. Geo. M. Wrong's review of "Public Opinion on the Teaching of History in the United States," by Bessie Louise Pierce, published in New York, 1926. The review appears in the Canadian Historical Review for March 1927. Mr. Wrong says in part: "After the American Revolution there was practical unanimity in regard to the brutality to the colonies of the mother country. The second war with Great Britain in 1812-14 served further to stir patriotism among her." And farther on: "Attempts to give an impartial account of the Revolutionary War draw from no less a person than Senator Borah of Utah what the Chicago Herald and Examiner described as 'a clarion voice against the insidious effort to falsify the glorious story of the American fight for independence and to cheat the youth of this day of the heroic inspiration and sturdy manhood of the days of the Revolution.' . . . He (Senator Borah) presumed that the next step would be 'an expurgated edition' of the Declaration of Independence which would be read 'with an appropriate apology' on the Fourth of July 'should that continue to be observed.'"

Educational authorities in the city of New York called for a report on educational matters. Miss Pierce expresses their attitude in part as follows: "Even though derogatory statements regarding our national heroes might be statements of facts, they asserted that 'truth is no defence to the charge of impropriety,' for it 'is a solemn and sacred obligation' to preserve unsullied the name and fame of 'those who have battled that we might enjoy the blessings of liberty.'" and shows uncanny field judgment. His running mate, Hudson, has also been showing up extremely well this season, and may be relied upon to provide many sensations for the fans to-day, as well as causing the Vic takers considerable worry.

Vic are possibly the heavier team, with a strong line and an equally good backfield, but the latter is inclined at times toward more or less erratic playing. The plunging of Crosby, Douglas and Howe, and the open field running of this trio, have featured Vic's play all season. Unfortunately, however, the team has been badly riddled by injuries of late, and Coach "Skipper" Hill will be forced to make many drastic changes in the line-up for to-day's game. Lindsay, the star middle wing, sustained a fractured leg in the game with School, and Howe a sprained knee, so that these two will be unable to participate in this afternoon's fray. Crosby, Cannon and Addison, who all have been suffering from sprains, are expected to be back in the line-up.

The probable line-ups will be: Vic: Snap, Carson; insides, Searle, Gilbert; Imiddles, Service, Addison; outsides, Turnbull, Hager; quarter, Cannon; halves, Crosby, Douglas, Frame; flying wing, Hutton; subs, McDonald, P. Addison, Neale, Armstrong, Graham, Fletcher, Birge.

Dents: Snap, Lipson; insides, Grant, McDougal; middles, Keenan, Lappin; outsides, Hutton, Rowlands; quarter, Moore; halves, Hudson, Sinclair, Layter; flying wing, Brown; subs, Marrit, Shaver, Knowles, Masello, Lazienne and Chalmers.

and Dante called Aristotle "the" philosopher.

Following his nineteen years of wandering throughout Italy, Dante began the treatise, which in fifteen books was to have been an encyclopedia of human knowledge. Only four books were written when Dante, losing interest in it and filled with a return of the happy faith of his youth and his mystical belief, entered upon his greatest work. In it he was less the narrator than the protagonist of the moment with Virgil as the symbol of uncontaminated reason and Beatrice of beauty revealed.

of this ghetto-religion had been evolved.

The advent of Napoleon with his watchword of "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity" saw the beginning of a transformation in Jewish life. The ghettos abolished by the conqueror, the Jew had his first opportunity to reevaluate his religion in the light of scientific research. Shocked, perhaps unduly, by his discoveries, an era of apostasy set in. This moment saw the founding of modern Liberal Judaism. Such external reforms in the synagogues as the introduction of the vernacular in prayer, the mixed voice choir and the pipe-organ were executed. Obviously the reformers aimed to aestheticize the religion. The Rabbis feared heresy, and many indeed were the excommunications at the time. Woman had always taken a secondary place in Judaism, due to the Oriental influence; the reformers now proposed putting her on an equality with man.

The last stage of the development of the Liberal trend was reached when the modern scientific influence made itself felt. Religion was studied, for the first time, critically; it was subjected to all the tests of any other historical claim. The Orthodox system collapsed. The Jews began to see their faith as a growth of the old Semitic religions. It was not the fixed immutable religion of Moses, but fluid, ever changing. This resulted in a new attitude towards the Bible. No longer was it regarded as a work of divine inspiration, incapable of error: it was the product of human endeavour, and therefore liable to historical and scientific inaccuracy. The Liberal Jew came to look upon ceremony merely as an aid to his religious life; whereas the Orthodox view was that God had willed these forms of worship. "The latter concept is doubtlessly more distinctly spiritual than the former," said the Rabbi.

"We frequently hear talk of the burden of the Jewish law," said the speaker. "In the true orthodox Jew there never was such a thing." It was his pride, his joy in life, because it was authoritative. On the other hand, the modern Liberal Jew would permit no one to dictate a creed—he claimed the need of no creed.

The Liberal outlook was that there would have been a religion if there never had been a Moses, a Confucius, a Jesus, or a Mahommed. Man would have sought God from his own nature, from the very scheme of the universe, and entirely independent of external urge.

CARELESS GUNMAN LOOSED

Fifth Year Men Won Gaston
Brule Cup with Clever
Sketch

The annual explosion of the Dental Faculty took place Friday evening in the punning form of "Noctem Cuckoo." Taken all in all, it was an interesting combination of bedlam, a stunt-night, a swimming exhibition and a dance. The guests received warning that something unusual was afoot even before entering Hart House, as the bally-hoo of the collegiate midway penetrated beyond stone walls and oak doors.

The most startling feature of the midway was a careless individual who went around letting off six-shooters and other high calibre artillery. The skit of the fifth year, representing "Birdseye Centre," won the Gaston Brule Cup. Even the Grand Central Hotel and pump were there, along with the eminent "Pig-Skin Peters." Other skits represented "Snickers Lane," a series of side-shows, including wild men from their native heath, and Miss Lydia Pinkham of pill fame, who, it is alleged, kissed and covered with confusion a freshman.

The Dental Frosh shot Dan McGrew once more with all the dreadful details, and received honourable mention. The judges were Dean Secombe, Dr. Gordon McLean, and Warden Bickersteth.

One of the most attractive parts of the entertainment was the aquatic display in the Pool. A relay race, fancy and burlesque diving, hair-raising canoe antics and water polo. Alfie Phillips, Canadian low-board champion, was the star performer. A basketball game was run concurrently with the swimming.

Supper was served in conventional cafeteria style in two instalments. Dancing was held in the big gym and the East Common Room until one o'clock.

Approximately 150 students of Ohio State were hailed before Student Court for breaking traffic laws. This action was due to the lack of authority in the Interfraternity Council.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Opinions Vary Over Crib Use

Undergraduates are again invited to submit questions to be used by Diogenes in his daily search. These may be handed in to the Women's Office in U.C. or to the News Office in Hart House.

To-day's question is: "Do you approve of the use of cribs, translations, or ponies in translating a foreign language?"
F. J. MacNamara, 3T0, Eng. and Hist.: "Of course I do. An invaluable aid to the student of social propensities."

W. F. Arnold, 3T0, U.C.: "Absolutely no. I have used various cribs for many years and have always regretted their use afterwards. They may get you through, but they never increase your knowledge, and the search of knowledge should be the main reason for a university career."

R. H. Lindsay, Arts 3T1: "Yes, I think they are of great use. I've always gotten on better with them than without. They give a correct idea of the sense. But don't mislead them."

Annie Warren, 3T1, Arts: "I don't like to talk on such short notice, but occasionally they prove very handy to me."

Miss E. R. Nelles, 3T0, Vic.: "Why, certainly I couldn't get along without them. They're handiest at the last moment of study. When I can't find my own, I use somebody else's."

F. D. Lawless, 3T0, Arts: "Absolutely no. Greater profit is derived when you translate without them. But, for myself, they are of inestimable value before exams."

K. F. Tupper, 2T9, S.P.S.: "I used to use them five years ago. You can't translate Horace without one. It couldn't be done so far as I recall."

MALONEY CAPTURES NEWMAN TALK FEST

Scores Intolerance in Matters Religious and Social in Canada

LAWYERS LEAD DEBATE

The oratorical contest at Newman Hall on Sunday was won by J. Maloney of Osgoode Hall by a unanimous decision of the judges. In his speech on Canada he deplored the intolerance in matters religious and social which, he said, is so rampant in Canada. He pleaded for tolerance for all without which Canada can never be really great.

Morris Daly, also of Osgoode, in a clever talk on "Quo Vadimus," traced the development of government from early Greece to the present day, with respect to rights of state and individual. He urged students "to give to Caesar the things which are Caesar's but to be careful to keep to themselves the things which are theirs."

D. Larmay, the last speaker, and another future lawyer, related an intensely interesting narrative of the taking of New France by England. He lauded the dauntless courage of the heroes who fell on the plains of Abraham which laid the foundation for the Canada of to-day. After this, the chairman called on members of the house, and a heated discussion ensued, with P. Martin, W. Kennedy, F. Latchford and H. O'Connor taking part. Mr. O'Brien then delivered the decision.

Battered Music Box Exalted As Mascot By Varsity Grads

No Ordinary Phonograph This,
Dispensing Sore Soothing Melodies

In adopting a phonograph as a mascot the Varsity Grads hockey team have set a precedent along rather unusual lines. In the past mascots have varied, of course, ranging from Queen Boo-Hoo of Queen's to Varsity's little blue lad of the past season. No one previous to the Grads' venture had ever thought of such an inanimate object as a phonograph being chosen for a mascot. It would have been too ridiculous for words. A mascot in the old-timer's eye was something which could lead the players out on the field and of such distinctive nature as to catch the eye of the crowd.

The phonograph idea was not, as a matter of fact, begun by the Grads, but was the work of some music lover on the Intermediate football team two seasons ago. The players did, however, not seem enamoured of the idea of a phonograph as mascot, and it was only on rare occasions that its plaintive strains were heard. The Grads, however, seized on this suggestion and gave the battered old music box the highest honour a mascot could ever wish for, namely, that of an honoured member of the world's next champion hockey team.

Last season during their victorious march to the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian title, the phonograph was taken with the team as a matter of course. Between periods its squeaky melodies might be heard in the Grads dressing room soothing and heartening the players. Most of the records played are those which were popular some time ago. They are as unchanging as the phonograph, and to the team are more than mere ordinary records just as the phonograph is no ordinary machine.

Next year when the Alumni visit the Olympiad in quest of the world's hockey championship, the phonograph will take its second really long trip, the first being to Vancouver last spring in the Dominion finals. For a plain simple little music producer it is remarkably well travelled, and by next spring will have seen more of this earth than any but a fortunate few will ever realize.

The phonograph is not just a passing whim with the Grads. It has become so essential to the team that its departure would call forth the same pangs as would the loss of a human companion. The Grads are to be congratulated on their choice of a mascot, one which will ever have a cheery message for the team even during the closest and hardest fought game, and one which has set a precedent which may lead who knows where.

Dr. Curry Raps Rationalizing of Nazarene Teachings to Sanction Conduct

DISCUSSION AT TRINITY

It will be a long time before those who were privileged to hear Dr. Bruce Curry will forget the inspiration created at the four discussion groups at Trinity Library. Dr. Curry took "the book approach" method in the groups. The standards of Jesus as set forth in the gospels were applied to modern day problems. Footnotes had been the cause of a very great deal of misinterpretation of what Jesus taught. We read into the ideals of the Nazarene whatever would tend to sanction our conduct. Hence we found a basis for war, for divorce, for anger, for capital punishment. It was necessary to give a modern interpretation, but the ideal must not be lost.

On Sunday the study group was brought to face the limit that Jesus went to in order to get across His teaching about life. Disciples of Jesus must not count the cost. Questions came up about the meaning of His death, Peter's rebuke, and the way of the Cross. Why did some people call Him John the Baptist, or one of the prophets? Dr. Curry showed how these answers were insufficient. Jesus knew He was the Messiah, but He did not want people to misinterpret the meaning of Messiahship. "Do we accept both the 'Who and I' and 'The Cross' as His teaching of life?"

Unique Bureau For Rent Hose May Be Started

Socks with holes in them are now in demand by the members of the Free Lance Club, who have started a mending bureau for the purpose of darned socks at so much a darn. A table of rates has not yet been made public, but men would do well to take a chance and have a sock darned in the good old-fashioned way rather than by the draw string method.

All this was decided at a hike which was held by the Free Lances on Saturday afternoon to the Ladies' Golf and Tennis Club, Thornhill, where they were the dinner guests of Dr. Gordon.

French Commission Eyes Hart House For Duplication In Paris College

A commission of four educationalists sent out by the French Government to inspect academic and student club buildings in the universities of the United States and Canada visited the University over the week-end. Hart House, as the outstanding men's club, along with the new building at Cornell University, in America, especially attracted their attention. The data to be collected concerning such institutions on this side of the water will be used in the forthcoming enlargement of the Université de la Cité de Paris.

The visitors were Monsieur A. Desclous, Monsieur F. Branel, Senator Honnorat and Monsieur L. Bechman. In an interview the visiting commission expressed themselves as specially interested in Hart House from an architectural standpoint, and in the resources of the House from an athletic, amusement and cultural standpoint. Monsieur Desclous is the Assistant Director of the National Bureau of French Universities. Senator Honnorat is an ex-Secretary of Education.

CANINE CHIEF NIPS INDIANS, GETS PRESENTS

Says Prof. McIlwraith in Convocation Hall Lecture Saturday

TELLS OF POTLACH CUSTOM

Slides Shown Depicting B.C. Indian Tribe "Au Naturel"

"The Indian is not a taciturn person at all," said Prof. T. T. McIlwraith in his lecture at Convocation Hall Saturday night, confirming his statement by a slide showing two women of the Bella Coola tribe, British Columbia, wearing the broadest of smiles.

This false idea of the Indian as a very stern-visaged person was due to his effort to maintain that pride of race so dear to him which he felt threatened by the presence of white men.

When he arrived among the Bella Coola, said the speaker, he was presented to one of the most important men of the tribe, who immediately wanted to know what he had come for, Prof. McIlwraith replied: "To become better acquainted with you."

"Then I think you are one very wise man," was the reply.

This showed not a foolish conceit on the part of the Indian but their inherent pride of race. He realized that his people must soon become extinct and, if knowledge of their lives and customs was to survive, they must be studied now before it was too late.

One of their very interesting customs was that known as Potlatch. Every event of importance was celebrated by the giving of presents. Thus money or its equivalent was kept in circulation. He was one day bitten by a dog, continued Prof. McIlwraith, but when he complained to the owners they told him the dog was a chief and was allowed to do as he liked. They had adopted him, given him the name of a famous dead chief, and validated it by the giving of presents. Now the dog was actually looked upon as a chief and had developed the interesting habit of nipping the backs of legs, no one daring to protest.

At a celebration, he said, he was asked to sing one of the Indian songs, to which he consented. For the benefit of the audience in Convocation Hall he repeated his performance. It was received with very hearty applause, almost necessitating an encore. Not so at the Indian celebration. After he had finished, an old woman arose and poured forth a tirade by which it was finally discovered that the song belonged to her family, and only members of that family might sing it, and then only on special occasions. Its adoption had been validated by potlatch. There was only one thing to be done—the woman immediately

WHAT IS WRONG WITH WOMEN'S SPORT

Unless there is some great change in the attitude of the women of the University of Toronto towards sport, women's sports, as a whole, are due to be dropped from the campus activities. There is an almost total indifference manifest among the students towards games of any sort.

In U.C., the largest college, especially, fall sports have been crowded out by social engagements, the "rushing" season, and conflicting organizations. In fact, it is a question whether women's sports are being "recognized" by the great majority. In some colleges, players have to be coaxed, yes, almost dragged out to the practices by those few who are keen, while positions on the team are no longer gained by competition, but would seem to constitute an endurance award for practice-attendance.

Sports began, in the earlier days of the University, when, with absolutely no equipment, everyone turned out for the love of the game. Not only have women, presumably, no longer an interest in sport for its own sake, but College spirit, in that connection, seems to be going the same way. This Fall, at great effort and some expense, a Women's Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament was inaugurated at Varsity, to which players came from Queen's and Western. The splendid courts of the Toronto Tennis Club were secured, and—a handful of supporters turned out to cheer. Anyone passing might have thought it a debutante's tea party, instead of a live and interesting college contest.

Why carry on the farce? Players who have been reluctantly coaxed into a game are not going to derive any pleasure therefrom. Certainly the managers and coaches are not having any fun, while if only a dozen or so of loyal supporters turn out for each game, the pleasure of the audience is not to be considered.

Can the existence of women's sport, as it stands at the present time, and as it tends to become, justified by the thinking woman undergraduate? The making of schedules, arranging for games, and the appointment of coaches are now in the hands of the students, but, if it is able to survive at all, women's sport is travelling in the right direction toward staff supervision, and complete control.

PIG WALLOW'S AND FOX-TROT'S

The recent business at Gueph was a happy occasion indeed for newspaper correspondents writing on space rates and for those select wits in our midst that seize every opportunity to hurl the epithet "Cow college" at a sister institution. But disregarding the interesting local colour of the affair and the disobedience of the Biblical adage by the participants who are reported to have cast their pearls before the swine, we are interested in the two questions it raises—"Should students be allowed to haze their fellows?" and "If not, how are you going to restrain or divert their energies?" It is a well-known fact that a body of boys or men exhausts its surplus energies and achieves a peace of soul and calm of spirit in thumping one of their number. Who is he that gets slapped? This unlovable role is generally played by some unfortunate that differs in some way or other, rightly or wrongly, from the rest. Yet the University of Toronto, keeping abreast with the most progressive ideas in modern education, has for the past two years enforced its rules against personal violence and interference with the personal liberty of the individual to the extent of strictly prohibiting even organized initiations. The upper years are allowed to distribute caps and ties to the freshmen, but are forbidden, practically, to enforce the custom. And this has caused very little worry in the student body and absolutely no protest.

Why not? The answer is that the modern university has moved on. The coming of the co-eds has brought stress to the social side, and as men turn daily more and more to teas and dances and recreation, the memory fades away of the "he-men" of old that found their joy and comfort in breaking up a show downtown with vegetables and rotten eggs on Halloween, and were lifted to ecstatic heights when they could exchange wallops with the "dampolis."

Co-education is not the only feature of the university of to-day. Growth has brought the necessity for the increase in regulations and red tape. We have our own police to guard us, day and night. We are watched sedulously even when paying our fees. Graduates say

Robin Hood Garb Features Foresters' Stunt Night

Forestry's annual stunt night was celebrated Friday evening with a programme of "theatricals" and dancing. As was the custom in past years, the freshmen entertained with a short skirt. A. M. F. Van Eeden and J. B. Millar, the principals in the play, kept the audience in laughter during the whole of their performance.

Dancing, which whiled away the greater part of the programme, took place in the Common Room and Library. Forestry relics, souvenirs and equipment, along with the woodsman's garb of the foresters, lent an atmosphere of the wide open spaces. Dancing continued until one o'clock, when the evening was brought to a close with "God Save the King" and a lusty Forestry yell.

Loretto Lit. Rejects Church-State Merger

At the second meeting of the Loretto Literary Society the first of the series of inter-year debates was held. The subject, "Resolved that there should be some political union between church and State," was upheld by Fourth Year, represented by Miss Monica Goodrow and Miss Helen Coughlin, while Third Year, represented by Miss Marie Hefferman and Miss Mary Atkinson, opposed the resolution. After a very interesting and spirited debate, the decision was awarded to the negative. The judges who kindly gave their services were Mr. J. F. Power, Mr. John Mahon and Mr. William Donohue. The President of the Society, Miss Josephine Brophy, extended a vote of thanks to the judges on behalf of the Literary.

book, and then say to Charlie or Freddie or Reggie or Frankie or Jimmie, "Run up to the Toronto University, and see what you can do."

So that this week it is announced with great élan that we call a certain w.k. Simcoe official "Jimmie." That is perfectly lovely as far as it goes, but how many know him so intimately? Don't all speak at once.

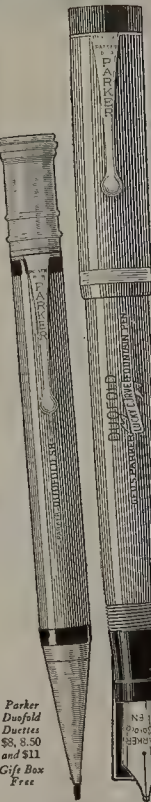

From this one would gather that all the undergraduates do is go about the campus saying "Ah there, Jimmie! Tootle-oo Bobbie! What-ho, Joey," and all is merry as a S.C.M. dinner or a Quaker meeting. "They call him Jimmy"—and as the French poils said: "They shall not pass!" If you ever feel the overpowering desire to get intimate with the great, just try it once—and the second time, the Outside World will no longer be outside.

VARSITY JUNIORS BEAT U.T.S. IN FIRST ROUND S.P.A. SERIES

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity Grads demonstrated on Saturday night that they have lost none of their old cunning. Marlboros presented a strong line-up, even though the celebrated Harry Watson did not perform and the Grads walked away with a 7 to 3 victory. Their next game is Saturday of this week, when the fans will witness the unusual spectacle of two blue teams fighting it out on the ice. The Varsity team and the Grads will do battle in the S.P.A. series, and it looks like a real game. The two teams were scheduled to meet last season in the Allan Cup play-downs, but the Varsity team decided not to continue.

While the Grads will probably be favourites, they will not have any cinch in beating the Undergrads. The Intercollegiate team this year promises to be a strong one, and a real contender for honours in the O.H.A.

Tigers pulled one of the best plays on Saturday that we have seen in many a day. It was the much abused on-side kick. But it was the only one we ever saw that looked as if anyone knew what was going to happen. The Tigers were only a few yards from the Beaches line on the third down. An on-side was called, and the wings ran for the open field as the ball was right along the touch line. Balmy Beach shifted to block the Tigers, and McKelvey went around the short end and waited behind the line till Batstone kicked the ball to him.

Most on-sides look like nothing but a kick and a prayer; this one looked as if it had been figured out in advance.

Considering the day, both backfields gave wonderful exhibitions. Fumbles were the scarest thing on the field, and the running was a treat. All in all it was a game worthy of the finals.

Varsity Juniors got away to a flying start in the Junior S.P.A. series on Friday night when they took the U.T.S. entry into camp. Frank Sullivan has rounded up a squad this year that looks just about good enough to give any team a battle. Marlboro Juniors are being heralded as the pick of the local junior teams, but the Dukes will have to step to take the measure of this fast-going Blue squad.

The day after the Junior hockey team opened the season, the Junior rugby team played its final game of the year in the C.R.U. finals. The locals went down to defeat before M.A.A.A., last year's champions, but at that they deserve a lot of credit. They came through the Intercollegiate season with flying colours, and after two weeks' lay-off were only beaten by a small margin on the home grounds of the champions.

The band made a hit at half-time at Saturday's game when it played "Just Like a Butterfly That's Caught in the Rain." The fans were wondering if the bandmaster just picked the selection by accident or if possibly he was making a reference to Leadley and the rest of the Tiger team.

Gordon Johnston, who played centre on last year's Intermediate basketball team, and was shaping up well for that position on the Intercollegiate this season, while at practice last week gave his ankle a bad sprain. This means that he will be out of practice for at least three weeks, just when practice counts most, and hence be a serious set-back for the Varsity squad.

three in the second period, and added two more in the final frame. Marlboros tied the Grads in the first frame with two tallies, but were unable to count again till the final period, when they got their third goal.

Dave Trotter opened the scoring for the Blue team on a pass from "Red" Porter. Heintzman and Nugent combined to tie it up ten minutes later, the former scoring the goal. Hughie Plaxton put the Grads one up when he scored on Trotter's pass, and "Red" Foster came right back thirty seconds later to tie the score for the second time.

Hughie Plaxton got two goals in the second period, both on passes from Hudson. And Lou got one himself when he stole the puck inside Marlboros' blue line and whipped it past Baker.

Dave Trotter got his goal in the final period on a pretty solo effort, and Lou Hudson tallied again, this time on a pass from Plaxton. Grant ended the scoring when he beat Sullivan after a single-handed rush through the Grad team.

The game lacked excitement until the last period, when it began to liven up. Hudson and "Red" Foster staged a private war and were rewarded with a rest for the remainder of the game. Taylor followed them to the penalty box, and Hughie Plaxton also spent the last few minutes of the game under the watchful eye of the time-keeper. As a result of these excursions to the penalty box the teams played the last two minutes of the game with only four men each on the ice.

It is always useless to attempt to pick stars on the Grads team without mentioning every one in the line-up. The forward line was working pretty Saturday night and accounted for all the goals, though the first one came on a pass from Porter. The defence players could not seem to tally for some reason or other, but they were dangerous every time they ventured into enemy territory.

Heintzman and Ross Paul were the most effective of the Marlboro players, and though Paul did not break into the scoring column he was a constant threat and was robbed by hard

JUNIORS LOSE OUT TO M.A.A.A. TEAM IN MINOR SERIES

Montreal Did All Scoring in First Two Verses of Final Game

WEATHER MADE GOING HARD

Juniors Put Up Strong Fight Against Powerful Team Fielded by Montreal

Only after one of the most grueling gridiron battles ever staged in Montreal, the Varsity Juniors tasted the bitter pill of defeat when the M.A.A.A. twelve, last year's Dominion minor champions, retained the title by the score of 7-2.

The game was a tough one to lose, a wonderful battle to win, and the Blue team, the good sportsmen that they are, were the first to congratulate the Canadian champions.

The Montreal team did all their scoring in the first two verses of the tussle, and they had slightly the better of the play in these quarters. The Blues were classier in the latter half, and when the final whistle sounded were forcing the Montreal clan to the limit, and it seemed that the Blue attack would garner a touch, but fate had it otherwise, and the last on-side kick was picked up by Fletcher, the M.A.A.A. quarter, to save the game for the champs.

Both Varsity singles came in the third quarter off the hoof of Spencer, who divided the booting with Woods. The entire Blue and White team played excellent rugby, and the breaks were the only thing that made the difference in the result.

The Winged Wheelers touch came when Spencer miscued on the oval, the ball rolling to a Montreal half, who galloped across for the only try of the entire game.

The other two points gathered in by the Canadian champs came in the first quarter, when the smart kicking of Ayer made the Varsity team rouge twice. Although the conditions of the field were adverse to good football, the "kids" provided plenty of classy

VARSITY JR. HOCKEY TEAM OPENS SEASON WITH WIN

U.T.S. Defeated 7-3 by 'Kids' in Initial Encounter in Big Four Group

The Varsity Junior hockey outfit started the Blue season off on the right hoof when they won on their first appearance 7-3 at the expense of the U.T.S. squad. The Varsity sextette showed bright form for so early in the season, and their victory augurs well for the "kids'" progress in the Big Four group in the coming season. The Frank Sullivan coached clan with almost an entirely new team was impressive, with Gordie Beal standing at the pivot position. He scatted miles and accounted for three goals and worked in well on the three-man

CHAMPIONSHIP TITLE WON BY BALMY BEACH

Fans Favouring Hamilton Team Received Season's Surprise by Beach Victory

ODDS WERE 3-1 ON TIGERS

Balmy Beach pulled the surprise of the year in the final game of the year at the Varsity Stadium on Saturday when they stepped into the Hamilton Tigers, the odds-on favourites, and sent the Bengals back to Jungletown on the short end of a 9-6 score. Incidentally the game was no mere filling of a date, as Beaches by virtue of their victory are entitled to be referred to as "Dominion Champions," a title which is not to be sneezed at.

It was the surprise of the season to all but the most hardened Beach supporters. Everyone recognized, of course, that the east enders were a strong, game, dangerous team, but Hamilton looked just too good. And when the game started and Beaches ran up six points in the first minute or so the stands went almost wild. It was almost unbelievable, and there were many who thought it was only a flash in the pan. But at half time the Beaches were leading by 9 to 0, and it looked as if they would pile up still more points. Even then some of the wise ones thought that Tigers would stage a comeback. They did, but they didn't come far enough. Every time they got real dangerous Balmy put on an added spurt and took command of the situation.

The Hamilton supporters were certainly all set for a victory. Led by Sammy Manson they organized a "Camels' Club," and before the game started performed their sacred rites on the playing field with the idea of jinxing the Toronto team. But their sacrifices burnt and otherwise went unnoticed by a perverse goddess of luck and were all to no avail.

A second demonstration was staged at half time, and though slightly more successful it did not go far enough. Just how they could have gone any further is hard to see, but something must have been wrong, for though Fate was more kind to them in the second half, they were still three points short when the final whistle blew.

And what a demonstration took place when that last blast of the season finally put an end to the Tigers' sufferings and crowned four years of effort on the part of Balmy Beach

VIC TEAM WINNERS MULOCK CUP SERIES

Smashing Defeat of Dentistry Brings Cup to Victoria After Four Years

INTERFACULTY RUGBY ENDS

The Interfaculty rugby season was brought to a close on Friday afternoon when Victoria College defeated Dentistry in the Mulock Cup final at the Stadium by the score of 16 to 2. This brings the Cup back to the northeast corner of the park after an absence of four years. It was last held by Vic in 1923, when with such stars as Harry Bales, Ralph Mills, Buzz Daly and their present coach, Skip Hill, on their team, Vic were successful in lifting the coveted trophy.

On Friday the better team won, although the score might possibly be a slight exaggeration of their margin of the play. Dents started out strongly and in the first quarter had the champions on the defensive. An unfortunate break, however, gave Vic a touchdown and the lead, and a similar coincidence at the beginning of the second half seemed to take the heart out of Dents, and Vic romped home with an easy victory. In the last quarter, however, Dents made a last desperate attempt, scoring a lone point and holding Vic in their own end of the field.

rugby, and the fight was worthy of the Dominion final.

Varsity looked to be away for a sure touch in the second quarter when they tore up the Wheelers' line for yards time and again, but in the crucial moment when the Blues were in the excellent position for scoring, the ball was fumbled on the line, and the Montreals kicked out of danger. It was a tough break, and the Blues got many of them. The going was hard, and the freezing weather made it difficult to grasp the olive, let alone carry it on the line plays.

In this same period the M.A.A.A. team began the steam rolling work over the Blue team, but a fumble gave Varsity possession, and it was at this juncture that Easterners made the touch that decided the game.

After the kick-off the Varsity team pepped up with a will and were forcing like the mischief, but the half time toot called off the great rally. The Varsity team deserves all the credit in the world for their strong fight against a team that have on their line-up no less than eight of the last year's team that won the Dominion title. The Blue Infants showed themselves as a game outfit, and the Varsity rooters can feel proud that their representatives are the fighting team that gave the Montreal outfit the greatest scare in their entire season.

back, when the Vic wings gave the opposing halves no yards. Half time score: Vic 5, Dents 1.

To start the second half, Dents pulled the prize bone-head of the afternoon. Carson kicked off for Vic and the ball rolled to within a few feet of the deadline, where Moore and Hudson were waiting for the ball to go over when Addison fell on it for a touchdown, which was converted beautifully by Carson, to give the Scarlet and Gold a substantial lead of 11 to 1. Dents tried a number of trick plays and fake kicks repeatedly, but were thrown for losses. Crosby and Douglas ripped the Blue and Maroon line for yards twice in succession. On a delayed kick, Turnbull tackled Sinclair hard, and Addison picked up a loose ball and galloped over the touchline, but the ball was called back for running interference after a lengthy discussion. On the next play Crosby broke through and went 25 yards for Vic's third touchdown, which Frame failed to convert. Three-quarter time score: Vic 16, Dents 1.

In the last quarter Dents staged a rally, which was productive of a single point, when Frame was forced to rouge. Crosby and McDougal provided some excitement for the fans when a fistic encounter broke out, which had been brewing all afternoon. Both players were penalized for five minutes. For the remainder of the game Vic were content to play a safe game, maintaining possession of the ball as long as possible, and were held pretty much in their own end of the field by Dents.

The line-ups:

Vic: Flying wing, Hatton; halves, Douglas, Frame and Crosby; quarter, Cannon; snap, Carson; insides, Searle, Gilbert; middles, Service, Addison; outsides, Hager, Turnbull; subs, Fletcher, McDonald, Neale, Armstrong, Birge.

Dents: Flying wing, Brown; halves, Sinclair, Hudson, Layter; quarter, Moore; snap, Lipson; insides, Grant, McDougal; middles, Keenan, Lapping; outsides, Hatton, Rowlands; subs, Shaver, Marrit, Knowles, Mascillo, Lazene and Chalmers.

Referee: Parks.
Umpire: Carroll.

with the highest honours possible of attainment in Canadian rugby. Many of the Beach supporters had attended the game and sat through two hours of drizzling rain out of pure loyalty to their team, and when the final whistle blew and they realized that their dream had come true, they went almost wild. The crowd rushed down from the bleachers and carried its heroes round and round the field to the accompaniment of endless hand-shaking and back-slapping.

And the last word of the defeated Tigers, who had come prepared to celebrate a victory in true Tiger style, was voiced by Sam Manson as he left the Stadium sorrowfully announcing to all who would listen, "And he didn't kick a single field goal, did he?"

"Pep" Leadley, master of the art of adopted Prof. McIlwraith into her family.

Slides of very great beauty showed the country which formed the home of this people. Mountains and very dense forest, mostly cedar, were the outstanding characteristics. The climate was very pleasant in summer. In winter it rained. Roads were passable for automobile transport in summer. In winter rubber boots were necessary, varying from ankle to hip length. Thus water transport was the prevailing method. The density of the forest made agriculture a difficult pursuit so that fish, principally salmon, provided the means of subsistence. To one who had lived there the pungent smell of drying fish would always be associated with the region.

But the tribe of the Bella Coola was a dying race, said Prof. McIlwraith. Their civilization and culture had practically disappeared. A tribe of 7,000 had dwindled now to come 350. If we were to build on that culture we had to understand it, for it was a real culture. It was only the medium we did not understand. A study of the life of a primitive people was the best way to bridge the gap from their culture to what we were bringing them.

drop-kicking, was heralded as the big threat of the Tiger team, but a soggy ball and the fact that Tigers rarely got within scoring distance combined to keep the field goal column a blank. Tigers' famous line-crashing attack was held by the Beaches line, and the only big gains made by the champions of the Big Four were on their end runs.

The Beaches deserve all the credit in the world for their victory. They have fought an uphill fight for four years and at last have reached their objective. Every man on the team gave all he had and the team played like champions. But the individual honours must go to one of the youngest players on the field, a player who may be correctly termed the "find of the season," "Red" Moore. The youthful backfield star came through time and time again when Tigers threatened with runs through the broken field that brought the crowd to its feet. His partner, "Yip" Foster, was another mighty factor in the victory.

RULES ARRANGED FOR U.C. FOLLIES BY THE COMMITTEE

Cars Approaching Hart House Must Follow Out the Arranged Routes

FRESHMEN EAT FIRST

Anyone Forgetting His Ticket
Will Be Obligated to Return Home For It

The U.C. Follies Committee request the co-operation of guests in regard to the following regulations:

All cars approaching and leaving Hart House must do so by arranged routes. Taxis will enter from Queen's Park and proceed west to the southern front of Hart House, leaving their passengers at the south-west door. They will then turn south and leave by College Street. Taxis calling for guests after the dance will line up on the road around the lawn in front of the House. They will be called by number when wanted. When its number is called, each taxi will drive up to the south-west door from the east to get its passengers. They will turn north then and leave via the Tower and Hoskin Avenue.

Cars may be parked around the front campus on both sides of Devonshire Place and on one side of Hoskin Avenue. There will be angle parking for a limited number of cars on the road north of the Tower to Hoskin Avenue.

It will relieve the congestion greatly if guests will walk to their cars instead of waiting to be called for. Guests are requested to have the exact fare to pay their taxis if they desire to do so on their arrival at the House. It will save time if some arrangement can be made for payment elsewhere.

Guests should note carefully the Cloak Room arrangements. Ladies will use the Billiard Room and the Tuck Shop Cloak Room; gentlemen the Sketch Room and the corridor adjoining.

No one will be admitted to the House without a ticket. Anyone forgetting his ticket will be obliged to go home for it. No one will be permitted to leave the House and re-enter during the function.

The Committee begs particularly to remind guests that the use of the gallery of the swimming pool in future depends on the observance of the rules.

Premier Ferguson

The Hon. George Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, will conclude the Hart House debate in the Lecture Room on Wednesday evening. The resolution will be, "Resolved that it would not be in the best interests of Canada to have the power to amend her own constitution." Premier Ferguson will speak in favour of the resolution for half an hour after the four speakers on the paper and the four from the floor of the House. In honouring the debates in this way Premier Ferguson is following the example of other such distinguished men as Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Premier King and others who have spoken on the paper or from the floor of the House. The subject is one that was discussed at the recent meeting of Provincial Premiers in Ottawa.

U.C. PARLIAMENTARY CLUB HOLDS MEETING

MacGregor Administration Defeated by Decisive Margin
Nine Votes

REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

The MacGregor administration was decisively defeated by a 13-4 vote at the U.C. Parliamentary Club on Monday afternoon. The motion before the House was "Resolved that Hart House activities are detrimental to University College spirit." A more serious tone than that of the previous meeting was employed by the speakers and was approved by several members.

Mr. Gelber prefaced his arguments for the affirmative with a hope that in the future less "conscious striving to be witty and superficial" would be evinced. He pointed to Oxford and Cambridge as examples of strong college spirit, and likened the University of Toronto to them. Hart House influenced undergraduates to put their university before their college or faculty.

Mr. Calto led the arguments of the opposition. While co-education to him was detrimental to U.C. spirit, Hart House excited a contrary influence.

Mr. Price Brown stressed the fact that U.C. had 100 years' tradition behind it. Evidence of lack of college spirit were afforded in the poor attendance at the Lit meetings. He deprecated the fact that U.C. crests were unobtainable and U.C. pennants inadequate.

Mr. Gringorten was the fourth speaker. He emphasized the value of Hart House in building up both university and college spirit. Its athletic and debating activities were proof of this.

As the result of the vote shows, most of the members declared themselves against the motion. Previous to the debate, a committee to revise the constitution was formed, consisting of Mr. MacGregor, the Premier, Mr. Curry, Leader of the Opposition, and Mr. Beamish.

RECENT PRESIDENT OF OXFORD UNION VISITS HART HOUSE

Mr. R. A. Lindsay, a Candidate

TO SPEAK IN HART HOUSE

A Privilege for Public Men to Attend Undergraduate Debating Societies

Mr. R. A. Lindsay, a recent graduate of Oxford, and a candidate in the last election in England, was a recent visitor to Hart House. As an ex-president of the Oxford Union and a member of the debating team which visited this continent in 1922, Mr. Lindsay was particularly interested in Hart House debates.

Commenting on the coming debate at which the Prime Minister of Ontario will speak, Mr. Lindsay said: "It will give fresh status and dignity to your debating union. At Oxford the customary procedure was to secure one big man each term to participate and enter into the spirit of the debate. Any public man ought to feel it a privilege to attend a Hart House debate for the chance it affords to influence indirectly the contribution of the younger generation to public life." Mr. Lindsay said that, on the other hand, it was the responsibility of the undergraduates to take their policies seriously and intelligently enough to interest and justify such men in coming.

In speaking of the characteristic debating methods of the English and American speakers, Mr. Lindsay said: "Here is another occasion in which Canada may choose the happy medium between the stiff and legalist American procedure and the polished but often irrelevant English method."

Mr. Lindsay said that a recent debate at the University of Manitoba which, he had lately visited, was an excellent example of the happy medium method.

Mr. Lindsay has been invited to attend the Hart House debate as a guest of the speaker, and will be asked to speak from the floor of the House.

PROF. BARKER SPEAKS TO GERMAN CLUB ON EUROPE

The German State of Mind
Much Better Than That of the Victorious Nations

"I found Germany and Austria in a better state of mind than English countries," said Professor Barker Fairley in speaking to the members of the German Study Club on his recent trip to Europe, last night in Wymilwood. "By this I mean that their attitude towards the war and towards those who conquered them is much more free from prejudice than that of the victorious nations."

Professor Fairley illustrated this statement by recounting a conversation he had had with a Frenchman and another with a German, in which the contrasting attitudes were very marked. While the Frenchman spoke bitterly of the last war, and outlined plans for the next one, the German was much more inclined to stand back and view the whole affair as a gigantic farce, with his own part in it the greatest joke of all.

Going on to speak of other aspects of his visit, Professor Fairley described café life in Vienna, with which he had been charmed.

The programme was concluded by a piano solo by Miss Isobel Watkins and two German songs by Miss Helen Allen.

EQUAL RESPONSIBILITY SHARED BY WHOLE YEAR

The hazing of an English student, Edward Beddoes, at the Ontario Agricultural College has drawn wide attention. Yesterday six students, in the First Year, singled out by the authorities as ringleaders, were fined two hundred dollars by the police magistrate. The following is an account of the whole episode from the standpoint of the First Year, as described by the special correspondent of "The Varsity" at Guelph. This is the first complete and authentic description of the hazing, written by an eye-witness from among the students themselves, to appear.

Guelph, Nov. 26.—In the opinion of the First Year, the already famous Freshman had either to be sent to "Coventry" or to undergo a public ragging, and the latter was deemed the better way. At a tribute it was decided that there must be no ringleaders, nobody upon whom the larger weight of the responsibility could be placed; and so plans were laid. The "unfortunate youth" (to quote the press) was not so unfortunate as many others treated in a similar way in the past, for great care was taken that neither his personal belongings nor his appearance should be damaged. A clean crate was procured, the bottom of it covered with old blankets, and a suit of second-hand overalls bought to protect his clothes. Precautions were taken that the eggs used would be fresh, and the tomatoes in their prime from a culinary point of view.

Applied Science

On Thursday, December 1st, the lectures in the Faculty of Applied Science will begin at 9 a.m. The second part of the time table will also come into effect from that day until Christmas.

U. OF T. HAZING NO LONGER VIOLENT

Guelph Incident Resurrects
Question Which Agitated
Toronto Years Ago

SOME INCIDENTS OF PAST

That University of Toronto has had her share of initiations is evidenced by interesting facts gleaned from "Varsity" of former years. While there is no record of events which might be directly compared with the much-discussed pig wallow at Guelph, it is learned that freshmen have, in the past, been forced through trying initiations, and have been severely punished for offences (alleged) against academic seniors.

At the School of Science initiation of 1922, it is found that the freshmen succeeded in locking the sophomores in the old gym, and then introduced ammonia through an opening in the roof. It had been planned to use a weak solution, but through some error a concentrated solution was substituted. The frosh soon learned their mistake, but could somehow only make an opening large enough to let one man out at a time. The result was that many of the sophs were almost asphyxiated; in fact, the last dozen were scarcely able to move, and the last six had to be dragged out by their comrades. The freshmen were then drawn up outside in military formation, under the leadership of an ex-colonel and an ex-bugler. The sophs rushed and seized the leaders, and so disheartened the frosh that about seventy-five per cent. fled. The remainder, outnumbered four to one, were captured and beaten unmercifully and scientifically with barrel staves.

One little fellow was so abused that he could not move, but the relentless avengers continued to beat him on the head. When the vengeance of the sophomores was apparently satisfied, the unfortunate 276 men were marched around behind the gym, where the

The "criminal" was caught (without difficulty) and carried (not without difficulty, for he weighs over 200 lbs) to the crate, which stood upon a light one-horse wagon. So solicitous were the students for his comfort that they lowered him into the bottom half of the suit of overalls, instead of letting him put them on in the usual manner. His coat, waistcoat and sundry valuables were given over for safe keeping, and he climbed into the crate under his own power. Not a rope touched him during the whole affair, nor were his hands and feet tied in any way once he was in the crate, and his head was allowed to stick through the top, as the crate was rather small for a man of his bulk.

When he was comfortable, the parade moved off in the direction of the town, in an orderly manner. In fact, the Guelph constable who was on duty that night met it on the main street and turned up a side street before the disturbance began. A large band of people about to enter the "Castle" Theatre were sighted on the horizon, and the live-stock transport made all

GOUGH TROPHY DEBATE HELD AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Subject is "Resolved That Canada's Protective Tariff Should Be Raised"

The second Gough Trophy debate of the year was held Wednesday at St. Michael's College on the question, "Resolved that Canada's protective tariff should be raised." W. Mogan, the first speaker for the affirmative, contended that low tariff was crippling Canada's trade and commerce, quoting the Alberta coal question as an example. R. Moore, the second speaker, held that a low tariff selects a country's most suitable products as in the case of the pulp industry of Canada.

The third speaker of the evening, E. Quigley, said that any great nation must maintain industry within itself and that Canada's manufacturing was declining, as in the case of woollen goods, due to low tariff. The last speaker, R. Toulman, quoted Horace, "In medio stat virtus," as the opening of his speech. He claimed that his opponents were forgetting the golden mean and stated that with a high tariff Canada would be owned by American capitalists.

Mr. B. O'Boyle gave the judgment awarding the decision to the affirmative and picking Mogan and Quigley as the best speakers of the evening.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Weary Wedlock or New Wooing

Do you believe in trial marriages with a view to deciding the compatibility of the contracting parties?

A. H. Tiplin, Classics II, Victoria: "Yes, I believe in the five-year trial marriages to keep the spirit of sweetheart days forever fresh because of the necessity of wooing every five years or being thrown out. As regards the children, surely a child will be better off in a peaceful home with strangers than in a perpetual hell with his parents."

F. S. Grundy, I Yr., S.P.S.: "I don't believe in trial marriages, because I think we should follow the ruling which God gave us. It would only lead to the ruin of social law and order."

F. A. Upjohn: "I think it is a rather good idea. So many marriages are made in haste and after a year or so the parties concerned regret it. They learn to know each other as they did not before. Of course I think in the case of trial marriages, children, if any, should be suitably provided for."

Miss L. K. Green, III U.C.: "No, I don't believe in trial marriages. The civil consequences of such a system overbalance the so-called benefits. Moreover, in time, reactionary forces, which are already at work, will make the idea contemptible to right-thinking people."

Miss F. H. Anderson, III U.C.: "Absolutely no. If you make a bad bargain, it is poor sportsmanship not to live up to it. It would tend to weaken character and judgment of our people."

H. Branson, 4th B. and M., Trinity: "Personally I think it is a very excellent idea, but unfortunately our society of to-day will object. And, of course, what would become of the resulting offspring? State institutions would result in loss of individuality. But first it will be necessary to convince the powers that be."

TO-MORROW'S DEBATE

The second of the Hart House debates occurs to-morrow night: an occasion of importance, not only because of the question to be discussed, but also because of the presence on the floor of the House of the Prime Minister of Ontario, who is to speak "on the paper."

As an alumnus and as Minister of Education, Mr. Ferguson meets always with a warm welcome in the University. On this occasion he will be doubly welcome, for he is the first of our provincial Prime Ministers to take part, as an ordinary member of the House, in a student debate.

The readiness with which political leaders of national, and even international, reputation now visit Hart House on these occasions has brought about a curious reversal of fortune. Not so long ago the traditions of the Oxford and Cambridge Unions were at the same time the admiration and the despair of our own university debaters. Here were two old Societies (each of which has actually celebrated its Centenary) and of each it might be said that it had been for generations a nursery of statesmen. Each possessed a prestige in virtue of which its invitations to Cabinet Ministers, ex-Cabinet Ministers and would-be Cabinet Ministers were accepted, not as an obligation to be discharged, but as a coveted honour. What prospect is there, demanded more than one debating enthusiast in the University of Toronto, that our own Hart House debates will ever occupy the same position?

The prospect, originally, was not hopeful: but within a very few years great changes have occurred. To-day we have realized our first ambition, and despite the difficulties and discouragements first encountered, it is no new thing to-day to see men of the first rank in national politics tilting in our debates. When last year the Prime Minister of Canada participated in a Hart House debate the situation was so novel that it was felt necessary to restrict speaking to those "on the paper." To-morrow there is not this restriction; after the four undergraduate speakers "on the paper" the debate will be open to the House, and four or five members who catch the Speaker's eye will be allowed to speak for five minutes each. The visit of a Prime Minister no longer disrupts the procedure of the House. Indeed, we have perhaps bettered a little the contemporary record of our exemplars in the ancient British Universities. It is not long since a President of the Cambridge Union, who was a guest in Hart House, confessed to one of his hosts in this University, "We have always been accustomed in the past to getting front-bench men from Westminster at Union debates. Within the last year or two we have found it increasingly difficult to do so. Just at present, we can only say that we wish we had your luck."

Not a little of the credit for the standing of the Hart House debates belongs, it should be remembered, to the student political clubs which have sprung up within the last five years. Unconnected in any way with the debates, they have nevertheless shown that the student takes both an intelligent and an effective interest in politics. All of which is entirely proper; the notion that those who receive the best education provided in this country should stand aloof from politics is one which, if it triumphed, would surely sterilize the political life of Canada.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

To-day, in an adjacent column, we publish a letter by Principal Eakin of Knox College which was evidently written to correct a mistaken impression that may have been made by an article appearing in this paper on November 23. With no desire whatever to create or continue a dispute between the continuing and non-continuing Presbyterians, we must admit that we are indeed sorry that anything which might arouse offence among the adherents of either party was published in this paper; and still more do we regret that the headlines were not only faulty but ambiguous. The statement, as published, was no doubt the honest opinion of the writer, and if it erred, as would appear, we are only too pleased to have it corrected.

We wish to point out that The Varsity has, in no respect, assumed a partisan role. Rather, in endeavouring to give a true statement of facts, misinformation may have led to a misstatement. Nor is Principal Eakin any the more accurate in his inference that

Hart House Theatre

"THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA"

For his second presentation of the Hart House season, Carroll Aikins imposed upon himself and the Hart House players a gargantuan task of which they have acquitted themselves in noble fashion. Bernard Shaw's famous drama, "The Doctor's Dilemma," has many other virtues beside its length, but really it is very long. The curtain rose at 8 p.m. and finally descended at 11.45, and this is no aspersion upon the scene-shifters. To Mr. Shaw the ideal theatre was the Greek amphitheatre whither a huge audience came immediately after breakfast and stayed until sundown; this predilection for length is no reflection upon Mr. Shaw's ability, for there are very few dull moments in any of his plays, even the protracted ones. In these meagre days when struggling playwrights are hard put to write drama that will "hold" an audience until 10.30, it is a treat to attend one of the Hibernian patriarch's nine-course banquets of superb drama. "The Doctor's Dilemma" is more than an assault upon the much-maligned medical profession; it is almost a dramatic discussion of the place of morals in art—whether 'tis nobler in the man to create beauty and perpetrate evil, or to lead a bovine and harmless existence even to the end. In the opening act, a rather verbose exposition or introduction to the theme, we see Sir Colenso Ridgdon, lately knighted for the discovery of anti-tubular opsonin, receiving the congratulations of his famous brethren of the profession. To Ridgdon's apartment there come the various types of physician, specialist and poor practitioner, all of them splendidly drawn by the dramatist and clearly portrayed by the actors. There is the octogenarian man of sense and sound judgment, Sir Patrick Cullen, whom Ivor Lewis made unforgettable; there is Sir Ralph Bloomfield Bonington, phagocyte-stimulator, antitoxinist, and fashionable charlatan of sententious and soothing eloquence, perfectly enacted by M. Monro Grier (a tremendous part that showed painstaking care and finished artistry); there is Dr. Schutzmacher, a shrewd and practical Semitic, Cutler Walpole, who is a surgeon-in-waiting to the world of fashionable sufferers who submit to his universal diagnosis of "blood poison to be cured only by removal of the nucleiform sac," and Mr. Hugh Eayrs was a delightfully prosperous

A LETTER FROM PRINCIPAL EAKIN

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In your issue of November 23rd there appears in the front page, and under a somewhat prominent heading, an article entitled "Union Theological College is Knox College in the United Church." The substance of this article has appeared several times in the daily newspapers, and evidently emanated from the "college officials" who supplied your paper with products of an imagination that mistakes desire for reality. No notice was taken of these utterances by Knox College. Since taking possession of the building over two years ago our college officials have scrupulously refrained not only from any animadversions on the United Church or on the proposed Union Theological College, but from any reference to either. We believed that the time for controversy was past, and that we had other and more important things to do; hence we have treated these periodical outbursts with the silence which we thought they deserved; but when "Varsity," which is supposed to serve the whole federation of colleges impartially, oversteps its province and assumes a partisan role (to which I am sure the authorities of the University would not lend countenance) and is guilty of a grave discourtesy to one of the Federated Colleges, by publishing what is evidently calculated to discredit it through an attempt to lower its status in the estimation of the readers of the paper, a reply is imperative.

In the first place, the article is inconsistent. The impression which it manifestly intends to convey is, that Knox College has entered and con-

The Varsity's article was evidently calculated to discredit one of the Federated Colleges.

We do wish to point out that The Varsity makes no claims whatever of any religious affiliations, and that, if it did, it would occasion very much of a surprise. While, once more, we are very much pleased to publish a statement that we cannot but know is sincere, we wish to point out that no controversy is to be initiated and that no further correspondence, contemplated to arouse feeling, will be published.

Dear Champus:

Gregory Grinning, the director of publicity for the University of Twankydillo, has published the following Alma Mater song. Gaudemus Igitur! Here it is:

Some people dance the Charleston,
Others prefer to shinny,
Most abide by the fox-trot,
But everybody calls him "Jimmy."

Some of the boys are Liberals,
Others, again, vote Tory,
A third group is independent,
But everybody calls him "Maurie."

Some stiffly abstain from parties
And flatly refuse to fuss,
While many dance at Newman Club,
But everybody calls him "Gus."

Some people play the piano,
Others, the hurdy gurdy,
But whether they like music or not Everybody calls him "Ferdie."

INTERFACULTY SWIMMING MEET AT HART HOUSE ON SATURDAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Fall sports are over. That is, as far as Varsity is concerned.

Last week saw the wind-up when the Junior champions bowed before the M.A.A.A. squad in a bid for the Dominion title. For the Interfaculty sports, both the soccer and football cups went to Victoria through their victories over Knox and Dents.

This S.P.A. series is a life saver for between season copy. The regular hockey season doesn't start until after the new year, and basketball is the same. And speaking of S.P.A., Varsity has managed to keep in the running, both the Juniors and Grads having won their first game. The Intercollegiate has not yet made an appearance.

Boxing, wrestling and fencing are making a bid for prominence right now, and the date of the Junior Assault at Arms is announced for December 15 and 16. This Assault is open to anyone at the University who has not yet won a place, all former winners of both Junior and Senior being ineligible. The week of December 5th is being reserved for Faculty Inter-year Assaults, and the various faculties should make their reservations now. These inter-year affairs should give the beginners a chance to show their wares without too much fear of coming up against men far above their class.

The preliminary rounds of the Squash Court Tournament started yesterday. Considerable interest has been aroused among the racquet wielders by this Interfaculty contest, and there should be a merry time in deciding whose name will be at the top of the list. Aside from men representing every college in this tournament, the graduates and faculty will add zest to the contest.

Jupiter seems to have saved all the rains due earlier in the season and is giving them to us in mass now. Even at that, the football players have been more than fortunate in having mud to slide around in instead of the conventional concrete-like frozen turf and a thin aggravation of snow. We recall one chap who froze his ear when walking home from the Dominion finals last year.

Some of the colleges have difficulty in fielding a water polo team for the Interfaculty series. This seems to be rather odd because we hear reports of the ever increasing per cent. of those who swim. The game itself certainly is one interesting to watch, and surely should not be merely a spectators' game. Maybe the boys are afraid of getting "ducked" occasionally, and therefore class it with gladiatorial struggles,—to be watched and not indulged.

M. and E. Society Holds First Party at Women's Union

The Mathematics and Physics Society held their first party of the year in the Women's Union on Friday evening.

Mrs. Kirkwood acted as patroness. Several members of the faculty and their wives were guests of the Society.

The dancers were carried along by the "pep" of the orchestra under Mr. Stanley St. John. There were novelties and a lucky number dance, won by Miss Sutherland and Peter Millman.

Mr. William Casey Addresses Engineering Society Meeting

Mr. Wm. Casey of the locomotive works in Kingston gave a lecture at the Engineering Society meeting yesterday. He dealt with the different types of locomotive, their construction and characteristics. At the conclusion of the lecture Mr. Casey answered a series of questions from members of the meeting.

Junior Hockey Practice

Junior hockey practice to-day will be at the Arena at 4.30, followed by a work-out against the Senior team.

FACULTY LEADERS MEET TO ORGANIZE BASKETBALL SEASON

Schedule for Six Groups Gets Under Way Commencing January 9, 1928

UNION THEOLOGOS ENTERED

Referees to be Chosen by the Manager of a Team in a Different Group

Interfaculty basketball is now in the air for the coming season, and judging from the enthusiastic and large attendance at the organization meeting held last week a successful year may be anticipated. The roll call of the meeting showed that seventeen of the eighteen voting representatives were present, Trinity being the lone exception.

Union Theology College applied for admission to the league and were accepted provided that the committee can see their way clear to provide them with suitable grouping. Mr. Walter Martin, vice-president of the basketball club, who is in charge of the Interfaculty series, stated that this could be easily arranged and their admission rendered possible. With the exception of the new group which will have to be formed to include the Theologos, the groupings will remain the same as last year.

The referee question again came up for considerable discussion, and it was decided that this year the manager of a team in a different group would be responsible for procuring the referee. At the first of the season when the schedule is drawn up, the name of the team which is to procure the referee will be inserted. The referees are to be chosen from a list of officials submitted to and approved by the committee of management.

It was decided that this season the schedule commence on the 9th of January. With five groups of three teams and one group of four teams this will necessitate forty-two league games, as well as fourteen or fifteen semi-final games. With five games being played every week this should run the schedule off in good time.

The following men have been elected as a committee to control the destinies of the Interfaculty series: Walter Martin, chairman; E. Paisley, Sr. Vic.; C. W. Woodside, Jr. School; E. B. Smith, Jr. Meds; J. J. Hurley, Wycliffe; and the manager of the Jr. Dent team.

Drake University has merged with the University of Des Moines to form a more complete and better school.

VICTORIA HOLDS KNOX IN ARTS SOCCER FINAL

Retain Three Goal Margin Secured in First Game of Round

On Thursday afternoon Victoria won the Arts Cup, emblematic of the Interfaculty soccer championship, by holding Knox to a 0-0 draw and winning the round by 3-0. Throughout the season Victoria has played a wonderful defensive game, and not once were they scored against. It was a remarkable record.

With a three goal margin secured in the first game of the finals, Victoria seemed content to play a defensive game on Thursday, and though Knox pressed hard and engineered many dangerous attacks, they were unable to put the ball in the nets. Kenny in goal made several nice saves, especially on two penalty kicks. It was the first time in eight years for the title to come to Vic, O.A.C. being the most consistent winners.

young girl and the scion of a famous Kentucky family who are parted by the declaration of the war with Germany.

A very pathetic scene is weaved in when, on the night of the victory of the Brierly horse in the Derby, the rendering of "My Old Kentucky Home" recalls to each of the standers-by various memories of youth. Just then news is received of the country's decision to enter the conflict, and the young man enlists for service overseas.

Finally the play is brought to a fine climax when young "Skippy" (which part, by the way, is excellently handled by Wesley Barry, the freckle-

Back Line Players Give Great Promise of Becoming New Stars

Football surely is the major sport of Queen's, and the following clipping from the "Journal" indicates a strong team for next year. The play is of a rather likeable sort. Its odd moments of joy and sorrow add to it the spice of life. And thrills—if you wish to experience something real in the line of thrills, don't miss this picture. M.B.

Junior Meds Out-Polos S.P.S. By Decisive Score of 3-0

In a well played water polo game last night Jr. Meds defeated Jr. S.P.S. by a score of 3-0. Shortt scored all three for Meds. Moore and Fisher did some fine work for the losers. Middlebro, on Meds' defence, played his usual good game. Jackson and Stevens combined well on the forward.

the catching positions should be a shade better than anything else the Intercollegiate has to offer.

"For outsiders, Jimmy Wright and Chuck Agnew will be on the job. Two of the best. There is also a possibility of Wes. Lackie, already a star inside, being converted into an end. He should make a good one.

"At middle we have Messrs. Dunne and Monahan. Nothing need be said about the pair. At inside, Handford will be back, and there is a chance of the giant Jimmy Kilgour moving over a notch to fill Hank's old station. Nagel will be back at snap, and the pivot position will be capably manned by Sutton and Mungovan. For secondaries, Britton, Durham and Abbott are all any coach could ask for.

"That line-up makes it look extremely unlikely that either McGill or Varsity will succeed in wrestling the title away from Queen's."

tinues to exist in the United Church as an entity; whereas the writer labours to make it clear that by a series of steps the merger with Victoria College is even now so complete that the identity of this quasi Knox College is lost, and that "no student will think of himself as of one College or the other." "Methinks the 'college officials' do protest too much."

In the second place, the article is so absurd that it should require no refutation. The Legislature of Ontario gave to the Presbyterian Church the buildings known as Knox College; but left the disposition of the charter to a Commission appointed by the Federal Parliament. During the time of joint occupation, and pending the awarding of the charter, both Presbyterian students and students of the United Church studying in Knox College graduated under that charter. The charter was ultimately given to the Presbyterian Church by this Commission; so that those who remained Presbyterian have the buildings, name, charter and records. If this does not constitute continuity, it is difficult to speed for a good parking place. The pleasure-goers stopped to stare at the peculiar vehicle, with a wild man from Cow College on exhibit, placarded "The Bore of '31," with "He Squealed" on the other side of the wagon to balance it.

The first item on the programme, it was announced, would be a demonstration of the culinary science. A debonaire youth stepped upon the wagon, broke eggs in the correct manner upon the culprit's head, and mixed them in well with tomatoes and mud from the bottom of the wagon. He concluded the demonstration with a treatment for the scalp and skin, consisting of a good massage with the aforementioned mixture, and gave the patient a good rubbing of it before he stepped down. The next important occurrence was the auctioning of the crate and its contents. The animal was commended for weight and conformation, but the top bid was 29c, the money going for the crate.

The new owner ordered the crate lifted from the wagon and broken open. The victim was allowed to clamber out; the beauty treatment had made a new man of him. After some persuasion, he consented to help pull the wagon back to the college. Every-one went to bed conscious of a good evening's work behind him—for by the unwritten laws of the student body the persecuted one is forgiven his sins upon the fulfilment of punishment and becomes a normal member of society.

Next day the incident was almost forgotten, until the evening paper arrived. There, on the front page, the impressions of the indignant theatre manager were placed for all the public to look at, amplified by some imaginative reporter. It appeared in the morning papers and was spread all over Canada and overseas, until finally it appeared in the Ottawa papers. Later accounts show the influence of a master mind, a creative genius of the first water, and finally composite and misleading photographs appeared in some of the leading dailies.

The direct effect of the rag upon the First Year has been a $150 fine and the imposition of some rather strict residence rules. The year was penniless before the event, and has written home in a body for the wherewithal to cover up their financial embarrassment. Meanwhile the collection of the "fine" is being delayed. As for residence rules, it is so near exact time that they are hardly noticeable—students who used to take part in rags now stay in of their own accord and study.

The police court action is regarded by the students as more serious than the faculty's penalty. Six summonses were distributed among the seventy guilty in such a way as to destroy the illusion that the affair was either England vs. Canada, or civil strife among the British; three were given to Canadians, two to Scotchmen, and one lone Englishman was roped in for a sixth. Any penalties, it is understood, will be borne by all who took part in the rag.

The six accused have consistently refused to make any statement in the presence of reporters. Although interviews have appeared in Toronto papers, these are not authentic, containing statements which are not only imaginative, but liable to make matters worse both at college and in the town.

understand what would constitute it. The claim of "Varsity" and those zealous "college officials" who are the sources of its information is that Union Theological College is in reality Knox College, but as far as I am aware there is no Union Theological College, because no charter has been secured. There may be such an institution in contemplation, but it does not exist in actuality; so that your readers are asked to believe that the real, legal and continuing Knox College, which has the things aforementioned, viz. buildings, name, charter and records, and which is operating under the terms of that charter, has ceased to exist, and that a College which has nothing but an "interim" name, and a provisional organization is its continuation. Verily things that are not identical with things that are—a corollary that quite escaped the notice of our old friend Euclid. There being no Union Theological College, some other things appear in your art-and self-satisfied fellow only too ready to remove a superfluous and harmless intestine for a handsome fee, and last and noblest of the doctors, the upright and penniless general practitioner, Dr. Blenkinsop, given his proper pathetic ineffectuality by Leslie Reid. After the congratulations, a beautiful lady arrives and begs Sir Colenso Ridegon to save her husband's life with his serum. Ridegon is obdurate in his refusal, until he discovers that the tubercular Louis Dubedat is an artist of great talent and promise. It now becomes an alternative for Ridegon whether he will save the honest, moral and useless Dr. Blenkinsop or the scoundrelly young genius, Dubedat. Being a moral man, Ridegon is unable to overcome his antipathy toward Dubedat's freedom of morals. Ridegon sacrifices the artist into the hands of the dear old charlatan, B.B.

The fourth act wherein Dubedat dies is one of Bernard Shaw's greatest pieces of dramatic writing. All of his coldly-rational operation of dramatic technique is subjected to pure feeling and inspiration (a rare thing for the great Shavian) as the dying artist speaks his credo of the freedom and glory of art. The fourth act is great tragedy and has the effect of sublime catharsis, where in grim and bitter humour heightens the dramatic impression. Ridegon realizes that he has indirectly murdered the man he loathed, and perhaps was motivated in this by his affection for the victim's wife. The fourth act is the logical conclusion of the play, and in the enigmatic final act one feels that Shaw brilliantly apologizes for his own seriousness and sends his audience home with the usual wondering "What does he mean?" However, four ladies of the Home and School League who comprised the audience merely said, "Ridiculous for a play to last that long!"—we sympathize deeply with their presence.

Before concluding one must give great credit to Dixon Wagner for his acting in the death scene, although he too obviously and smartly attitudinized in the third act. As Jennifer Dubedat, Sonya Haddon was eminently satisfactory, and nice touches were contributed by Susan Leach as Emmy, John Beausire as the fussy secretary, and Henry Button as the morbidly-curious newspaperman. Beyond question, "The Doctor's Dilemma" is another worthy achievement other three-quarters were waiting. Those already punished were forced to go through the regular initiation, which had to do with glucose, onions, lampblack, uncertain beverages, and other things, along with those who had escaped the first punishment. After this was over, the men of 2T5 and 2T6 who were physically able partook of the usual refreshments "in a manner far from amicable."

In 1923 the initiations were largely confined to the use of shingle stain, glucose, lampblack, doses of flour and castor oil and Epsom salts, and sham-poops of axle grease, tar and molasses, or, in some cases, of fly-paper. Most of the horrors were imaginary, others caused by weird and terrible noises made while the victims were blindfolded. As usual, refreshments were served at the close of the various ceremonies. The president of the first year School of Science class, in being questioned, stated that he had nothing but praise for the initiation.

The initiations seemed to reach a climax in 1925 when the University College sophomores used, in addition to the materials and devices usually associated with such occasions, certain objects from a local abattoir "usually connected with a biological laboratory." The extreme measures taken at this initiation were responsible for the following comments in the editorial section of "The Varsity" of October 21st, 1925, under the heading, "Given an Inch, They Take the Verbal Mile": "Freshmen of University College were last night forced to undergo initiation ceremonies of a particularly disgusting, barbarous, and altogether atrocious nature . . . the proceedings were such that any sane and reasonably civilized human being could not countenance them. . . . How long will it take these over-enthusiastic young gentlemen entirely lacking in discretion to realize that initiations are countenanced at this University only because its directors are of the opinion that University people have grown up to a reasonable degree? . . . Disgust is the universal attitude of disinterested witnesses. . . ."

The result of this conduct is shown in the decision of the Caput against the practice of further initiations. In 1926 and 1927 the initiations, if they could be placed in that category, took the form of skits, games and banquets in most cases.

BRITISH PORTRAITS, LANDSCAPES, THEME OF STEWART DICK

Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Great Triumvirate of English Portraiture

ART GALLERY LECTURES

Turner Most Interesting of Modern English Landscape Painters

Henry VII's reign saw the rise and development of the British school of portrait painters, originating in the old idea of the miniature book painting of the portraits of the scribe and his patron. Such was the subject of Mr. Dick's lecture in the British school of art series, at the Art Gallery last Friday.

Although there were some beginnings of this style of art in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, yet the English school proper did not emerge till the eighteenth century. The earliest known artist was William Hogarth, a man of culture and learning. He issued a series of engravings, dramatic episodes, which gave all the action of a stage production. His painting, the Calais Gate, was a magnificent character study, for the main thing in Hogarth's work was his knowledge of human life. His rapid sketches were often most fascinating things; for instance in the one depicting the girl in the street selling her wares, her frank pleased grin was cleverly caught by the artist. At one bound, Hogarth placed English painting on a level with the best painting of the time.

The great triumvirate in the British school of portraiture was Sir Joshua Reynolds, Thomas Gainsborough and George Romney. The first of these great painters, Sir Joshua Reynolds, was seldom satisfied with painting merely the features of his model, but attempted to depict something of the character behind the features.

In his male portraits, Sir Joshua followed Rembrandt in his work of Dr. Johnson, which cleverly displayed the character of the learned man. His portrait of Lieut-General Elliott, the hero of the Rock of Gibraltar defence, was an epic to celebrate the old soldier's gallant feat of arms. He was posed on the rock in full uniform, grimly clenching the keys of the fort. (Continued on page 4)

PROFESSOR COLLIP OF BIO-CHEMISTRY GOES TO M'GILL

Leading Bio-chemist Aided Dr. Banting in Discovery of Insulin

IS GRADUATE OF TRINITY

Brilliant Medical Career at U. of T. and University of Alberta

Professor J. B. Collip, professor of bio-chemistry in the University of Alberta, has received an appointment as professor of bio-chemistry in the Medical Faculty of McGill University. Professor Collip is one of the leading bio-chemists on the continent, his most outstanding achievement being his discovery of insulin a few years ago in collaboration with Dr. Banting of the University of Toronto. He made the first insulin ever used on a patient.

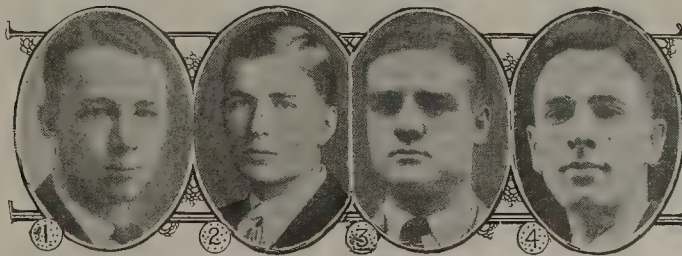

James Bertram Collip is a graduate of Trinity College, Toronto. In 1912 he received his B.A. degree, in 1913 his M.A., and in 1916 his Ph.D. In 1921-22, during the insulin experiments, he was Associate Professor of Pathological Chemistry in the Faculty of Medicine in the University. He came to Toronto from the University of Alberta, being sent on a travelling scholarship from the Rockefeller Foundation. Since returning to Alberta he has earned his M.D., and has been awarded the degree of Doctor of Science. He is also a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada.

Professor Collip, although only 35 years of age, has to his credit other distinguished achievements in the field of bio-chemical research. Recently he has made discoveries in connection with the parathyroid gland and with the treatment of tetany, a hitherto incurable children's disease.

In McGill, Professor Collip will take the place left vacant by the retirement of Professor A. B. McCallum. He will leave the University of Alberta next June for his new post.

The most notable student at McGill this year is Senator Lieut-Col. J. P. B. Casgrain, who has registered as a partial student in first year Arts. He is taking Chemistry in order to renew his acquaintance with that branch of study. Senator Casgrain is 71 years old.

MILNE COMEDY PRESENTED BY O.C.E. DRAMATIC CLUB

Production of "Wurzel-Flummery" in U.T.S. Assembly Hall Well Attended

"Wurzel-Flummery," a comedy in one act by A. A. Milne, was presented by the O.C.E. Dramatic Society under the direction of Miss Marjorie Tow yesterday afternoon in the U.T.S. Assembly Hall. The cast consisted of Mr. Harold Spence as Robert Crawshaw, M.P., Miss Elizabeth Gibbons as Margaret Crawshaw (his wife), Miss Mary Howard as Viola (his daughter), Mr. Harold Shaw as Richard Meriton, M.P., and Mr. Kenneth Crozier as Denis Clifton.

At the close of the performance Mr. Phillips of the U.T.S. Staff led a discussion on the suitability of this play for production in a high school. He pointed out that some modern dramatists write plays which are either too daring or too subtle for high school pupils. Boys of the secondary school age treated love-making as a farce, whereas girls inclined to favour it. The difficulty of finding a suitable play which would be a compromise between the two was evident. Mr. Phillips expressed the opinion that "Wurzel Flummery" was eminently suitable since the love element was kept somewhat in subjection. There was, moreover, counter-interest in the man who was torn between his desire for money and his wish to keep his dignity and reputation. The humorous element introduced by the comical solicitor was also especially appealing to school pupils.

The hall was well filled with U.T.S. boys and O.C.E. students and friends, all of whom enjoyed the play, which was creditably done by the cast.

It is a mark of the ingenuous not to foresee grey hairs, wrinkles, and flabby flesh on the morrow of passion.—Elie Faure.

STAFF AND STUDENTS USE SQUASH COURTS

Crowded Courts Show Hart House Pastime Grows More Popular Yearly

PRINCES PLAYED HERE

That the use of the squash courts had tripled in the last few years was the information obtained by "The Varsity" in the course of an investigation on the popularity of squash at this University. The use of the courts is not restricted to undergraduates; professors frequently participate in a game. Many graduates belong to Hart House solely for the privilege of playing squash. Royalty, too, has at times indulged itself in the sport; proof of this was afforded when the Prince of Wales and Prince George played on the Hart House courts this summer.

Mr. Fennell, chairman of the squash committee, was approached with a view to discovering why the game is so popular. He gave three reasons: it was an exciting pastime; no time was lost through chasing balls; and it gave concentrated exercise within a short period of time. About 120 people use the three courts daily, and they are nearly always filled.

Among the members of the staff who play squash are Professors Bladen, Coventry, Fairley, and Cochran. At the present time the Inter-faculty Squash Tournament is in progress. The graduates won the first game against the Faculty by a score of 5-1. The draw for each week is posted on the Bulletin Board.

The visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, was an important event in the annals of Hart House squash. The former played with J. B. Bickersteth, the Warden of the House, and with D. D. Gunn. Mr. Fennell was Prince George's opponent.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP, JOVIALITY, MARKED AT U.C. FOLLIES

Spirit of Gaiety Presides as Annual Function is Held in Hart House

CHOCOLATE BAR CONTEST

Novelty of Year Shows Rivalled by Casino and Midway

Borne on the wings of Gaiety, and welcomed by Joviality and Good Fellowship, little Folly, five-year-old son of Mr. U. College, appeared at Hart House last night.

A casino which rivalled that of Monte Carlo appeared in the West Common Room. Midway shows second only to Exhibition Park or Sunny-side on a wet day—reared their heads in every corner. The rest was a vivid recollection of a four-man buck in ye good old rugby days, especially after the dancing began and the sound of the swirl and the rushing of flying feet echoed down the corridors.

"The Blind Goddess" once more held the scales as '28 fretted and strutted on the stage. Mysteries, unimaginable mind-readings, shades of Houdini were invoked by '29. And "Big Bill" burned Representative Poetry in one glorious and awful conflagration. This was '30 in all its splendour.

The placid water of the pool was churned and lashed by the activities of the U.C. Swimming Club. Canoe tilting added variety to the aquatic sports.

Refreshments disappeared rapidly in the Great Hall. Vendors of cider and chocolate bars did a thriving business in the east corridors. The chocolate bar contest was won by Mr. R. J. Monkman, who proudly carried off his trophy.

The committee in charge were: R. A. F. Anderson, A. T. Christie, C. M. King, E. A. Macdonald, W. A. Beer, K. C. Evans, A. W. Downer, C. G. Mitchell, G. A. Gale, W. A. Gilbert and G. A. Reid.

Etiquette and Morals Subject of Debating Society Contest

"That this House is of the opinion that a rule of etiquette is of more value in social life than a code of morals" was the motion upheld by Miss Iris Robinson at the meeting of the University College Women's Debating Society in the Women's Union. Miss Helen McCallum upheld the negative. After the debate the members took part in the open discussion.

PREMIER G. H. FERGUSON AT TO-NIGHT'S DEBATE

Will Speak on the Motion Re Amending Canadian Constitution

To-night the Honourable G. Howard Ferguson will speak at the Hart House debate, in the Lecture Room at 8 o'clock, on the motion, "That it would not be in the best interests of Canada to assume the right to amend her own constitution." The motion should produce sufficient opposition to draw a real broadside from the Prime Minister, to whom fireworks are not unfamiliar.

Members are reminded that after the four speakers "on the paper," Messrs. Walker, King, Gunn and Thomson, the debate will be open to the House. As many speakers as possible will be taken from the floor. Those catching the Speaker's eye may speak for five minutes. The Prime Minister will speak last—immediately before the division. Special provision is being made, as for the Mackenzie King debate, to provide extra seating.

Rifle Club Hear Address on Care and Use of Rifle

Members of the Rifle Club and those interested in shooting generally were present at a speech made by Major Utton, in the Lecture Room, Hart House, yesterday afternoon.

Major Utton's remarks were addressed mainly to beginners in the sport and dealt with the care and handling of the rifle, with a brief summary of its various parts and their purposes. He also devoted a few words on target shooting in general and the methods of practice to be followed.

Fearful Physogs Finally Photographed Ending Economists' Esteem for Ego

"Eureka!" At last, the long delayed photographs of the budding economists were taken yesterday on the lawn in front of Baldwin House.

Many and interesting were the remarks overheard by "The Varsity" reporter as he sat, perched on the hump of his trusty camel, gazing with a wistful eye at these many lambs innocently proceeding to the slaughter. For some probably it means instant failure; for others, with more pleasing features, it may be equivalent to the devouring of the works of Marshall and the rest.

One cheerful young fellow (probably of an inquisitive turn of mind), as he stood "making eyes" at the camera was rudely disturbed by a request from the sidelines, begging him to "ask a question."

Another future entrepreneur was instructed to keep clear of the camera for fear of the effect which might be experienced by the latter.

An embarrassing situation arose when it was found that there were only two girls left, necessitating a young gentleman to fill the trinity. But a hero of the hour cropped up in time to save the situation. A chivalrous fellow stepped forward, and amongst many a jest and cheer, took his place between the two young ladies, and all was well.

One chap of a curious turn of mind saw fit to ask how the photographs were finally going to be recognized. Some might feel it to their advantage not to claim the features which the cameraman had recorded. On the other hand, we might have more than one person claiming to be the possessor of a certain countenance.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire

How May Students Accost Profs?

To-day's question is: "Do you think it is in the best interests of a student to assume the right to call his professors by their first names?"

Hubert P. Sheehan, IV Philosophy, St. Michael's: "There is no doubt about it. The added spirit of camaraderie that would be created would react to the benefit of both teacher and student by the fact that there would be better understanding existing between them and less formality which tends at times to make the professor appear an ogre in the students' eyes."

J. K. Webb, II Political Science, Victoria: "No, I don't. I think it lessens the dignity of the professor in classes. However, if you are a personal acquaintance of the professor, I would consider it quite appropriate."

J. C. Sinclair, I Medicine: "I shouldn't say so. The professor is in a way superior to the student, and his dignity would thereby be lessened. I believe you should show respect to them."

Miss Gertrude O'Malley, II Classics: "The question hardly seems worthy of an answer. To address men so intellectually superior in this manner would indicate on the part of the student body a much lower brand of intelligence than it prides itself on having."

R. A. Bell, III English and History, Victoria: "I think it would detract from the dignity of the professorial calling. The student wouldn't stand so much in awe of the professor, and the work would suffer. 'Familiarity breeds contempt,' in this case."

M. St. A. Woodside, IV Classics, University College: "Most emphatically no. I consider that that would be the method best calculated to bring to an end the best relations between professor and student."

THE TORONTONENSIS "DEADLINE"

With the deadline for Torontonensis biographies set for Saturday, December 10, it is high time that members of graduating years throughout the University prepare and submit the Torontonensis cards given to them by their representatives on this publication. All too prone to relegate the inevitable to the last, it would appear that this year's prospective graduates are living up to past traditions and that the S.A.C. office is to be flooded once more by a last minute rush of suddenly awakened souls. And in this connection it may be pointed out that ten days more leeway has been allowed this year than last, when all biographies and space contracts had to be turned in by December 1st.

But despite this fact it is not apparent that there will be fewer delinquents than in 1926. And this is all the more unfortunate because, on account of this concession, there is to be much less consideration given to those persons who neglect or refuse to attend to what is but a simple matter of time.

If any publication of any pretence whatsoever is to carry on in an efficient and satisfactory manner, a deadline for certain types of copy must be set, and if that publication is a standard and representative one, that deadline must be adhered to. More and more, during the past few years, has the editorial board of the University of Toronto year book endeavoured to impress this fact upon the mind of the student, and gradually better has the response become. This year, with a four years' drilling on that idea and with an extended time limit, there can be no excuse whatever for not attending to this requirement on time. And so, hence, there would appear to be but small probability of any further extension in the time and little promise of special consideration.

Many will recall the fact that last year more than several biographies failed to appear on the date set, and a few will remember the difficulties that arose therefrom. Despite repeated warnings there were those who believed their prestige to be such that there was no necessity for conformation to rules or regulations. Such were sadly mistaken, and learned, perhaps, the last lesson that their college days had to give them,—that it is attention to detail together with promptness that leads to a better spirit of unity and understanding.

The Editor-in-Chief of Torontonensis has his part to fill, and he can do his duties best—and his work is the work of and for the student—if he and his contributors live up to the regulations which his plans of campaign have led him to establish. With no advantage in postponing the issue, it is to be hoped indeed that a new record will be set this year with all members of the graduating years preparing their biographies on time.

SETTLEMENT AN ACTIVE FORCE

Several years ago the University of Toronto, under the personal interest of the Chancellor, organized what is now known as "University Settlement." The institution was financed by voluntary subscriptions and organized campaigns. To-day the Settlement is a centre of wholesome activities for those who are less fortunate. Not only do the children of the district make it their gathering place, but the mothers and fathers find recreation, and can pursue educational hobbies. There is a clinic in connection with the Settlement, a library, club rooms, and a music school. The music school is in connection with the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

Eager eyed children will be made glad at Christmas by the parties being prepared for them by the staff at the Settlement. The Community Christmas Tree has become an annual event in Grange Park district. Students from the University voluntarily give them help to promote the work being carried on by the workers.

The University has been described as "a world in itself." It is necessarily so. If four years are devoted to equipping oneself for future service, outside interests cannot be allowed to interfere too much. However, has the student a right to shut his eyes altogether to the poverty and vicissitudes of the outside world? Institutions such as the Settlement show that the student is interested in the needs of others.

MAKES SUGGESTIONS FOR WOMEN'S SPORTS

Editor, "The Varsity."

Permit me as a follower of sports to use a small space in your valuable paper in response to the editorial appearing in Monday's edition, "What Is Wrong With Women's Sport?"

As the editorial states, there appears to be a lack of spirit. The reason for this lack of spirit lies in the fact that there is not enough attention given to the beginner nor the girl who is willing to learn the game.

Taking a specific example, I will cite basketball, since the women are in the midst of their annual Inter-faculty schedule. Within a couple of weeks this schedule will be completed and basketball will be over for the women with the exception of those who play with the Intercollegiate teams. Why the sudden death knell of one of our major winter sports? True, the stars will make the Intercollegiate teams and the rest of the girls will come to cheer for them. I would suggest as a remedy to awaken a little spirit in this certain branch of sport that a second schedule be played at some feasible time after Christmas. The members of the Intercollegiate teams of course should be barred from their respective faculty teams. Thus this would be a means of developing future Intercollegiate stars. Women are here generally for a four year university course, which affords plenty of time to develop basketball ability. What good is a winning team now if we overlook our future teams. Many of these girls may be only a diamond in the rough, speaking in terms of playing basketball. In concluding, I might say, for most teams basketball is just barely begun for the present season, and here at the University it is nearly over for 90 per cent. of the women. So why not give this second schedule at least a fair try?

ST. HILDA'S 3TO CLASS STAGE J. M. BARRIE PLAY

"Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" Ably Presented Before Literary Society

The members of 3TO presented "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," by Sir James Barrie, before the Literary Society of St. Hilda's College on Monday night. Numerous guests of St. Hilda's were present, including the judges who decide upon the quality of the play for the prize which is awarded annually to the year presenting the best play.

The prologue was read by Miss M. Dewey explaining the plot, which was presented in three acts. Miss L. Layng was the capable nurse, and Miss D. Langley portrayed Alice, the mother returning from India after many years' absence from her children, with marked dramatic ability.

Miss M. Goode took the difficult part of the Colonel, and Miss E. McColl was the sturdy independent little son. Miss A. Amys and Miss M. Spurr were charming as the two young rosebuds. The part of Steve was taken by Miss M. Dickinson, who had previously caused unusual consternation in our midst by her clever impersonation of the man. Miss Isabel Cammell effectively portrayed Richardson, the little starveling.

At the conclusion of the play 3TO sang their successful year song.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

From the standpoint of public interest the debate before the House to-night is a most timely one, and the discussion is certain to provide food for much thought and consideration. It is readily realized that the idea that Canada should have the power to amend her own constitution is rapidly gaining much favour among the thinking men of this Dominion, while we, as hopeful representatives of such, have to some extent formed our opinions for or against. In any case, it is indeed fortunate that we are to have the opportunity of gaining detailed knowledge on the matter from those whose studies should have uncovered much information in this direction.

CHAMPUS CAT

Keeping up a new and startling custom originated by Charles Vining, in his article "They Call Him Jimmy," a headline writer of our little daily above a report of Professor Fairley addressing the German Club printed "Prof. Barker Speaks on Europe." This thing has gone too far already and something disastrous is liable to happen any moment. Sooner or later we familiar students will say "Sir" to good old Jack in the Tuck Shop, or call one of the night watchmen or police "Your Highness."

It is reported that someone interviewed Professor de Champ on the subject. Here is the interview in detail:

Interviewer: Monsieur, est-ce que quelqu'un a osé vous adresser "Saint-Elme?"

And the answer: Sapristi!

"WHY MEN LEAVE HOME"—VICTORIA

Malcolm Fassett's production at the Victoria Theatre last night went over big with Hiram's Hill, if the screams of ribald laughter from the two representatives of that village sitting next to us were any criterion. Despite their evident enjoyment, however, the play strikes us as being a trifle futile. It tries so hard to be naughty (bedroom scenes 'n' everything) that it seems a pity to waste its "naughtiness" on Toronto—pearls before swine sort of thing.

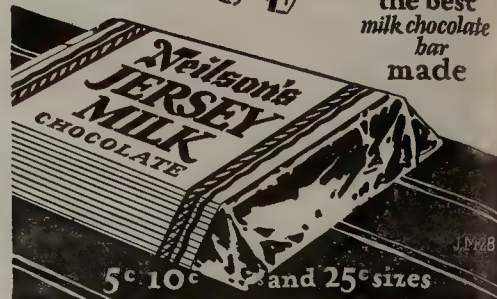

The plot concerns itself with three young couples, of which the three better halves have spent the summer (and incidentally their husbands' money) travelling in Europe. When they re-unite, the wives are shocked to discover that their three respective husbands have apparently sought solace and companionship during their absence, in the company of other women. Thus into the second act. It is one which would have warmed the cockles of Cecil de Mille's heart. Needless to say, it is laid at night in a bedroom!—and this from the author of "The Bat." Two of the three wives decide to renounce their husbands, while the third thinks to test her's. She appears clad in very negligible negligée (gasps of sheer rapture and sly nudges from the hon. members from Hiram's Hill, whose (Continued on page 3)

BLUE vs. GRADS IN S.P.A. CLASSIC TO-MORROW NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Three Blue hockey teams go into action this week. The Juniors take on Oshawa to-night in an S.P.A. fixture and the Seniors clash with the Grads later in the week. The Intermediates will not get any action till the O.H.A. season starts unless some exhibition games are arranged.

This Varsity-Grad game should be a real battle. The Undergrads have a strong line-up, and with Whitehead in condition should be able to give the Grads a merry old battle. Whitey is not in the best of shape as yet, as he has only been out to practice for a few days, but it will not take the big fellow long to get going; and when he gets started he may be depended upon to give the opposition something to worry about.

The Oshawa-Varsity Junior fixture to-night promises to be a battle royal. Both teams have won one game and will be fighting hard to continue in the series, as the S.P.A. series is one of those "lose and out" affairs. The Varsity Intermediates were defeated in the O.H.A. play-offs last year by the Oshawa Intermediates, and it would be sweet revenge for the Blue if the Juniors returned the compliment this year and evened things up by knocking the Motor City entry out of the running.

The Juniors look just about good enough this year to cause a whole lot of trouble for some of the good Junior teams. They have a real defence in Hunnisset, Bean and Moon. And the forwards, led by Beal, are fast skaters who know how to score. Georgie is the veteran of the Junior outfit, and he has the experience necessary to carry the team through. Beside this he is one of the best goal-getters on the outfit.

Interfaculty Managers

Managers of the faculty teams entered in the indoor baseball and basketball leagues are requested to see Mr. McCutcheon in the Physical Director's office and make arrangements for the allotment of practice hours. As the more desirable hours are being taken very rapidly, managers are requested to take action at once.

SIGNAL PRACTICE FOR VIC IS BASKETBALL CONTEST

St. Michael's Senior Women Are Easily Defeated by Score of 49-19

The women's basketball game between Senior Vic and St. Mike's last night resolved itself into a signal practice for Vic. The smoothness of their passing and quickness of action were very beautifully demonstrated. At the final whistle the score stood 49-19 in favour of Vic.

Helen McGraw, a sub for St. Mike's, made some thrilling and extraordinary shots which, strange to say, landed squarely and neatly in the basket. A new pass—a violent backward fling—was introduced by the Saints, which was startling if not always effective.

The feature of the game was the amount of substituting and re-arranging done by both squads. The line-ups, as they started, were as follows:

Vic: Forwards, Jean Bateman, Ede Buchanan; centres, Dot Ker, Marian Forward; guards, Grace Keffer, Al Muckle.

St. Mike's: Forwards, Grace Dunn, Alice Quinlan; centres, Helen Dore, Mary Gardiner; guards, Ede Quinlan, Tillie Jackman.

INTERMEDIATES, ATTENTION

Intermediates will report at the Arena at 5 p.m. to-day.

CHICKEN DINNER IS PRIZE AT KNOX

Centre and East House Struggle in Cold Dawn for a Meal

CENTRAL BLANK ORIENTALS

A battle royal was staged on the front campus early Tuesday morning when Knox Centre House defeated East House in a rough and tumble rugby game, the score being 11-0. The game was the result of a challenge made by Centre House, which maintained that it could reign supreme in rugby as well as in all the other college activities. The prize at stake was a chicken dinner, to be provided by the losing team.

A small crowd of loyal supporters turned out to witness the battle, and as soon as it became sufficiently light to see the ball, Referee Traynor started the game. The East House team had the advantage in weight, and appeared to be more confident than their rivals, but the mud-covered men from Centre House continually forced the play and had the edge of it all through the game. Occasionally when the Scotch members of the East House team recalled the high cost of chickens, they made a magnificent effort to score, but always the opposing line held.

D. Davidson, of soccer fame, began his career as a rugby player by making some fast sprints around the end of the East House line. E. Massig, no doubt with visions of a nicely browned drumstick urging him on, made some beautiful bucks through the line. "Skeezix" Kovach did some pretty tackling for Centre House.

"Wally" Graham starred for East House, doing some spectacular cross-country running, while Perry did some nice work in the line.

East House, not content with being defeated once, has intimated its desire (Continued on page 4)

U.C. Wins Championship of Girls' Baseball Series

The final game in the Interfaculty girls' baseball series resulted in a win for U.C. over O.C.E. by the rather one-sided score of 27 to 7, thus giving U.C. the Cup and championship for this season.

The game was not a good exhibition in the initial innings, as the players appeared nervous and over-anxious. However, as the game progressed a marked improvement was shown.

Several minor injuries were sustained by the players of both teams, but they very gamely carried on.

Ede Blackwell pitched a steady game and was well supported by her catcher, Mary Dixon.

For O.C.E., Francis Stinson played a nice all-round game and was a tower of strength to her team.

previous knowledge had evidently been confined to flannellette). The husband ignores her, thus confirming her worst fears.

Strangely enough, it turns out to have "all been a horrible mistake." One leaves the couples promising all over the place to have babies. They evidently consider them as commodities "to have or not to have" in the wealthier classes on Long Island.

Regarding the acting, it was of very high order, Malcolm Fassett and Miss Margaret Doty having the leading roles. It seems a pity that Mr. Fassett has chosen such a weak vehicle.

However, we predict a full house at the Victoria this week.

"THE GARDEN OF EDEN"—EMPIRE

This week the Empire Players presented a four-act comedy of Broadway vintage written by the eminent Avery Hopwood. The play is not drama, but it is very snappy entertainment. The play opens in a Parisian cabaret where very sinister events transpire. The heroine, Toni Lebrun, however, repulses one of the guests in a spirited melée, and is promptly discharged by the lady supervisor. After the regrettable fray, Toni is taken to Monte Carlo by an honest old Baroness who has been charring to earn a living. At Monte Carlo, Toni is the toast of her hotel and is proposed to by a young gentleman of social position and flawless family. The big punch of the evening comes at the end of act four when a cad turns up and threatens to reveal the facts of Toni's origin. She refuses his proposal with the same vigour of two acts ago, and tells her intended husband all, whereas she is berated by the latter. She refuses to apologize, and just as the Prince Miguel de Santa Rocco arrives for the wedding, she climbs the stairs and tears off her bridal veil, jewels and gown! Both the guests at the wedding and a staid audience gasped with approval and admiration. We declare that Miss Taliaferro's acting was splendid and spirited throughout, and was ably supported by Anne Carew as Rosa, her sophisticated protectress.

In the last act, Toni becomes famous through her performance at the wedding, and is deluged with cinema and syndicate offers, but best of all is the ending of the play, where she accepts the hand of the Prince himself and is not reconciled with her spineless fiancé.

"The Garden of Eden" is good entertainment, and was made even better by the fine acting of Frank E. Camp as the Prince, Edmund Abbey as the disagreeable old uncle, but to Miss Taliaferro must go the lion's share of the praise for a very enjoyable evening after the unpleasant first act.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

The Keith-Albee vaudeville has certainly taken a sudden brace; the performances of the past three weeks being far above the usual vaudeville acts. This week is the best of the lot. The picture is "Sally in Our Alley," featuring Shirley Mason. For once the picture has not been cut for the benefit of the vaudeville bills. Sally is an orphan adopted by three daddies, a Scotchman, a Jew and an Italian. The usual rich aunt appears and the usual happens, but its presentation is unique. The News Review is fair, and fortunately the College Comedies have disappeared in favour of "Big Boy" himself.

The opening act is Ferry Conway with an assortment of decidedly queer musical instruments, and he has some new stunts worth investigating. In

Preparations at Settlement for Christmas Parties

The dolls for the Christmas parties at the Settlement are now ready for dressing. It is customary for the women of University College and Victoria College to dress dolls and make Christmas bags for the children of the Settlement. Miss Betty Parsons is in charge for University College, and Miss Kay Dobson for Victoria.

Preparations for the Christmas parties are in full swing. Parties will begin on the 19th of December. Hart House will be the scene of a merry evening on the 21st of December, when all the men and boys will assemble for their Christmas party.

The biggest occasion will be the Community Christmas Tree at the entrance to Grange Park. Help will be needed to put this happy occasion across.

Miss Wilson, who is in charge at the Settlement, would like any students who have time to help with Christmas preparations to call her at Ad. 0736. It is her hope to have every family in the district have a Christmas wreath this year.

fact he is the outstanding feature of the bill—shadowing even Nan Halperin, who is supposed to feature as a little child impersonator. Rosine and Ray are invaluable aids to all punsters. Joe Stanley's act is peculiar, so is his dancing, but it is excellent. The Gordon trained dogs completed the entertainment, and although they are amusing their act drags terribly in spots—not due to the dogs but to their trainer.

We also had good seats and waited in no line-up. We thank the manager most heartily.

ress with the smoke of battle around him.

Sir Joshua's female portraits had an air of dignity and grace, while his state portraits were a little cold and formal, but possessed great charm and dignity. His most famous picture, "The Age of Innocence," was a simple little picture but crammed full of a life-time's knowledge.

In the work of Thomas Gainsborough appeared none of the massiveness of Sir Joshua, but instead a freshness and a daintiness which was achieved through catching the instinct of his work. His portrait of the parish clerk at Bath was a charming study of a sweet-faced old man, which had something of the dignity and grace of Vandyke's work. His picture "The Blue Boy" also followed the lines of Vandyke, having the same rich background. Among his female portraits was a brilliant picture of the famous Mrs. Simmons, and another of the actress, Perdita Robinson. Gainsborough's child portraits sparkled with life and character, for he knew all about children, while Reynolds was only the benevolent uncle.

George Romney illustrated one more aspect of the English movement, for he painted from a more direct human point of view than either of the other two. He showed a fine mastery of his craft and his work had a broad vigorous character. His portraits of Lady Hamilton in various poses had more of the classic quality of ancient Greece than any of his contemporaries of the eighteenth century.

Among the lesser artists who followed the great three was Lawrence, whose work was a bit shallow, not having the depth and dignity of the great group. Sir Henry Raeburn's portrait of the old Edinburgh schoolmaster was painted broadly and vigorously but with a fine feeling of sympathy. Although there were great portrait painters in later times, yet British portraiture never quite again touched the heights of portraiture of Reynolds, Gainsborough and Romney.

"The British landscape school has more of a feeling of familiarity in its work than any other school," stated Mr. Dick, speaking of British landscape painting in the early nineteenth century. He then went on to describe in some detail the work of the Norwich school, stressing especially the work of Crome, Constable and Turner.

Whereas Wilson and Gainsborough were the two pioneers in this branch of art, landscape painting did not attain a position of note until the early part of the nineteenth century. John Crome (1768-1851) founded the first provincial society of painters, with its headquarters at Norwich. He was an exception to the usual type of self-made painter who as a rule fail to grasp the grander aspect of the whole, in giving his attention to minute detail. Crome, on the contrary, with his straight line scheme of arrangement, gave a breadth and dignity to his style worthy of a painter trained in technicalities.

Constable (1776-1837) contributed to art the subtle touch of passing action, thereby breaking entirely new ground in landscape painting. With deft skill he gave a very real atmospheric tone to his paintings borne of his love for familiar scenes. He had a wonderful knack of giving a well-balanced impression to his pictures.

Mr. Dick next took up the work of Turner—who, he said, could not be put in any set category. His style was absolutely individual—so much so that the study of one of his paintings would by no means enable the student to recognize another of his works. "Turner's work is an encyclopaedia of landscape painting," stated Mr. Dick. He knew the phenomena of nature so well that he was able to create his own landscapes. His was the ability to call up physical sensations in his paintings, giving a very true touch of realism to his work. "Without doubt," concluded Mr. Dick, "Turner stands out as the most interesting of modern British landscape painters."

"Ici on Parle Francais" Players' Guild Production

Members of the Players' Guild will be highly amused if not elevated at Mr. George Douglas' production of "Ici on parle Francais," at the Women's Union to-day. The author's name is hardly more outstanding than the dramatic quality of the play itself. It is the story of a boarding-house where "on parle Francais" slightly. Varied and humorous are the complications when a real Frenchman arrives on the scene, and though the audience may derive little of intellectual enjoyment, this deprivation will be made up to them in laughs.

The Bat!

No, the bats aren't in the "belfry" this time. They are in University College, where it appears they "fit and flit" about in quite a healthy fashion throughout the night.

It seems there is rather a settlement of these creatures of ill-omen lodging in the halls and ancient rooms of U.C. Here they hold their nightly "Derby" race and in general desport themselves most sportively, swooping through the corridor in the darkness.

Now we all know that King's College, in several of its parts, represents the best examples of Norman architecture on this continent. But did we all know that the college building might also boast that last essential of ancient tradition—bats? What's an antiquated tower, Gothic Romanesque, or Norman without bats? An ancient vine-clad tower, and no bats! Unheard of!

And so the beautiful old Norman doors are at last assured a position in the cultural minds of posterity. The picture is now complete. The building may crumble and fall, but the vision of her ancient halls and tower swooping with bats will live.

Mrs. Kirkwood Entertains at Women's Union Tea

Mrs. Kirkwood entertained delightfully at tea yesterday afternoon from four to six at the Women's Union. The tea table was gay with a bowl of bright yellow baby-mums and white narcissus graced the Common Room. A feature of the tea was a most interesting demonstration of dye-craft given by Miss Shepherd. Many of the students dropped in to meet Mrs. Kirkwood and other girls of U.C. over a cup of tea.

TORONTO DELEGATION VISITS UNIVERSITIES OF UNITED STATES

Student Organization of Cornell is Explained by President

ADMIRE TORONTO'S SPIRIT

Hope for Renewed Interest in Rooters' Club Activities Next Year

The results of the recent conference between the three delegates of the Students' Administrative Council and the student officials of the Universities of Cornell and Pennsylvania indicate that the Rooters' Club of next year will take on an unprecedented round of activity.

The party, the personnel of which consisted of Ed. Hartmann, President of the Rooters' Club, Jack Marshall, senior cheer leader, and Scott Stockwell, one of the assistant cheer leaders, visited Cornell University last Wednesday and held several conferences with the officials of the student body and Athletic Association.

The student organization of Cornell was thoroughly explained by President Syler of the Undergraduate Council, and its advantages and disadvantages pointed out. Mr. Syler expressed admiration for the Toronto organization and had great praise for the college spirit displayed by our students.

Another interesting item was a conference with Mr. Foster Coffin, Director of Willard Straight Hall, which institution is patterned after Hart House, though admitted by its members to be quite incomparable to the latter. While the architecture somewhat resembles Hart House, the activities embodied therein are much less than those of Hart House. One of the greatest differences in the two institutions is the fact that Willard Straight Hall makes provision for women members.

The delegates also had the pleasure of witnessing the Thanksgiving Day game between Pennsylvania and Cornell, when the former team won by a score of 34-0. It was at this game that much information regarding the organized cheering was gleaned. They are unanimous in their admiration of the magnificent display staged by the rooters of both teams, as well as the pageant enacted by four massed student bands at half time.

The delegation was received with the greatest cordiality and hospitality by the students of both universities. They are especially loud in their praises of the members of Phi Kappa Sigma, at which house they made their headquarters in both universities.

Miss Ferguson Addresses Women of Newman Club

Miss Rose Ferguson of the Catholic Women's Welfare League addressed the women members of Newman at an informal gathering held at the Club yesterday afternoon. Miss Ferguson is a graduate of the Social Service School at Washington, and in her talk she described her work in that city, and stressed the necessity for a greater enthusiasm among the university women for this work.

Refreshments were served. Father McNab extended a vote of thanks to Miss Ferguson on behalf of those present.

DR. SCLATER SPEAKS AT CHAPEL SERVICE

Little Known Friend of Paul is Subject of Noon Address

WORTHWHILE LIFE

"A faithful life is a worthwhile life," said Dr. J. R. P. Sclater yesterday at the noon-day service in Hart House Chapel, when he spoke on Aristarchus. There were a number of people saluted by Paul at the close of his Epistles who must have been fine people to live with. They were the people who had much to do with the beginning of the Christian church. They were a class of people of whom we should like to find more repetitions in the Christian church today.

Aristarchus was one of the most interesting of these early Christians, and one of those most deserving attention. Little has been written about him; he has been mentioned but a few times in Paul's Epistles and in the Acts. However, these were sufficient to give us a considerable insight into his character. He was a man who continually found his way to the forefront. We first heard of him when he was one of two arrested in a street row, and taken before a magistrate. Paul also liked being in the forefront, and very probably this kindred spirit did much to draw them closer together.

When one considered the people in our universities, or any people preparing for life, one realized that few could achieve greatness. Few people living to-day were universally known. When people looked back on their lives and saw how insignificant they were for the welfare of the world, they were often discouraged at the seeming futility of their lives. Where did the rank and file stand? It was then they found comfort in reading of Aristarchus. There was something delightful in the fidelity of a dog to his master, and this dog-like faithfulness was shown in the character of Aristarchus. Paul was one of the strongest men who ever lived, but when at Rome it seemed that his troubles would be too great for any man to bear. It was a great comfort to know that Aristarchus was always there.

Speaking in reflection, Dr. Sclater pointed out that no one knows what God had in store for him. It was to be hoped that there would be prosperity, influence, and leadership in the community in which he lived. But it was probable that this would not be. If he could look back over a single day and say that he had been faithful, that day was well spent. Paul said, "One Aristarchus was with me." If the Lord Christ could say, "One —, a Canadian, was with me," nothing else really mattered; that life was worthwhile.

OPTIMISTIC OPINION OF STUDENTS' BRAINS BY PROFESSORS

When Library Opened at Night Experiment Considered as Doubtful

SPELLING NO FINAL TEST

Latin Helps Students Use English Words Intelligently

That the average student of the University of Toronto is not so illiterate as some would have us believe seems to be the general opinion of the professors of the different colleges.

On the contrary, Professor E. A. Dale stated that he believed the student of to-day was much more keenly interested in his studies than was the student of fifteen years ago.

Professor Dale recalled the time when the suggestion was made that the University Library remain open during the evening. It was then contended, Professor Dale said, by some of those in charge that it was a waste of time, that students would not wish to take advantage of the opportunity afforded of staying there. But since then the Library has continued to be well attended in the evening, and not merely near examination time but throughout the term.

When questioned as to his opinion about illiteracy among students, Professor Dale replied that he did not think it unduly noticeable. "After all," he went on to say, "the function of a university is not merely to teach the three R's with a view to increasing potentiality along a financial line, but to fit the student to make the best of life. Consequently the mere fact that a student mis-spells a word is not indicative of the fact that the University has failed in its duty."

Professor Kirkwood, Dean of Arts of Trinity College, stated that he believed the majority of students who seemed illiterate were guilty because of their refusal to take their work very seriously, and were merely careless and paid little attention to English. For instance, the study of Latin, he continued, helps a student to more intelligently use English words, but comparatively few students spend any

SERIES OF LECTURES ON REALITY CLOSED BY DR. W. R. TAYLOR

Professor Taylor Speaks to U.C. Women on Reality in Religion

RELIGION AKIN TO ART

Reality Was Striving for Beauty, Truth and Goodness

The last of a series of four lectures on "A Search for Reality" was delivered by Dr. Taylor at 1.30 p.m. on Wednesday at the Women's Union.

"Religion," said Dr. Taylor, "is more closely akin to Art than to Science in that it is concerned with qualities rather than quantity. We can best illustrate the relation of Religion to Reality by reviewing the progress of thought since 1860. Darwin's theory made possible new fields of scientific investigation; science became infinitely more searching, and literature threw aside all sham to face the stark realities of life.

The modern man concluded that Reality, the "It" behind things was not only alive but that it was struggling towards ends which included truth and beauty and goodness. We interpreted the meaning of Reality by ourselves since we knew of nothing superior to ourselves by which to define it.

Here was seen the concern of religion in Reality. It was not simply a platform on which all lived and struggled—but it was a great companion, struggling with us, striving with us to ends of which it was conscious and which were included in itself. "Religion, then, is the means by which we bring our personality in support with life of the whole. Our lives are but little candles in which the great light seeks to express itself. The urge within us may be expressed in terms of resonance—conceiving of philosophy, science, art, religion—as the hum given forth by the bronze bell of man as it catches a note from the eternal harmony and thrills responsively from its base into its brim."

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Truth Sought Concerning Study

"Do you believe that a University is a place for study?" Lionel M. Gelber, II Year Modern History, University College: "Yes and no; that is, study is the foremost requirement in University life, but Varsity should mean more than merely that. There are too many people here who study hard, but being unable to see beyond their books remain inescapably dull. Many who study hardest defeat the purpose of the University precisely as much as those who never open a book."

Oscar Cohen, III Year Pass, University College: "Not for study alone! Anyone who so wishes can study outside the University. The University is a place where one should be able both to study and to enjoy oneself. I have always regretted the fact that at a University as large as this one, there is not even a 'Good Times Club.'"

Miss Virginia Lewis, II Year, Occupational Therapy: "Emphatically yes!—especially for those who intend to do professional work. We would be helpless without the training the University gives us."

Albert Pasternak, I Year S.P.S.: "Unless a student is very serious-minded or in a course which takes up most of his time, the University is not a place for study for him. He has too easy and joyous a time for his best welfare."

D. G. McCullagh, IV Year Political Science, Trinity: "Sometimes I wonder whether the University is a place for study more than it is a social centre or a matrimonial bureau. The real student will study and develop anywhere, University or not,—while no amount of training will develop those with no latent ability. You can't grow roses from thistles. I think that small residential colleges are most conducive to study and thought in any case."

Lloyd Bernstein, I Year Pass: "It all depends on the individual. The average person comes here to study. No matter how great the potential ability of any person is, he will develop more quickly under proper guidance—and the University provides that guidance."

MOTION UPHELD BY ONTARIO'S PREMIER IS MAINTAINED BY LARGE MAJORITY

Co-eds Censor Censorship at Meeting of Policy Club

"Censorship isn't what it ought to be, but who is competent to censor?" was the general opinion of the Policy Club in its meeting last evening at St. Joseph's College.

Miss F. Turner of Trinity, in upholding the motion that "Censorship should be abolished," stressed the utter uselessness of the censorship, for public desire eventually overcame restrictions. In the meantime the professional instinct had cramped art, and interest in the banned book had increased.

Miss I. Robinson in her support of censorship was backed by the laws of the land. Just as a purveyor of tainted meat was subject to regulations for public goods, even so those who dealt in corrupted literature should be severely dealt with.

Miss M. McNamara was elected representative for St. Joseph's and Miss V. Mueller for Loretto.

ALLAN CUP WINNERS PLAY VARSITY

Peterboro Has Dropped Out Leaving Only Two Teams Still in Running

NOT A CINCH GAME

The fans will witness the spectacle to-night of two Blue teams in action. The Grads and the Intercollegiate will fight it out at the Mutual Street Arena for the S.P.A. cup. Peterboro have dropped out of Senior hockey for this year, and that leaves only the Grads and Varsity in the running for the trophy.

This S.P.A. series has jinxed many a team, as the winners of the previous season have almost invariably finished in the rut in the regular series. But there is no reason why either of the teams competing in the final this year should worry about any jinx. The class of the Grads has been proven time and again, and the Intercollegiate outfit only needs a chance to show its stuff.

The Undergrads' line-up is not definitely known, but it is almost certain that Whitehead and Kirkpatrick will start on the defence, with Murray Snyder in goal. If any relief is needed for the defence pair, Bob Graham may be called on.

There are two or more players available for every position on the forward line, and it is probable that two lines of attackers will be used. At the practice, two teams were lined up, with Richards, King and Legon playing forward on one outfit and Harley, Stewart and McMullen doing the attacking for the other team. These players will all be used on the front line in to-night's game, with the possibility that some others may get into action too.

The Grads will probably start their regular line-up which carried them through to the Allan Cup last year. They need no introduction to Toronto fans. It should be a real game with the odds of course in favour of the Grads. But at that it is no cinch for the boys with the sheep-skins, and if they think for a minute that all they have to do is go through the motions they are in for a surprise.

Recently the University of Wisconsin was the scene of unusual activities due to the arrival of two hundred Chinese student delegates to the eighteenth annual conference of the Chinese Student Association.

Debating Union Does Not Accord Canada the Right to Amend Her Own Constitution

VOTE OF 156 TO 93

Constitutional Reform Meant Loss of Justice For Whole Empire

Hart House Debating Union followed its custom of hospitably agreeing with its distinguished guest when by a vote of 156 to 93 it upheld the motion supported by Premier Ferguson, "That it would not be in the best interests of Canada to assume the right to amend her own constitution."

G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, spoke third in favour of the motion. He began by stating that we must look into the future in considering the question. "Our constitution is unique in character. There is nothing like it throughout the world, and Australia, New Zealand and South Africa cannot be cited as analogous cases." Our constitution was an agreement between ourselves, a contract placed in the hands of the Imperial Government, the supervisors thereof.

He denied the existence of a great demand for constitutional change, and said that the Nationalist party grew only in the amount of noise it made. As for the press, there were only two newspapers in favour of this change, and to one of these, The Daily Star, he proceeded to pay his compliments.

"Is there any necessity for change?" asked Premier Ferguson. He thought there was none. "If we have had in sixty years only five occasions to go to Britain, then I think there is no necessity to assume the right to tinker here with the constitution as we like," stated Mr. Ferguson.

With regard to the inter-provincial conference, he reviewed his questioning of M. Lapointe on this matter which the Dominion Government had placed on the agenda. It had been replied that the provinces would have to be consulted. This procedure would cause bitterness, strife and party controversy amidst elections. "Chaos, unrest, dissatisfaction" he pictured as a result of any change.

"Canada is a nation in the making," said Mr. Ferguson. He repeated Laurier's saying that the twentieth century was Canada's. He said that the industrious peasants from the Ukraine coming in here as immigrants

SPECIAL RESEARCH STUDY BEGUN IN CHILD WELFARE

Miss Grubb to Investigate on Influence of Case Work Upon Neglected Children

The Canadian Council on Child Welfare and the Department of Social Service, University of Toronto, are collaborating in a special research study, which has just been inaugurated, in the field of child care and protection.

Neglected children and the part which case work plays in giving such children an opportunity for happy, well-rounded lives, is the subject of the study which will be made under the auspices of the Child Welfare Council of Canada.

Elizabeth Grubb, who holds her senior certificate from Cambridge University, and is a member of the graduating class of the Department of Social Service, University of Toronto, will make the study under the joint supervision of that Department and of the Children's Aid Society of Toronto.

AN HONEST BIOGRAPHY IS IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE COMING GRADUATE

With the individualist in every community it is not surprising that we should find him here. Nor, where there is so much necessity for conformation, is it unusual that non-conformation should arise. But when the individual oversteps prudence to disregard the rules, regulations or requirements of his executive governing bodies then we do come upon the unexpected, and we find the enforcement of law and order.

The act of certain undergraduate bodies in this University of banding themselves together to agree not to meet the requirements or wishes of their governing body is one of discourtesy and poor judgment, and is, as well, one that most certainly will not further their interests or purposes.

The form of the Torontonensis biography has been established by the Advisory Board of Student Publications, and, subsequently, repeatedly endorsed by the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Council. Not perfect, perhaps, it was determined only after much thought and due consideration. Prices, subject matter, the information desired and expected, all had their influence. The suggested form appeared to provide the maximum useful information at the most satisfactory cost. In any case, the proposed biography is well worthy of a trial, and any organization formed with a purpose to prevent such, possesses a poisoned core that will prove most inedible to itself.

The fact that certain prominent members of several graduating classes have been approached by fellow undergraduates with the suggestion that they, the prominent students, refuse to list all their undergraduate activities is not only an act of discourtesy but an insult to all those who have achieved prominence throughout their undergraduate days. It depreciates hard work and earnest effort, and its sole excuse is the democratic, or, perhaps, radical, idea that all should herd with the mass. And so, too, the suggestion that certain bodies will refrain not only from contributing biographies but photographs as well.

The realization that the representative head of each and every faculty has agreed on the present Torontonensis form should bring co-operation from every member of the University who expects to graduate this year. It behooves us to put our best into our year book, and our best can only come with united effort and conformation. With such it is felt that the book will be a decided success and that it will meet with approbation from those now condemning it.

And so, upholding the right of free speech, honest representation of valour and the general conformation to the wishes of the governing bodies and the procedure of the masses, we do advise that the coming graduate regard Torontonensis in a sane manner, and that he or she place such information on his card as befits his or her activity, intelligence and ability.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

Women of the University of Toronto should receive with enthusiasm the announcement of two three-year fellowships in Arts and Sciences offered by Gorton College, Cambridge. Although Canadian men have for many years received scholarships or fellowships which would enable them to study in the universities of the continent, it is natural to expect, and hope, that some of this year's graduating class will submit applications.

Of especial interest is the Yarrow Scientific Research Fellowship, which includes research work in Medicine, Electricity and Agriculture. It is only in later years that women have specialized in these departments. Four women are at present registered in the "little red school house," a small minority belong to the medical faculty, while a few pursue courses at the Ontario Agricultural College.

The Yarrow Research Fellowship will not only stimulate an interest in science for women but will broaden the field and establish a goal well worth striving for.

A LETTER FROM MR. SATTERLY

Nov. 29th, 1927.
Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
I have cut the enclosed from today's "Varsity":

PROF. FAIRLEY SPEAKS TO GERMAN CLUB ON EUROPE
The German State of Mind Much Better Than That of the Victorious Nations

"I found Germany and Austria in a better state of mind than English countries," said Professor Barker Fairley in speaking to the members of the German Study Club on his recent trip to Europe, last night at Wymilwood. "By this I mean that their attitude towards the war and towards those who conquered them is much more free from prejudice than that of the victorious nations." Professor Fairley illustrated this statement by recounting a conversation he had had with a Frenchman and another with a German, in which the contrasting attitudes were very marked. While the Frenchman spoke bitterly of the last war, and outlined plans for the next one, the German was much more inclined to stand back and view the whole affair as a gigantic farce, with his own part in it the greatest joke of all.

If this is really Prof. Fairley's opinion—if he agrees with the Germans that the Great War, with its German atrocities in Belgium, the sinking of noncombatants at sea (as in the Lusitania) and the sacrifice of our men (note the six hundred of our own graduates and undergraduates whose names are on the wall of the Memorial cloister) was a "gigantic farce," then he has a peculiar mind. If Germany is in a better state of mind than English countries (including, presumably, Canada) then I wonder Prof. Fairley does not go and live in Germany. He would be far happier there; he is apparently as great a pro-German as he ever was.

I am, yours truly,
John Satterly
(Physics Building).

[Editorial Note.—In an interview, Professor Fairley stated: "The report misrepresents what I said. I did not say or think or wish to imply that Germany regarded the war as a farce. Nothing could be further from the truth. For the rest, what I meant by 'a better state of mind' is precisely illustrated by Mr. Satterly's letter."]

"ICI ON PARLE FRANCAIS" PRODUCED AT U.C. GUILD

Mr. George Douglas Directed Mirth-producing Farce in Theatre of Women's Union

In the auditorium of the Women's Union on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. George Douglas presented "Ici on Parle Francais," at the weekly meeting of the U.C. Players' Guild. Mr. Spriggins, a rash speculator, insists on letting rooms to lodgers, against the wishes of his wife, who continually stresses the fact that she is related to the Fitzgentons. The first lodger attracted by the sign, "Ici on Parle Francais," placed in one of the front windows is a young Frenchman who is finding an apartment for a young lady who has been separated from her husband. On discovering that the love for whom he is searching is the landlord's daughter, the Frenchman immediately takes rooms. At this point the maid gives notice, which causes more disturbance.

To add to the complications, the major, jealous husband of the young lady, arrives on the scene, and to escape his rage Mr. Spriggins tries to put him off the track. After several riotous scenes, of which one is almost a duel between the major and the Frenchman, the air is cleared when the major finds his wife and realizes that the Frenchman loves the landlord's daughter, and Mr. Spriggins promises faithfully to let no more lodgings and throws away his textbook, "French Before Breakfast."

A motion picture, showing campus scenes and characters, is being filmed at the University of Michigan. The purpose of the picture is to show the typical life of the university as it is at the present time.

Someone imagining that we are going to come short this year in the annual Xmas trade-off, has written the following to the Monseigneur Santa Claus:

Ribbon—a green one—and a red one with "Wiktorika" on it in yellow, to lay on J. Instant's grave.

Large Horn—with "My Own" written on it—to blow.
New Tail—My tail is told!

There are some smart events occurring in the down-town newspapers these days: wild-eyed and voluble minions of the Etoile are dashing periodically up to our great University and hoodwinking eminent academici into cutting loose with popular facts that tickle the great populace; an eminent ecclesiastic acting as dramatic editor on "La Terre" refused in righteous sorrow to review "The Barker," a great play with a splendid actor, Richard Bennett, in it; the doctor based his critical abstinence on the fact that "The Barker's" dialogue contained words that his grandmother never used on any occasion—heigh! so this is Journalism! And if it is, what more proof is needed than this, that we need a course of Journalism in a place where men still know a preposition from a conjunction.

HERITAGE

Wayfarer of the years, I walked
Upon the most mysterious road
Where men of words and symbols talked
And common sense, the spirits' goad.

Little they left me as they went,
And only Love unfettered me;
Reason slow-earned was strangely spent,—
Now I am happy, I am free.

Somewhere a whistle in the mist
Down the dim path my ancients knew,
A hand of magic on my wrist
And in my heart a whispered rue,

I turned me from the travelled way
And in a silent forest found
A cabin never built by day
That slept upon enchanted ground.

Within I went, and finger-tips
Were on the wide sill of my mind
While wonder trembled on my lips
At age-old voices in the wind.

Beyond a glassless window burned
A light of blue on some far hill,
And I was glad that I had turned Back to the Folk who knew me still.

VARSITY JUNIORS DEFEAT OSHAWA 3-2 IN S.P.A. FIXTURE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

We are betting on Varsity winning the Senior S.P.A. title. It's a sure bet, because Varsity Grads and Varsity Intercollegiate are the only ones left in the finals, and they settle the dispute at the Mutual Street Arena to-night.

The Grads are the heavy favourites, but it never pays to under-rate any team of any kind that "Mike" Pearson trots out. Remember this—last year's team is intact, and added to that is the fact that several new men have been added.

Frank Sullivan has a smart bunch of Juniors this year; but they need practice and team work. Last night they won, but it was hardly by team work. When they get working together it will be a good aggregation. At present they are adept at passing the puck out in front of the nets to an opponent. Hunnisett is a real smart goalie. He kicked off a few nice shots last night and robbed the Oshawa team of what looked like sure goals.

Bean and Mooney, on the defence, will be hard men to get around when they lose their "rugby legs" and get more used to skates. Even now they are not to be sneezed at.

Fans are reminded of the Varsity-Grad game at the Mutual Street Arena to-night. Tickets are on sale at the Athletic Office, and there should be a large attendance of the faithful. The game promises to be a real battle, for the S.P.A. cup is at stake.

Vic Frosh Basketball Team

Win College Championship
Victoria Frosh defeated the Sops in a fast clean basketball game for the college championship. The winners could not find themselves till the second period, when they were forced to run in four baskets to pass their rivals. Woods, Davison, Barrett and Bowles look like promising material for the Interfaculty series. Leuten-slayer starred for the losers.

VARSITY JUNIOR HOCKEY TEAM WINS GAME

Oshawa Holds Whip Hand for First Half of Keen Game

LISTER SPLITS DEFENCE

Beal Scores Winning Goal on a Pass from Smith in Last Period

Fighting an uphill battle, the Varsity Junior hockey team came from behind to defeat Oshawa 3-2, and earned the right to continue in the race for the S.P.A. title.

The Motor City team started the game with such a rush that seldom were the locals able to get past centre ice. Three abreast the Green Shirts swept down the ice only to be turned back by Mooney and Bean. Hunnisett in goal made some nice saves, especially when Rowden rounded the defence with only the goalie to beat. A minute later the same player weaved one through a maze of players from outside the blue line and Hunnisett didn't see the puck until the red light went on. Shortly after a three-man attack made things look bad for Varsity when Oshawa finished their evening's scoring on a close in shot.

Oshawa held the whip hand for the first part of the second period, but faded badly when Lister split the defence, giving Levesque no chance to save. Near the end of the period Clute took a pass from Beal in front of the nets, tying the score.

Varsity pressed strongly in the final period, and with seven minutes to go Beal scored the winning goal on a pass from Smith. Rowden and Rundell were the losers' best, while Beal and Smith starred for Varsity.

Line-up:
Varsity: Goal, Hunnisett; defence, Mooney, Bean; centre, Beal; forwards, Smith, Leak; subs, Lister, Clute, Taylor.

Oshawa: Goal, Levesque; defence, Sponton, Hanington; centre, Rundell; forwards, Rowden, Black; subs, Whitton, Little, Burger, Gray.

Referee: H. Farlow.

Two Last Water Polo Games in Group Series Played To-day

Unless something very unforeseen happens, Junior and Senior U.C. are winners of their respective groups in the Eckhardt water polo competition. The two last games in the group series are to be played this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Dents meet Junior U.C., and while the result will have no bearing on the group leadership, Dents are out to win in order to finish in second place, and also to administer at least one defeat to Jun. U.C. Senior U.C. play Senior Meds at 5.30, and must win in order to definitely qualify for the play-offs. The standing to date:

Section A.		Won	Lost
Senior U.C.	4	0
Senior Meds	1	3

The annual meeting of the Rowing Club will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 6, in the Lecture Room of Hart House at 5 p.m. Reports of the various activities of the organization during the past year will be given, and there will be moving pictures of several of the recent crews in action. The members of the crews in the Interfaculty series are also invited to see the moving pictures.

Training on the machines in Hart House will commence on January 9th and all new recruits should report on that date.

more time on Latin than is absolutely necessary to pass their examinations. Amongst Honour students, Professor Kirkwood said, there is more application to study, and as a result illiteracy is less common. At the same time a certain amount of illiteracy among students is due to their lack of observation, their being young and undeveloped, and devoting too much time to outside social activities.

MOTION OF PREMIER UPHOLD IN DEBATE

grants had to be impressed by the stability of government, not changeable at the will of a party in power.

"What does new status mean?" queried the Premier. A national status meant new responsibilities. What about defence? "Does anybody doubt that the heel of the German would have been pressed on Canadian soil had it not been for the British navy?" Were we going to help in our own defence or leave it to Britain, while assuming national status?

The logical outcome of the reasoning of constitutional reformers was the abolition of the Privy Council—(cheers from the opposition)—which would mean the loss of the fountain of justice for all the Empire—(Government cheering). Why not abolish the office of Governor-General and cut loose from the Empire altogether? He was opposed to all these changes.

"I am afraid that the view is spreading in the old country that Canada wants to run her own affairs absolutely," opened the Premier. Lack of Imperial leadership and Imperial thinking was the cause.

He described the economic disadvantages suffered by the Maritimes and other provinces in order to remain in the Empire "which has done more for civilization and the uplifting of mankind than any other organization the world has ever known."

"It is a great Imperial issue," he concluded, "Canada should not assume an authority which may prove to be a great disadvantage to her and lead to the disintegration of the Empire."

"After long years of waiting I would welcome to this House our distinguished Prime Minister," remarked David Walker, University College, in opening the debate. Following his welcome to the Premier, he explained that the matter under discussion was not a party issue. "We are not arguing for Imperial connection; we are arguing in the best interests of Canada as a nation."

"Canada has the right of amending her constitution at the present time, but she wishes that right to remain in law with the British Parliament," declared Mr. Walker. He argued that Canada's present status in the Empire was not inconsistent with a national policy—a status which has the support of the people. "The present system has been in vogue for sixty years—I challenge my honourable friends to show where it has not proved adequate."

"Minorities must be considered—a change must not give greater rights than they enjoy at the present time," he continued, in dealing with Quebec especially. "We must get away from theoretical constitutional problems and devote our attention to railways, power, immigration. . . ."

"Britain will grant us this right, yet we shun it. Why should we not accept our responsibility? It is justly ours and Britain will give it to us. As the only self-governing Dominion, we are afraid to accept responsibility," remarked Mr. J. M. King, of St. Michael's College, in speaking against the motion. He, too, welcomed Premier Ferguson.

"The British North American Act had a clause protecting minorities, yet

VICTORIA GIRLS WIN BASEBALL SERIES

Incorrect Headline Awards Championship to U.C. Squad

VIC SCORES 111 RUNS

"The Varsity" wishes to correct the false impression created by the headline, "U.C. Wins Championship of Girls' Baseball Series," which appeared in Wednesday's issue. The championship was won by the Victoria College team when they defeated U.C. in their last game just one week ago. During the series the Vic squad ran over the home plate to score 111 times in some 33 innings played. This was a decisive and overwhelming majority over any other team score. Vic were winners in every game which they played, including two bouts with U.C. Vic team is not comprised of "freshettes" as one might suppose judging by the headline, "Vic Freshettes Undeclared in Baseball Series," which appeared along with the title announcing that U.C. had won the championship. The team has representatives from all years. They play an excellent type of ball and show splendid team play and good sportsmanship.

MOTION OF PREMIER UPHELD IN DEBATE

I believe that it is due, not to this clause, but to the restraint placed on ourselves by ourselves. Canada does not want minority rights infringed because it realizes what minority rights mean," continued Mr. King, in remarking the fact that the assumption of the power to change the constitution did not mean the trampling of minorities in Canada. "Let them realize that it is Canada herself who protects their rights."

"The Imperial Parliament either railroads Canadian questions through, or considers them gravely and thoroughly," said Mr. King. He argued that Canadians were quite capable of railroading their own matters in their own Parliament—the responsibility, if grave, rests with them as well.

"By assuming the right to amend her constitution, Canada will strengthen the ties of the Empire by creating a sense of unity and confidence in her own sons. How can the Empire hang together if the units of the Empire have no confidence in themselves? Britain will grant this right—shall we accept it?" concluded Mr. King.

"Canada has the right to amend her constitution, but the state of our constitution a hundred, five hundred, a thousand years from now, is too far off for consideration at present. Experience is the only test of government. Logic is futile, the logic of events is the only convincing logic," explained Mr. D. D. Gunn of Trinity College, supporting the motion as the second speaker. He continued: "Sentiment is much more likely to move people than reason; but this is false sentiment—false dignity."

"We have a 4.4 constitution, perhaps; but under a new constitution we might get harder stuff—(loud laughter)"—remarked Mr. Gunn, in commenting in the views of the opposition. He stated that the negative claimed that the status quo was not compatible to the results of the Imperial Conference. Mr. Gunn denied this. "The present procedure is not inconsistent with the status quo—the people are happy."

"Canada does not at present enjoy those rights which make a power in international law. When Canada assumes the right to amend her own constitution, she justifies her full status as a nation in international law," declared B. J. Thompson, of University College, in attacking the resolution. Mr. Thompson confined himself largely to matters of a constitutional and legal aspect.

"Both parties agree that Canada has the right to amend her own constitution, but we declare that Canada must assume that right. The assumption of this right will increase the power of the British Empire to its fullest extent in international law." Mr. Thompson considered that the prestige of Canada to-day in the League of Nations and elsewhere in world affairs was an aftermath of the glory acquired in the war, and once deflated took place, Canada would be relegated to her former status.

A bed remade frequently is more comfortable, the speaker assumed. A chambermaid is the logical person to do this. Constitutionally speaking, Mr. Thompson asked: "What loyal citizen is going to get up and say that he wants the Imperial Parliament to play the chambermaid to Canada?"

"Daughter I am in my mother's house, but mistress in my own," he quoted. "If Canada does not assume the right to amend her own constitution, she must stagger along like an old maid, with all her hopes vanished—but oh! what hopes she has."

Mr. B. D. Beamish, speaking from the floor in favour of the motion, stated that "this move towards independence" would be regarded by unthinking people as the beginning of the end for the British Empire. "I am an Imperialist," said Mr. Beamish. "I am Scotch." He claimed that warships cost seventy-five million dollars apiece and that "we should stick to Britain."

Mr. J. H. Gringorten spoke for the Noes and announced that Canada had reached manhood and could make her own marriages with other nations.

Mr. Robert Fowler, a supporter of the motion, spoke before Mr. James Lindsay, a former president of the Oxford Union. He began by complimenting the Toronto men on their oratory and appealed for the admission of women spectators to the House. He abstained from taking sides on the motion.

LAST OF SERIES ON BRITISH ART BY STEWART DICK

Early Eighteenth Century Marked by Period of Artificial Work

FOLLOWED BY SINCERITY

Tendency of Modern Painting is Towards Versatility and Cosmopolitanism

In his final lecture of the series Mr. Stewart Dick covered, Wednesday the period of British Art from about 1840 to 1900.

The early eighteenth century years were marked by a period of heavy artificial work, mainly copied types from earlier artists. The artist of this period seemed to lack initiative in both design and subject matter. But this rather dull stolid work so prevalent then was driven out by the advent of a new school of artistic thought called the Pre-Raphaelite School, of which Forbes Brown was the forerunner.

The Pre-Raphaelitism, whose leading exponents were Holman Hunt, Dante Rossetti and Milais derive their name from their united protest against the unrealistic art of the day. They believe that if the painters must copy, their examples should come from what they considered the most magnificent artists—those of the early Italian school.

In some respects the "opposition union" which these three formed was a bit childish in form. For example, they drew up a system of rules which their own work was to follow. But in its essentials these rulings brought what the art of the day needed. They protested against the prevalent work in that it was they said, stupid. They attempted to get more directly in touch with nature.

The motive of the Pre-Raphaelites is embodied in their striving for sincerity in art as in all things. They painted directly from nature itself, and every one of their pictures must needs enshrine a worthy subject, which in turn was handled with always elaborate and exquisite care. Many followers of this school retained this idealism of subject matter but failed to affect a correspondingly capable handling. Milais, Hunt and Rossetti went out into nature and painted their backgrounds, accomplishing, as typical of their work, a marvellous technique of colouring.

Milais rather tended in his work to dwell on the story element, as is shown in the "Death of Aphelia" and his picture the "Boyhood of Raleigh." This was, however, probably more characteristic of his early work, for in his life later on he became a fashionable portrait painter.

The "Annunciation" was Rossetti's most magnificent canvas. Its grandeur is not so much in perfection of form and colour as in the fine spiritual quality of the subject matter.

The gulf between the "Pre-Raphaelites" and John Sargeant is bridged by the work of Whistler. His work is of an entirely different phase, less minute and more of a symphony. Whistler was attacked by Ruskin, who is an able and active supporter of the earlier school.

"The tendency of modern painting," said Mr. Dick, "is to become less nationally divided, and it is, hence, both more versatile and more cosmopolitan."

WANT OF CONFIDENCE VOTE OUSTS GOVT. AT ST. MIKE'S

Eloquence, Points of Order and Privilege Feature the Discussion

After a hot and furious debate, the Opposition carried a motion of want of confidence in the Government at the second meeting of St. Michael's Parliament last night. W. J. O'Meara, who was elected Speaker earlier in the evening, succeeded in maintaining order throughout, in spite of the fact that some were carried away by the eloquence of the various speakers, and points of privilege and order abounded throughout the evening.

While the Government was thus defeated on a motion of major importance, Prime Minister McNamara has made no definite decision as to his immediate course of action. The Governor-General, P. J. J. Martin, will probably make an important announcement bearing on the situation in the near future.

Professor Peter Gillespie is Honoured at Luncheon

"Each one of us in Canada is in a position to promote the better understanding that should exist between Great Britain and the United States," said Prof. Peter Gillespie, Professor of Civil Engineering at the University of Toronto at a luncheon given in his honour at the King Edward Hotel yesterday.

The speaker was introduced by Dean De Lury of the Faculty of Arts. Prof. Allcut presided.

Vic. Girls Defeat St. Mike's in Interfaculty Basketball

Vic girls swamped St. Mike's in the basketball game at U.T.S. last night with a 63-9 score. Combination playing and clever passing featured the Vic playing. St. Mike's fought hard but were outclassed all around. Marian Forward and Grace Keffer starred for Vic, and Ida Jones turned in a steady game for St. Mike's.

The line-up:
Vic: Forwards, Ede Buchanan, Helen McKim; centres, Anne Wingfield, Marian Forward; defence, Al Muckle, Grace Keffer.

St. Mike's: Forwards, Ida Jones, Alice Quinlan; centres, Mary Gardiner, Helen Dore; defence, V. Mulvihill, Phyllis Austen.

SPIRITED DISCUSSION AT MENORAH MEETING

Mr. Martin Cohen Delivers Interesting Paper on Reformed Judaism

The second closed meeting of the Menorah Society was held last night in the Vestry Chambers of Holy Blossom Synagogue with a large number present.

There has been a steady increase both in the attendance at Menorah meetings and in the interest shown by its members. The monthly closed meetings have been characterized by spirited intellectual discussions of a high order.

Mr. Martin Cohen delivered a paper on "Reformed Judaism" in which he gave a fairly comprehensive description of that aspect of the Jewish religion. He traced its history through the various stages of its growth—from its beginnings with Moses Mendelssohn and other German Jews to its present position. "Reformed Judaism tells us what religion ought to do, but sometimes it does not seem to be quite sure of how to go about doing it," was his concluding statement.

A spirited discussion followed.

ANTI-SUICIDE CLUB UP FOR DISCUSSION AT VIC PARLIAMENT

Opinion Expressed That There Are Many Who Should Commit Suicide

MOTION IS U.S. PROPOSAL

Resolution Regarding Compulsory $2.00 Athletic Fee is Defeated

An interesting session of the Victoria Students' Parliament was held in Alumni Hall of the College last evening. The President of the Parliament, Mr. M. K. Kenny, presided, and although there were surprisingly few members present, the discussion was none the less interesting.

The first motion before the House was, "Resolved that the student body is in favour of a compulsory $2.00 athletic fee." After considerable argument, the motion, together with certain amendments, was defeated.

The second resolution was of more general interest. It read, "Resolved that an anti-suicide club should be formed at Victoria." In introducing the motion, the President informed the House that the topic had been suggested to Victoria by an American University, which had held an interesting discussion on the subject.

Mr. F. St. L. Daly led off in support of the motion. He stated that he had been doing research work on this subject and as a result had some startling facts to make known. He informed the House that, to the best of his knowledge, in one U.S. university the matter of suicide became so serious that the authorities were forced to issue instructions which would enable a student to commit suicide without cluttering up the University with his remains. The speaker went on to say that, in his opinion, there were many people who should commit suicide and that there should be another club formed to exterminate these. He expressed the belief that if these undesirable were done away with, many who would otherwise commit suicide, owing to the presence of the undesirable, could be prevailed upon not to do so.

Another member made the suggestion that the professors should form an opposition body, namely, a suicide club. There was one discussion as to (Continued on page 4)

GRADS TRIM VARSITY IN CLOSE CONTEST FOR S.P.A. HONOURS

Olympic Representative Forced to the Limit All Through Game

FINAL SCORE 4-2

Grads Hold Lead During Entire Game But Varsity Always Dangerous

Varsity and the Grads met at last at the Arena last night in the S.P.A. final, and the Olympic representatives went home with the long end of a 4-2 score. But it was not without a struggle that they bumped over the Blue-shirted Varsity squad. The latter stepped right into the Allan Cup holders and forced them to step at top speed throughout the entire contest.

The Grads led during the whole game, but there was little of the time that Varsity was not dangerous, and Sullivan and Mueller had some anxious moments in the Grads' net.

The Varsity defence pair, Kirkpatrick and Whitehead, stepped right into the opposing forwards as they came in with the puck, and the bumping tended to slow up the Grad machine. Whitehead could not seem to get his rushes started, but the big fellow has only been on skates a few times, and will be far better as the season advances. His defensive work was excellent. Kirkpatrick rushed often and effectively, accounting for one of the goals, while he was a tower of strength on the defence. Bob Graham was only on for a few minutes and did not get a chance to show much.

The Grads had most of the play in the first period, but the defensive work of the Varsity team held them to one goal. Murray Snyder in the Varsity nets was responsible for some brilliant saves, and several goals might have been added to the Grads score without attaching any blame to him.

King and Stewart alternated at centre, and the latter scored Varsity's first goal. Mac's back checking was a thorn in the side of the Grads' forward line, and he broke up many attacks before they got started.

Legon started at right wing and was relieved by Harley. Legon tried hard but was inclined to carry the puck in (Continued on page 3)

M. AND P. SOCIETY MEETING ADDRESSED BY DR. BEATTY

Trisection of the Angle Shown to be Impossible
Problem

Dr. Beatty and Mr. A. W. Tucker were speakers at a meeting of the Mathematical and Physical Society held in the Physics Buildings last night. Mr. Tucker outlined the development of mathematics up to 1827, making special reference to the contributions of Cauchy, Gauss and Sobatchevsky. To the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries is attributed the development of symbolic notation, theory of equations, decimals, Napierian logarithms and the solving of indeterminate equations.

Dr. Beatty outlined the achievements of the Greeks in Mathematics. He also showed some interesting proofs of the impossibility of certain problems, of which the trisection of an angle is a celebrated example.

Non-resident Victoria Women Discuss Plans for Year Tea

At 1.30 p.m. on Thursday the non-resident girls of 2T9 Victoria met at Wymilwood to discuss plans for a year tea to be given once a month for the 2T9 Victoria women. It was decided that the first of these teas shall be held on Tuesday next, Dec. 5th, from 4.30 to 5.30, in Wymilwood. By getting together once a month in this way, the residence and out-of-residence girls, who otherwise see very little of each other, will have a chance to become better acquainted.

Junior U.C. Defeats O.C.E. on U.T.S. Basketball Floor

The Junior U.C. basketball team defeated O.C.E. 35-11 in their home game yesterday afternoon at the U.T.S. gym. Although the score indicates a rather one-sided game, both teams played well. The half time score was 7-5. During the first half the shooting was poor but soon livened up.

Ede Blackwell, who has been playing baseball all fall, and has not been able to give support until now, played her usual fast game.

Phyl Ferguson and Marion Henderson, two U.C. guards, played splendid ball. In the second half the outstanding feature was U.C.'s fast team play.

PROFESSOR CLAWSON SPEAKS ON CHAUCER IN FIFTH OF SERIES

Two Centuries After Death Was Regarded as Greatest English Poet

MORNING STAR OF ENGLISH

His Career as Diplomat and Poet is Briefly
Reviewed

"Two centuries after Chaucer's death, he was universally accepted as the greatest of English poets," stated Professor Clawson in his lecture on Chaucer, given in West Hall, yesterday afternoon. Chaucer's poems were among the first to be printed by Caxton, and during the sixteenth century five editions of his works came out. During the seventeenth century, only two editions of Chaucer were published. To many of the brilliant Elizabethans, Chaucer seemed old-fashioned, although it was still the thing to call him our greatest poet. From the mid-seventeenth to the mid-eighteenth centuries, he was regarded as an old wit of the Rabelaisian fashion.

Chaucer refined our English tongue—and was called the morning star of English poetry. Professor Clawson cited Dryden's praise of Chaucer as a perpetual fountain of good sense. Dryden regarded Chaucer as a sort of diamond in the rough that must be polished by translating his works. In 1840 a complete modern edition of Chaucer was attempted, but it was not successful and so not completed.

"We know more of Chaucer's life than we do of Shakespeare's," said Professor Clawson, "but the exact date of his birth is still uncertain." It was probably about 1344. The question of Chaucer's education has been widely discussed, some of the earlier critics claiming he attended both Oxford and Cambridge, while Professor Manley in his book on Chaucer claims that he spent seven years at the Inns of the Court.

In 1369 the Book of the Duchess was written, as a funeral poem in honour of Blanche, the wife of John of Gaunt, an early patron of Chaucer. In this, Chaucer begins his work as a court poet in imitation of the French literature then fashionable. It is written in the style of the French Roman de la Rose which poem Chaucer translated.

Chaucer was sent abroad on several diplomatic missions, twice to Italy. In the House of Fame we see the results of his reading in the too-frequent references to Ovid and Virgil. This poem has been condemned as a formless and half-finished experiment, but it has a definite purpose finally carried out. It was written while Chaucer was in very high spirits and instances his characteristic irony.

The Parlement of Fowles was written to celebrate the marriage of Richard II and has always been very popular. Mosfield says it gave him the impulse to write poetry. In the contrast between the chivalric and plebeian types of birds, we see signs of Chaucer's ironic humour. About 1385 Chaucer entered upon a period of great court favour. He was called upon to read his poems before the King and Queen, and Professor Clawson described a painting of just such a scene.

The rest of Chaucer's life was sketched briefly by Professor Clawson with special attention paid to the Canterbury Tales. It is not known just when he began them, and he worked at them until his death. The story of the pilgrimage was uppermost in Chaucer's mind rather than any individual story. Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Are Co-ed's Looks a Handicap?

Are good looks a handicap to the modern co-ed?

J. G. Currie, Third Year P. and G.: "The modern co-ed far from being under a handicap is placed at a great advantage, the advantage increasing in direct ratio with the increase in beauty."

F. J. MacD., Fourth Year U.C.: "Socially an advantage, academically a disadvantage, perhaps one out of eight co-eds are here for purely academic reasons, of necessity so; the great majority would sooner be told they are pretty than get 100% in an exam."

Miss M. R. Eoll, Fourth Year Arts: "Academically, they don't make a bit of difference. As for the social side of the question, I think that personality would count for more than good looks."

Bertram Maura, First Year, Pass Arts: "In my experience I only know of one case in which true beauty is coupled with academic achievement. Therefore in my estimation they are a disadvantage."

Margaret Struthers, Third Year, Pass: "Socially good looks are an asset, but as far as studying goes they are a distinct handicap."

W. A. Robinson, First Year S.P.S.: "They are a decided asset socially, but as far as academic work is concerned I find it impossible to study with a good looking girl on my knee."

Grace Elliot, Second Year Moderns: "Oh no, I think they are very helpful in a social way, and it doesn't prevent studying if she really wants to."

S. Gotfried, Fourth Year Political Science: "No, I don't think so. If she is good-looking, to begin with, she doesn't have to spend so much effort on fads and frills, and has more time for her studies. Still, I doubt if the modern co-ed comes to school solely for study's sake, and good looks are certainly no handicap to her in other fields."

IS A CHANGE IN THE DEBATING SYSTEM NECESSARY?

The suggestion for the improvement of Hart House debates, made by a correspondent in an adjacent column, appears meritorious and well worthy of sincere consideration. However honest we may wish to be in coming to a decision on any matter before the House, it may be admitted that there is the inclination to be influenced one way or the other when other than an undergraduate speaks, particularly if that speaker be a prominent man in public life.

Aside from the issue of Wednesday's debate entirely, the feeling that one is guilty of grave discourtesy if he should fail to agree with the speaker of the evening does tend to manifest itself in certain minds. And so also when the speaker has laid a verbal barrage of a heroic or patriotic nature. Few of us wish to be accused guilty of poor hospitality, and fewer still of non-patriotism. As a consequence, lest we be misunderstood, it may be that we find ourselves inclined to vote rather according to the dictates of our emotions more than to the advice of our intellects.

The statement has been heard, "How horrible it will be if so and so is defeated to-night," and, coming from men who are well informed, may be taken generally as the attitude of the average member attending a debate. We are not inclined to believe that such an attitude is the one honestly held by the members of the debates committee, but rather that they would wish the voting to be based upon the manner in which the arguments have been presented and the merit of the facts expounded.

There is the fact that the debate follows the open system and that he who happens to catch the eye of the speaker may be called to the floor and thereon give vent to his own ideas and feelings. But it is not on the merit of these latter we feel that the decision of the House should rest, but rather on the principal speakers of the evening.

All of which is by way of discussion on a matter which, it would appear, is worthy of discussion. There are no doubt arguments pro and con, and now would seem to be the time to hear them.

TORONTO MEASURES UP

In connection with the Scientific Research Fellowship offered by Cambridge to women graduates of any University, it is interesting to notice how many great scientists the University has already given to the world. We mention six.

Dr. Charles Saunders, the Dominion cerealist, is internationally known as an authority on wheat and the production of Marquis wheat. Dr. John C. MacLennan of the University of Toronto Staff, who during the War made great advances in the production of helium gas, was awarded in 1927 the Royal Society's medal for research in Spectroscopy and Atomic Physics.

Everyone knows of Dr. Banting, the discover of insulin. In 1923 he was elected a Fellow of the American College of Physicians, and in '23 awarded the Nobel Prize, together with Professor J. J. R. MacLeod. Dr. J. S. Plaskett, Director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Victoria, B.C., is a graduate of this University, and a famous astronomer. Our Medical Health Officer, Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, holds the unique position of Honorary President and life member of the International Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors.

These are outstanding examples, but the University of Toronto has sent scientists all over the world, and many nations profit by their discoveries and inventions. The University numbers many famous women among her ex-students, but looks to the future for women graduates who will figure in the realm of science.

The Hart House Debate

Some Critical Observations by "Onlooker"

The Hon. G. Howard Ferguson was of course the "piece de resistance"—and whether one agreed with him or not, one had to admit that he did honour the debate, the students, and the University by coming early and staying throughout—and, above all else, by treating his subject, his opponents and his audience seriously. In short, he debated as a member of Hart House. The other speakers on the paper were all good. Mr. Walker in his introduction might have left the self evident qualities of "the guest" to the discernment of the House. It is a pity too that he cut himself so short. Mr. King was somewhat nervous in the earlier part of his speech and moved about too much, but improved as he got under way. Mr. Gunn comes from Trinity and incidentally does her honour. He has energy and an excellent appearance, but his delivery is a little erratic. Mr. Thompson has an excellent voice and sense of humour and used both to advantage, also his intimate friendship with distinguished gentlemen like Mr. Oppenheim. He likes simple things, including water. Nothing of importance was contributed from the floor save the cautiousness of the Scotch and the price of warships. On the whole it was a very satisfactory debate, including the substantial majority on division.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

VOICES PROTEST AT DEBATING SYSTEM

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

If an undergraduate may be permitted to raise his voice in protest against the customs followed by the powers that be, may I be allowed to advance what I consider to be an attempt, at least, at constructive criticism re the procedure followed at the recent Hart House debate.

On this occasion the affirmative was upheld by a majority of sixty-three, and while I do not contend that the change which I am about to suggest would have resulted in the reversal of the decision, it would undoubtedly have awarded the decision to the affirmative by a much smaller margin.

The point to which I object is this: Rather than dividing the House after the addresses of the members, this action was deferred until after the address of a well-known, independent, and powerful orator—namely, Premier Ferguson.

Now be it clearly understood that I appreciate as well as any honour bestowed upon the House by the presence and participation of this distinguished graduate, but may I suggest that under future similar circumstances the House be divided previous to the time occupied by the visiting speaker, thus permitting the rendering of a fair verdict upon the ability of the members taking part in the debate by preventing any external influence which undoubtedly bears heavily upon the final decision.

Yours truly,

E. S. Connor.

OLYMPICS TAKE S.P.A. FINAL FROM VARSITY BY A 4-2 SCORE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity surprised some of the "wise ones" by their showing against the Grads last night. The Students demonstrated that they have a smart team this year and will have to be reckoned with when the honours are being handed out in the O.H.A. series.

The Grads defeated Marlboros, Toronto's other senior O.H.A. entry, by a score of 7-3 last week, and Collegians held the Grads to a 4-2 count. Comparison of scores is of little use, but it should show that the Blue and White team will give any of them a run for their money.

This Kirkpatrick-Whitehead defence fence is a treat to watch. They make no mistakes, and when they set out to topple in coming forward, they make a good job of it. At that they do not forget about the puck-carrier and allow very few open shots on the goal. And when they sally into enemy territory they can be depended upon to get their shot at the goal before they return.

The women waste no time in getting the Interfaculty series under way. Their baseball is about over and the men have not even had a meeting to arrange groupings. But then the men have fall sports to keep them occupied.

Some of the first and second year men are bewailing the fact already that though practicing hard for the Sifton Cup, the series does not start until well on in January, and hence they get no credit for P.T. The extra P.T. classes will help to keep them in condition so the added exercise should not hurt them much.

From the notice in yesterday's Varsity, Victoria is starting something new in having an inter-year assault-at-arms. This innovation should prove a success, as Vic has a fairly large enrolment now, and there is bound to be some promising material unearthed. The only thing to do now is for the men to turn out and support it, as Meds, School, etc., have a real ring and mat feast every year.

Fencing surely is coming back, and even the McGill Daily has an account of a bloody duel taking place in the eastern mountain city. Whether it was a fact or not and blood drawn is not for us to say, but we will say this—even a friendly "duel" should not take place without the necessary masks and protectors. More than one man has been seriously injured or killed through faulty protection when brandishing foils, and Toronto has not been free from such accidents. Fencing is one of the best sports known, but protection is necessary, just as in football or anything else.

INTERFACULTY MEET TO-MORROW EVENING

Five Swimming Teams Will Compete for Possession of Fitzgerald Cup

DANCING WILL FOLLOW

The annual Interfaculty swimming meet for the possession of the Fitzgerald Cup to be held in the Hart House tank to-morrow night will bring together some of the strongest Interfaculty swimming teams ever assembled. Keen competition is looked for particularly in the relay event, in which five teams are entered. School, Dents, and Meds have entries in this event, while U.C. will have two teams.

U.C. has won the Cup for a number of years, but it can't last forever. "Johnny" Goss is entered in the 100 yards and 200 yards free style events—so look out, U.C. Varsity has a number of first-class swimmers, and some records should be broken to-morrow night. Leo Latchford, U.C. swimmer of long standing, is entered in the 100 yards free style and the 50 yards back stroke—a record may go to the board in either of these events. Ross Thompson, president of the University Water Polo and Swimming Club, is also entered in these two events; he is a smooth swimmer and fast, and represented Varsity last year in these two events.

For variety and to contribute to the fun of the evening there will be two novelties; the nature of these events has so far been kept a secret.

There will be a dance in the big gym after the meet, at which the Fitzgerald Cup will be presented to the winning team. This is a good opportunity for the ladies to acquaint themselves with the mysteries of Hart House tank—such a privilege is not often offered.

The following is the list of events and entries. The events will be run off in this order:—

1. LONG PLUNGE—R. McEwen, Meds; G. Peacock, Meds; J. U. Curtis, U.C.; J. Walker, U.C.; W. Campbell, Grind.
2. RELAY RACE—S.P.S., Dents, Meds, U.C. (A and B teams).
3. FANCY DIVING—J. Thwaites, S.P.S.; W. Scarth, S.P.S.; J. E. Gundy, Meds; T. McKey, St. Mich.; A. F. Plumptre, U.C.

too far before shooting, and lost several opportunities to score. Harley also delayed his shooting at times, but he was one of the most dangerous men on the ice.

Richards at left wing showed no fear of the mighty Hudson, and was only robbed of a couple of tallies by the toughest kind of luck. McMullen, who relieved Dicky, played a smart game and appears to be in for a big year.

The Grads started their regular line-up, with F. Sullivan, Fisher, Gordon and Rogers Plaxton in the relief roles. Joe Sullivan retired after the first period, and Mueller finished the game in the Grads net.

The Grads opened the scoring three minutes after play started when Plaxton tallied on a pass from Trotter. The next score came in the first minute of the second period, Trotter netting the puck on a solo effort. Stewart got one just before the period ended on a pass from Legon.

Trotter put the Grads two up again in the third period, but Kirkpatrick came right back and got his goal on a shot from the corner. Frank Sullivan ended the scoring in the last few minutes of play.

Line-ups:
Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Whitehead and Kirkpatrick; centre, King; wings, Legon and Richards; subs, Harley, Stewart, McMullen, Graham and Little.

Grads: Goal, Sullivan; defence, Porter and Taylor; centre, Plaxton; wings, Hudson and Trotter; subs, Fisher, R. Plaxton, Gordon, F. Sullivan and Mueller.

CORRESPONDENCE

OPPOSES TRIAL MARRIAGE

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

I confess I was righteously shocked at Diogenes' question last Tuesday. Even wise men have their failings—or is our Diogenes unworthy of his predecessor? Did you notice that only one man out of four answered the question from a religious standpoint? Also did you notice that both women opposed it strenuously? Good for them, and I hope we have more men who oppose it, although Diogenes would have us think otherwise. As regards trial marriages, of course the men would approve. They have nothing to lose, no suffering to endure, and they certainly do not sacrifice anything. What a nice little holiday! Five years of bliss and then walk off—for that is exactly what they will do. It is just a simple psychological fact that a person will not do what he does not want to if he does not have to. They do not have to put up with their women's faults—therefore they do not and will not. Furthermore, it will unsteady a man. He will flit from one woman to another. What about the poor unfortunate children that there are bound to be when emotions are thus uncurbed? No father; no home influence; disgraced or broken mother. They make the kind of people who fill our prisons. The men say glibly, "Of course the children will be provided for." Will the State? Hardly. Then the man himself will soon be maintaining an orphanage—but it is not likely that he will do even this. He will leave them to the poor woman of whom he has tired, and she will never give up her children. Here is some news for you men. Mother love is the greatest and strongest love on earth. A woman will fight to the finish for those children, and she would even endure a discontented and grouchy husband for their sake. Did not one of the girls answer that it is poor sportsmanship not to live up to a bad bargain in marriage? Men are poor sports in this case.

As for the women, they are a foolish lot. They are greatly influenced by men. Fellows, you don't realize how much a girl's conduct depends on you. She will smoke, drink and snuggle just for dates. She thinks that is what you want. So she will try a trial marriage, not knowing what she is stepping into, to please a man.

Now, do not say this is not, because not all men by any means would even try a trial marriage, and most girls heartily disapprove. I think for the most part they want to act squarely, but unfortunately there are just enough of that kind of people to make such a question current and even appear in our own "Varsity." So let us stand up and cheer for the right so loudly that these immoral experiments will not be heard of, and let us hope that the examples of such will only excite our keenest disapproval.

Good Girl.

SONNET

What happy peace enfolds this lofty height,
Remote, yet near the crowded haunts of men!
Ah, where can dwell such unalloyed delight
As here, or when can ever come again
Such beauteous light to bathe with silver floor
Than stalwart oaks and yon far-stretching roofs,
Such cool refreshment for the fevered blood,
Soft-breathed by night winds on the brow of youth?
So fair the night, so deep this moment's joy,
That here eternity might be enshrined,
And I, content, would ne'er seek aught employ
But listening to the treasure of your mind.
And, this hour past, our joy shall still remain,
For Love has bound us with a golden chain.

RAPS CASUAL LABOR AS TROUBLE CAUSE IN FOREST CRAFT

Yale Grad Wants Year-round Employment as Solution

SCHEME UNDER SCRUTINY

Poor Type of Workman Lose Time, Money for Companies

B. H. Avery, graduate in Forestry from Yale '16, was the speaker at the Forestry Club meeting Thursday evening. His subject was "The Labour Problem in the Woods," one of great importance in the lumbering and pulp industries.

Beginning by saying that there was no solution to the labour problem, based on past experience, the speaker stated that it would be necessary to solve it by experimentation. There has been a great change in lumbering labour conditions in a short time. A comparatively few years ago we had the old system of farm-lumbering, the farmers cultivating the land in summer and working in the forest in the winter.

When all the woods in close proximity to good farm land and streams had been exploited, lumbering took on a new aspect, and the industry as it was to-day began in 1896 or 1897. With this change the labour problem began to develop. Mr. Avery said that when he spoke of labour trouble he was not referring to any unified dissatisfaction but rather to the poor type of workmen. Men who were employed all year in the woods were not a problem. The men picked up by employment agencies in the cities were the ones who caused inconvenience and a great loss of money to the companies.

"Because of the fact that the 'all year round' men are the only satisfactory ones," Mr. Avery stated, "the only way to remedy the problem is to reform the lumbering industry so as to have sustained operations and permanent work for the lumbermen." This reform, he said, was inevitable, and in fact was already being considered by the companies. When it did come, Foresters would have more reason to be proud of their profession, and woodsmen would take more interest in their work. With their homes and families within a short distance, the men would be able to lead a fuller and more self-respecting life, taking more interest in their work and thereby being of much greater value to their employers.

At the close of his address Mr. Avery was tendered a vote of thanks by the club.

Several business matters were discussed at some length before the meeting adjourned.

German Club Has Big Turn-out for Play Roles

An enthusiastic group of people were present at the German Seminar in the University Library last Thursday for the try-outs for the play to be given by the German Club. For this year they have chosen two one-act plays, "Meisteschaft" by Mark Twain, and a very amusing comedy, "Einer Musz Heiraten" ("One Must Marry") by Benedix. Professor and Mrs. Sorerus, who are the judges, found much promising material among the fifteen or twenty students who were there, and expect to find more to-night when those who were unable to put in an appearance earlier will try out for places in the cast.

Varsity's Scoop Breaks News Early for Students

As reported in "The Varsity" some days ago, the provincial-treasurer has announced a surplus in the financial statement just brought down. "The Varsity" carried the story several days in advance of other dailies following an address by the provincial treasurer here.

BOARD CHAIRMAN ASKS PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

W. H. Moore Addresses Liberal Clubs on Advisory Tariff Body

DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTION

"We are not asking for more power. We are trying to make the people of Canada have confidence in us," declared Mr. W. H. Moore, its chairman, speaking of the Federal Tariff Advisory Board, before the U. of T. and Gladstone Liberal Clubs at their Thursday evening dinner in Hart House.

The nation's revenue to the consolidated fund had increased from $39,000,000 in Sir John Macdonald's day to the present $380,000,000, and foreign trade correspondingly. Ministerial efficiency was not superior to an equal degree. Thus some new government machinery was necessary to cope with the increase in the nation's business.

Parliament itself lacked sufficient continuity for an intelligent year-to-year handling of the situation. The Tariff Board provided this permanency, was in harmony with the modern trend in business from the old laissez-faire attitude to one of dictatorship, and in acting in an advisory capacity only, was preserving the democratic institutions in leaving Parliament to determine the rise and fall of the tariff.

Paul Martin presided at dinner. Before adjourning for an inter-club debate in which he acted as speaker, Hugh J. McLaughlin, Hon. President of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, told of the origin of the University Liberal Club. It appears to have existed in pre-war years, having emerged from the strife of the referendum in the winter of 1912-13 on the party system in the U.C. Lit.

Lecturing Padre Led Varied, Strenuous Life

The Reverend John Pringle, who delivers the Robertson Memorial Lectures in the Chapel of Victoria College at 5 o'clock each afternoon from Tuesday, December 6th, to Friday, December 9th, has had a varied and adventurous life. He was missionary to the Yukon in the early days of the gold rush. He was padre with the boys at the front during the war. Returning to his pastorate in St. Andrew's Church, Sydney, he was elected Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Later, at a time when most men would have been seeking a less strenuous life, he accepted the superintendence of a great stretch of home mission territory in British Columbia.

Registrations for the Detroit Student Convention opening on December 20 and continuing until January 1 must be in by Wednesday to be effective.

Prospective delegates are urged to enrol early in order not to miss what will probably be the largest and most representative gathering on this continent in many years.

Principal Hutton Diverges to Bewail Possible Contempt of Familiarity

Digressing from the serene beauty of Horace's literary splendour, Principal Hutton last Friday morning before an eager class of first year men gave to them, as representative of the world, his opinion of a much discussed question put by Diogenes last week.

"The idea of calling professors by their Christian names," Principal Hutton said, "destroys the object for which they were created. Christian names were brought into being because after the advent of Christianity the need was felt for an intimate form of address for friends besides the formal name for acquaintances and strangers. This is the reason for the two names. Consequently if mere acquaintances began calling people by their Christian names, the only recourse would be for the immediate family and intimate friends to prefix the surname by Mr., Mrs. or Miss and adopt this as the intimate form of address. In this way the name would merely exchange places in their meaning and usage."

Principal Hutton then deeply lamented and bewailed the apparent ignorance of the members of "The Varsity" staff responsible for using in the question the title "first name" instead of "Christian" name. He stated that it need not concern any religious scruples since it was entirely due to the new spirit introduced by Christianity that these names were ever brought into being.

Then after an impassioned plea that his opinion be brought to the notice of the powers that be in the regalia office of "The Varsity," Principal Hutton proceeded with his endeavour to inculcate Horace into the members of the first year.

DEATH TAKES STAR SCHOLAR IN M'CREA

Was Preparing to Follow Father, Minister of Mines

DIES FROM OVERSTRAIN

The University lost another of its most brilliant assets, when James Dent M'Crea died on Friday evening, following an illness which had lasted for nearly a year. The only son of Hon. Charles M'Crea, Minister of Mines in the Ontario Cabinet, he was preparing, before the time of his illness, to follow in his father's footsteps.

The late Mr. M'Crea came to this University in the fall of 1926, at the age of 20, to read for his LL.B. degree, having, earlier in the year, received his B.A. at Loyola College, Montreal. He was held in high respect, and enjoyed the friendship of both faculty and students.

He was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and a junior member of the Granite Club. He was keenly interested in debating, being a member of the Newman Debating Club.

The deceased had taken ill early in the year, as a result of overstraining heart muscles during athletic exercises.

The funeral takes place to-day.

Scarlet and Gold Dance

The second Scarlet and Gold dance of the scholastic year took place in Wymilwood Saturday night with a good crowd in attendance. There was a good representation from all faculties.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Women Mum on Cheroof Query

Do you believe that smoking rooms should be provided in women's residences?

Diogenes interviewed a corresponding number of co-eds. None of them would make any statement for publication under their name. Obviously the question seems to be officially taboo.

T. Marchant, I Theology, Vic.: "That's for the women to say. It isn't a question of morals. If the women want smoking rooms, let them have smoking rooms."

G. D. Thompson, II Comm. Fin., U.C.: "If they are going to have smoking rooms it must mean that smoking is sanctioned by the deans of residence. If such is the case, why not let them smoke in their own rooms as the men do?"

F. Luchs, graduate of Franklin Marshall, now at Penn. State: "If the Canadian co-eds are like ours, I would say establish a room by all means. Prohibiting smoking will not prevent it among women undergraduates."

J. MacFarlane, IV Physics, U.C.: "This is certainly a burning question. If we are to have smoking rooms in the women's residences, why not a bar in Hart House?"

Now There's Incentive To Real Incendiarism

At nine o'clock Sunday morning the quietness of the halls of Argyle House and the peaceful slumbers of the inmates were rudely shattered by the fire gong. The fire, which occurred in the kitchen, was the result of an overheated stove and the subsequent ignition of some papers.

With many exclamations of indignation, surprise and consternation, the sleepers arose and blinking groped their way into the corridors. Various ensembles and the latest in fur coats and pyjamas were much in evidence. One co-ed appeared with a suitcase of well-what you will.

The fire was extinguished by a few pitchers of water. Valuables of all descriptions, from theatre tickets to English essays, were returned once more to their hiding places and peace was restored. For once ALL the Argyllites were present at Sunday breakfast.

SCHOOL MEN GATHER IN ANNUAL CONCLAVE

Long Toast List Embraces Many Compliments and Admonitions

FOREST MINISTER SPEAKS

Great Hall of Hart House was the scene of the 38th Annual Dinner of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering on Friday night.

Schoolmen numbered about 180 as the dinner commenced. "Bill" Duncan was chairman of the evening.

In the reply to the toast, "The University," by Sir Robert Falconer, attention was further drawn to the importance of an engineer deriving all he could of a cultural training aside from his technical training at University.

Mr. G. B. Smith, proposing the toast to "The Faculty," compared a Schoolman to a violin. When he entered School he was untuned and full of discordant notes, and coming under the direction of a very capable faculty he was tuned by them, as it were, and left the University a much better man.

In reply Dean Mitchell enlarged on the violin simile. He especially urged Schoolmen to try and develop that breadth of view so necessary to the Engineer at the present time.

The toast to "The Profession" was proposed by D. G. W. McRae, who referred to it as the finest profession on earth.

In reply Prof. Haultain brought a message from Mr. Cooper, President of the Association of Professional Engineers, who was scheduled to reply, but whose place, owing to enforced absence, was taken by the former, who stressed the advantage of taking engineering into business.

Mr. Harry Pritchard proposed the toast to the Sister Societies, in which he recalled the pleasant relations existing among these societies and hoped they would continue.

S.C.A. Plans Groups for Coming Season

The women of the Student Christian Association held another tea yesterday from 4.30 to 6.30 at the Women's Union.

A report on Dr. Curry's groups for the study of life problems in the light of the teachings of Jesus Christ was given by Miss Violet Maw, so that all might take part in the keen discussion which followed.

Plans were made for groups to be arranged in the new year.

PUT SPOTLIGHT ON ACUTE QUEBEC LANGUAGE SITUATION

So Says Prof. M. A. Buchanan of Report of Languages Committee

THOROUGH INVESTIGATION

Analysis Rather Than Criticism Emphasizes the Near-ready Report

Next March is the tentative date set for the appearance of the three volume report of the "Canadian Modern Languages Committee." This report, according to Professor M. A. Buchanan, who has been in charge of the investigation, is the result of three years' steady work inquiring into the methods and results of teaching modern languages in Canadian schools.

Professor Buchanan, when spoken to by "The Varsity," said the investigation has taken up the full time of three people during these years, as well as a great deal of time of other people and of Professor Buchanan himself. It has been financed by the Carnegie Foundation, and while the means were not quite sufficient to enable the investigation to do quite all they wished in an experimental line, yet as much as was expected has been satisfactorily accomplished.

Professor Buchanan already has the proof sheets of the report in his hands and he stated that he expected that the report would appear in three volumes. The first will be a bibliography analyzing books that might be of use to teachers. The second will be a History of Modern Language Instruction by Provinces in the Secondary Schools and Universities, while the third will be on Teacher Training, including chapters on curricula, examinations, and practical class work.

In three different books there will also be chapters on the History of the Methods of Modern Language Instruction, on the statistical findings of the committee, on the objectives of the teachers, and on the teaching of French and English in Quebec. The Quebec situation will provide material for one of the most interesting chapters in the book. The problem there is more acute than anywhere else in Canada because of the necessity for the people to know both languages. Every facility has been accorded the committee in its work in Quebec.

Professor Buchanan stated that this was the first large scale investigation into such a subject that had ever so far as he knew been conducted in Canada. In it the primary emphasis had been placed on a desire to analyze rather than criticize the situation. If the results were satisfactory he hoped means would be found to conduct other similar investigations into the teaching of other subjects, notably English.

Trial Marriage to Undergo Fire at U.C. Lit. Meeting

TRIAL MARRIAGE?

When everybody else is writing a lot of rot about Trial Marriage we take it that we may be permitted to transgress. Frankly, we do not consider the matter a very vital one, nor do we feel the least inclined to believe that it has aroused the feeling or opinion that our newspapers would have us suspect, but rather that the establishment of an old thought in a new cloak has created a form of advertisement about which one, saying much, says little, and yet at the same time may add to their prominence or notoriety.

No matter what the name, there have been, and no doubt always will be, trial marriages, alliances, or what have you. And nothing can overcome the fact that "incompatibility of temperament," or worse, will lead many a couple to the divorce court. As we understand it, "trial marriage" meets with the full requirements of the church, and that it only differs from the average marriage in the fact that it is understood before the ceremony takes place that either of the participants might apply for a divorce after a period of five years. Generally speaking, every person entering into marriage realizes that he or she is embarking upon an adventure with an uncertain outcome, "for better or for worse," and always, perhaps, the idea lurks at the back of our mind that, if things do turn out more ill than we could reasonably expect, a divorce would prove the only solution. None of us are the least inclined to believe that such a solution, or, in fact, any solution, will ever be necessary. That is the way with love.

It is the phrase, trial marriage, that has created the glamour. No one had used those two words just so before, and, so it appeared, their meaning was too obvious, too picturesque, to allow them to quietly pass into oblivion. And the picture they painted being so obvious, there was an immediate response from the just and unjust alike,—practically an outcry from the just.

It is not probable that a single Canadian student will indulge in this "trial marriage." And with the student out of it, it is not reasonable to support that any of the other youths of this country will attempt to establish an institution of which their finances are not likely to permit. In the first place, practically every male student has home ties that would prevent him from pursuing the irrational in such a direction. His home training, the love of his parents for each other and for him have all created in his mind an obligation to society which he would most certainly hesitate to damage. Again, the majority of us have, tucked away somewhere at the back of our mind, the picture of the ideal mate. When we do find someone that "measures up" it will not be a matter of a trial, but of necessary and very lovely duty. In any case, none of us would wish to have a trial marriage, lightly entered upon, on the horizon to overshadow our future.

Somehow, we already have become somewhat settled in our ways. Most of us know just about what marriage holds out for us, and the majority of us are sufficiently intelligent to pick our life's partner in a wise and, we hope, sane manner. Our reputation means a mighty lot to the majority of us, be it what it will, and few of us would wish to indulge in an act which would demand that it be reconstructed,—because we cannot help but feel that such is exactly what trial marriages would necessitate.

We Canadians do not seek nor do we want that sort of publicity. If, and when, we marry it will be for love and romance with the age-old understanding of forbearance, and suffering. We will make an attempt to prove ourselves good husbands or good wives, and, really, if the worst does come to the worst, prove ourselves sports enough to make the best of a bad bargain.

WHAT ABOUT CLASS PARTIES?

Since there are so many social events at the University, we are forced to ask whether they are all necessary, or whether any of them are serving the purpose for which they were intended. Although there may be some doubt as to the practical purpose of such a function as the Hart House Masquerade, there can be none concerning the place of class parties in our college life.

Class parties afford to many the only opportunity of becoming acquainted with others of their year whom they might know only as a face or voice which they have seen occasionally in the lecture room. Whether this more intimate knowledge of one's fellows is desirable is, of course, a debatable question. There are some who

"WILL SHAKESPEARE"

Following their usual custom of presenting for their evening production a play of outstanding dramatic value, the Players' Guild of University College have chosen Clemence Dane's famous poetic drama "Will Shakespeare." One may say that this play stands pre-eminent over all others written about the immortal Avonian. Into the action Miss Dane has introduced Queen Elizabeth, Mary Fitton, "the Dark Lady of the Sonnets," Anne Hathaway, Kit Marlowe and Henslowe. The scenes are of intense dramatic power and are laid in Stratford, the Court at London, the Globe Theatre—Blackfriars, the tavern on the Deptford Road where Marlowe meets his end. The play is by far the most ambitious undertaking that the Guild has yet attempted, and if they equal the visual standard of their performances the presentation will be an event of dramatic importance. The Director, Mr. Raymond Card, has announced the following cast:

Will Shakespeare James Knights
Kit Marlowe Hammet Miller
Henslowe A. Earl Tauman
Queen Elizabeth Isabel Godfrey
Mary Fitton Margaret Eoll
Anne Hathaway Margaret Gordon

Mrs. Hathaway Isabel Brown
Two performances will be given, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, December 6th and 7th, at 8.30 in the Guild Theatres at the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street. The performances are to be of a non-professional nature—that is, for members of the Guild and their friends—no admission is charged, and all outside visitors are welcome.

N.A.B.

Miss Clemence Dane's "Will Shakespeare" has been much neglected or misunderstood by professional critics because it belongs neither to the familiar social comedy nor to the almost equally fashionable realist school, but to a type which, despite its magnificent past, has few representatives in our day—the poetic drama. And yet, what a marvel of characterization, of broadly sweeping plot, of gorgeous colour and poetic glory! The hero himself is depicted (by invention, no doubt, to borrow the author's word) as a great soul in whom artistic inspiration, love for his wife and passion for the Dark Lady struggle tempestuously, inducing a terrible yet noble agony to which at length Elizabeth's imperial soul brings (Continued on page 3) feel that in hours of relaxation at least we should avoid those with whom we have examined the digestive organs of a frog or conjugated Latin verbs. As long as there are any, however, who believe in fostering class spirit, we feel that class parties are quite firmly established.

Because, therefore, we have this institution, we should consider how to make it best fulfill its purpose. If class parties are intended to promote the better acquaintance of the members of one year, why should not attendance at them be confined to members of that year? In University College, at any rate, it would seem that first year parties are generally considered by men of the upper years as an opportunity for them to meet "the freshies"; and at parties of the other years, the representation of men of those years is very small indeed.

As long as year executives will insist on having class parties, it seems only logical that they should endeavour to make them accomplish their end. One of the best ways of doing this seems to us the limitation of attendance at them to those who belong to the year.

Yesterday the staff Enraptured Reporter turned in the following Spangle. He has been turned over to the proper authorities:

At the first meeting of the Victoria Stupid's Parliament for the term, the following resolution was debated: "Resolved that as a formal protest against the general wickedness of the University, the members of this House hereby and do intend to commit suicide."

As a special attraction the ghost of J. Instant Postumus was invoked at enormous expense by the management.

In supporting the motion, B. St. Vitus Weekly said: "We are here, Mr. Speaker, to debate a question of the utmost importance." No one was able to deny this, so the discussion resumed. Mr. Weekly, with his usual keen perceptions, continued: "There is no longer any old Ontario Strand as there used to be. The Strand is now on Yonge Street."

At this point the House went into a Committee of the Whole, and re- (Continued on page 4)

U.C. CARRIES OFF SIXTH INTERFACULTY SWIMMING TITLE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Junior S.P.A. series has narrowed down to four teams, and the semi-finals will be run off on Monday and Tuesday nights. On Monday St. Mike's and Newmarket will meet, and on Tuesday Varsity and Marlboro will renew their old feud. This game should be a real one, as there is a strong friendly rivalry between the two outfits. The Ducks are supposed to be the team to beat this year in the local Junior circles. They have a strong team, and several of their players are of Senior calibre, but that means nothing at all to the Varsity crew. Led by Gordie Beal, the Blue and White have a line-up that will give any Junior outfit in the country a race, and it would be no surprise if they toppled Marlboro and entered the finals, which by the way are played on Friday night.

The various faculty assaults-at-arms to be held shortly should be productive of some real promising material for the Varsity squad, and are certain to provide several nights' entertainment for the followers of the several manly arts of self-defence. These boys are far from having the class of champions, but there is no denying that they have a courage and found in the salaried athletes. Amateur boxing and wrestling produces examples of gameness that are hard to equal in any field of sport, and the boys are deserving of support.

determination that is not always The Varsity-Grads game demonstrated that the Blue entry will have to be reckoned with when the honours in both the Intercollegiate and the O.H.A. are being handed around. But it also showed that as they stand at present the Seniors are far from being a championship team. They have the material—plenty of it—but there is much work to be done before they will be outstanding outfit. Of course it is too early in the season to expect the most finished play, and with a few more weeks' practices they will look altogether different. One thing was noticeable about their play, and that was their inability to take advantage of their opportunities. Several times players had a chance to shoot when close in on the net, but they hesitated and lost the puck. Boring right in on the net is all right, but it can be carried too far. However, a little coaching will remedy this, and any other defects in their play.

U.C. TEAMS WILL BATTLE FOR WATER POLO TITLE

Seasoned Seniors Determined to Cop Finals; Both Teams in Trim

By virtue of their 3-0 win over Sr. Meds last Thursday, Sr. U.C. have qualified to meet Jr. U.C. in the finals of the Interfaculty water polo series. The finals will take place to-day at 5.15 p.m., and on Thursday at the same hour. Both teams have been practicing together all year, and there seems to be little to choose between them. Both have good goalies, an airtight defence and fast and accurate shooting forwards.

Many of the Seniors have been playing for four years and are determined to win before leaving University.

The teams will probably line-up as follows:

Sr. U.C.: D. Walker, J. Walker, W. Curtis, Latchford, Thompson, Baker, Jennings, Poyntz, Graham.

Jr. U.C.: Ayres, Fee, Spence, Boddy, Lowndes, Morrow, Richmond, Armstrong, Thorburn.

Menorah Society Hears Philosophical Address

"The need for a New Problem" was the subject of a highly philosophical and instructive address, delivered by Henry M. Rosenthal, of New York, before the second open meeting of the Menorah Society last evening. The speaker stressed the need of modern Jewish youth grappling with the difficulties which beset it, and eventually evolving a solution of the problem. Mr. Rosenthal is a graduate of Columbia University and is at present studying for the rabbinate. He has contributed several brilliant articles to the "Menorah Journal," and is an active Menorah worker.

A record attendance gave the speaker an enthusiastic welcome, though some spirited discussion was engaged in at the conclusion of the address.

A chicken in the hand is worth two in someone else's coop, said the marauding negro as he decamped on foot with a Leghorn.

RECORDS ARE HUNG AS SWIMMING MEET WON BY U.C. MEN

Interfaculty Contest Goes to U.C. by Score of 70 Points

BERTRAM, GOSS STAR
100 Yards Breast Stroke and Free Style Records Beaten

Scoring 43 points out of a total of 70, U.C. easily disposed of their rivals in the Interfaculty Swimming Meet on Saturday night, and are for the sixth successive time holders of the Fitzgerald Cup. There was no doubt of the superiority of the University College swimmers, and their closest opposition was School with a score of 14 1-2 points. Meds were next in the standing, with Dents and Victoria finishing fourth and fifth respectively.

The feature of the meet were two new records for Interfaculty competition hung up by W. Bertram of U.C. and Johnnie Goss of S.P.S. The first record to fall was the 100 yards breast stroke. The previous mark of 1 min. 21 sec. had been made by Fran Lorenzen last year, but Bertram clipped almost three seconds off this time and set the new mark at 1 min. 18 2-5 secs. Goss knocked a second off Leo Latchford's time for the 100 yards free style, doing the distance in 58 3-5 secs.

Leo Latchford came within a fifth of a second of tying the record for the 50 yards back stroke held by Jack Latchford. This race was the closest of the evening, and there were inches only between the winner and Thompson, who finished second.

RESULTS
Long Plunge—1, J. Curtis, U.C.; 2, W. Campbell, S.P.S. Distance 52 ft. 11 in.

Relay Race—1, U.C. (A team); 2, U.C. (B team); 3, S.P.S. Time 1 min. 51 1-5 secs.

Fancy Diving—J. E. Gundy, Meds; 2, D. Gunn, Meds; 3, J. Merrell, Dents.

50 Yards Free Style—1, H. Scott, U.C.; 2, Poyntz, U.C.; 3, J. Pierdon, S.P.S., and D. Wood, Vic. (tied). Time 27 1-5 secs.

100 Yards Breast Stroke—1, W. Bertram, U.C.; 2, E. Sinclair, Dents; 3, G. Harrison, Meds. Time 1 min. 2-5 secs. (new record).

100 Yards Free Style—1, J. Goss, S.P.S.; 2, L. Latchford, U.C.; 3, R. Thompson, U.C. Time 58 3-5 secs. (new record).

50 Yards Back Stroke—1, L. Latchford, U.C.; 2, R. Thompson, U.C.; 3, Morrow, U.C. Time 33 4-5 secs.

200 Yards Free Style—1, J. Goss, S.P.S.; 2, L. Boddy, U.C.; 3, H. Graham, U.C. Time 2 min. 21 sec.

A REPLY TO "GOOD GIRL"
Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
Don't you think "Good Girl" attacks trial marriage on rather odd grounds? Why attack it from a religious standpoint? The problem is a human one and must be solved by human means. It has no more to do with God than the problem of how many arrowroot biscuits a baby should be fed before its afternoon nap.

She would have the men of the University understand that woman who has nearly obtained equal rights with men, is so weak-willed and foolish that she would be willing to give a man a "holiday" for five years. Are girls such pure, guileless creatures that they don't know what they are "stepping into"? You'll never convince me they are. Is "Good Girl" trying to shrink back into mid-Victorian days when a woman hid behind her skirts, clung to the protective arm of man and made appeals to his chivalry? In my opinion women of today have just as sound judgment as men, and in many cases a great deal sounder. Did you ever see the woman who couldn't put it all over any man she wanted to?

Does she suppose that if a man spends five years of "bliss" he is going to walk off and leave it? Not on your life. Bliss is far too rare a thing. On the other hand, if the couple find life unbearable with each other there is no reason why they should have to stay together for another thirty years of hell. Any child reared in such an atmosphere is doomed before they ever start. She has no proof that men will fit from one woman to another any more than they do now. I confess I fail to see the difference between a string of divorces (which aren't hard to get) and a string of trial marriages. There will always be flitters no matter what you do. If "Good Girl" thinks that by cheering loud enough she will drown out the idea of "immoral experiments" of trial marriage she is wrong. She disposes of the problem with a few opinions of what men will and will not do, whereas conservative men like Havelock Ellis and Judge Ben Lind say, who have spent their whole lives in studying these problems, realize that marriage of to-day is a failure and that something must be done about it.

If a girl "smokes, drinks and snuggles" while she's with men, it's because she likes to "smoke, drink and snuggle." If these habits are loathsome to them, then the boys themselves must be loathsome to them. Are we to imagine then that girls are so mercenary that they will play up to and put up with men they loathe just for the sake of a date? There may be a few, but you surely wouldn't say they were in the majority.

I'm for seeing girls with just the same rights as men—and they'll get them whether we like it or not. How about starting on a few around the University. For instance, why do the girls tolerate this silly rule of being compelled to be in the girls' residence by 10.30, with a late leave every so often that will only let them stay out till one? Why don't they demand tickets for their year musicales? Then there's this insane rule of making them wear hats on the campus and during lectures unless they dress in a frowsy

Come, girls, demand your rights; you're as good as any man—in fact, a great deal better.

Yours,

Bad Boy.

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

The presence of a former head of the Oxford Debating Union at Wednesday evening's Hart House debate revived in my mind, as it did in many others, a suggestion I have long considered submitting to you. It has been repeatedly talked about in Varsity debating circles. I merely bring it to the attention of your readers for what I hope will be a wider discussion.

The proposal is to have the Speaker of the House an undergraduate of this University.

Now Mr. Bladen, I am sure, will be the first to understand that I am casting no reflection upon his really excellent service in the chair. To every trembling novice, as indeed to every experienced debater, Mr. Bladen's encouraging smile, tact and strict impartiality have all been a great help. He has maintained the dignity of the House without letting it become a morgue. But the purpose of our debates is to train the members in every department of parliamentary procedure. Should an exception be made in favour of the Speaker's position?

My very tentative proposal would be to have a qualified undergraduate elected to the Presidency of the Hart House Debating Union, his position entitling him to be Speaker of the House. A vice-president of the Union could be deputy speaker.

Difficulties are inherent in this plan, of course: Will the general conduct of the House suffer? Will the temper and mood of the debates change for the worse? In view of the fluctuating membership at each debate, should the President be elected by the members themselves or by some committee?

One condition must unfailingly be observed: the President-Speaker's office should be given to a thoroughly capable student who has displayed throughout his Varsity career the greatest interest and ability in debating as well as in kindred university and college activities, and is, himself, a representative undergraduate figure.

I commend this plan for what it is worth in its present indefinite form, not only to the debating authorities, but to all students interested in these matters.

Sincerely yours,

Lionel M. Gelber.

ACTION NECESSARY IN WOMEN'S SPORTS

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Now that biographies have been settled and quotations laid low, we can come to the consideration of women's sports. It will be fortunate if as much warmth will be displayed in discussion about the latter as about the former. Biographies may, but athletics surely do, express that much desired "individuality."

I certainly agree with the editorial in Monday's "Varsity" that something must be done to bring back women's sports to the high place of esteem they used to enjoy. It would (Continued on page 4) something of tranquility and more durable passion for fruitful enlightenment labour at the height of genius. To this spectacle all the minor characters contribute under a masterly orchestration, never excelled in our time. As for the poetry, Miss Dane has given us many speeches of breathless beauty and one achievement well-nigh miraculous, when Mary Fitton describes the rapture which enveloped her when at a moment's notice she bore her part in "Romeo and Juliet":

Oh, I faced

The peacock of the world, the arch of eyes

That watched me love a god. . .

The blazing passion of that whole outburst, combined with the sublime adroitness of the first metaphor—to remember that in the Tudor Theatre the audience was fully visible to the actor, to imagine that assemblage of watching eyes, to describe it with such loveliness and quaintness: that is perfect Elizabethan poetry.

RECITAL BY THE PERSINGER QUARTET

On Wednesday afternoon next (Dec. 7th) at five o'clock, in Convocation Hall, the Persinger Quartet of San Francisco will give the third of this season's string quartet concerts for students. This is the first appearance of the Persinger Quartet in Toronto, and it is interesting to know that their visit to the East coincides with the first visit of the Hart House Quartet to California. Wherever they have gone, this fine body of instrumentalists has won the favourable opinions of critics and public, and those who attend the recital on Wednesday may rest assured that it will be in every way up to the standard set by the previous concerts of the series. The programme is as follows: Mozart's Quartet in B flat, and quartets by Hanson and Debussy. Students may purchase season tickets for the remaining concerts of the series for the price of seventy-five cents, or tickets for single concerts at twenty-five cents.

CORRESPONDENCE

 be foolish to abolish them in a mood of temporary discouragement. It was the enthusiasm of real sportswomen of former years that led to the inclusion of a gym and a swimming tank in the Lillian Massey Building. They used to turn out for the love of the game itself. There were no women's sports executive in those days, no crests, no trophies, and very little organization. We have all these and yet we lack that one gift that made them real sportswomen. We lack interest. And what is the reason for this? No one who has watched a close game of women's basketball, for instance, will argue that women are incapable of true sportsmanship or its appreciation.

One reason is the difficulty of finding athletic talent in each freshman year before the semi-finals begin. After that the teams are completed and all effort to find players ceases. Because of this, many an athletic star blazes unseen in our midst, for it's the unusual girl who turns out for the first time, in her 2nd, 3rd or 4th years. A fine example of submerged talent was brought to light in U.C.'s late crises. A medical ruling deprived the baseball team of five members; a plea to the College for support brought out five new members who trained up beautifully, and in the finals made Vic exert herself to win by an extremely close score of 3-4, 12-13.

Then there is the feeling of irresponsibility that accounts for the lack of sympathy and understanding concerning sport. If any question does come up, they leave it to the Women's Athletic Directorate to solve, showing an almost child-like faith in its omnipotence. Then there is the Directorate itself. It is too interested in looking after teams and trophies to waste energy in wielding a directing and enthusiastic influence over the great mass of women students. Again, basketball is the major sport in its opinion, and it is somewhat of a task to bring swimming, baseball, tennis or hockey into the limelight. These sports should adopt the merchants' slogan and "advertise" their virtues.

Again, U.C. as the largest college has always been expected to produce leaders. But at present it is an unwieldy, social-minded mass and no longer deserves to be worshipped. It is time that the smaller colleges, which may find it easier to form and push opinion, should step forward and take the initiative which U.C. can no longer give.

One encouraging view of the problem is that in the last few years women's athletics have grown so rapidly that we are at present at deadlock for solved to look into the question of the Strand upon the next occasion of there being a venue there.

Mr. M. T. Benny followed with a scathing denunciation of the resolution. "Where would the University be if we committed suicide?" he asked. There were loud cheers. "There wouldn't be any!" he exclaimed. Hereupon Mr. Weekly rose to a point of order, but was thrown out by a pointed order of the Squeaker of the House.

After some discussion from the floor, the division took place. The results were: four naimed, six overcome, three for, four against, ten killed in the rush.

When interviewed, the Squeaker of the House remarked wittily on the results of the motion—"Every little S.C.M. has a meaning of its own."

After reading in unison six chapters from the Students' Handbook, the House adjourned.

space. The Lillian Massey gym will not accommodate all the Varsity teams, and some of the teams have to go inconvenient distances to church gyms for practices. The swimming pool is small and ridiculously narrow and shallow. Many a diver has had cause to wail:

"My nose is bumped and my eye is blue,
 My elbow's cracked and my head is, too."

Then there is that undercurrent of self-depreciation. Too many stifle a longing to play merely because they suppose some one else can do it better. Many better preachers than I have denounced that evil.

Let's do something about it!

 tives, namely, Mr. Stevens from Queen's, Mr. Morris from R.M.C., and Mr. Foster from O.A.C. all brought greetings from their respective societies.

Following the toasts, Mr. Duncan introduced Hon. W. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests for Ontario, as the chief speaker of the evening.

In beginning his address Mr. Finlayson congratulated the younger men who had preceded him on their fine speeches. He enlarged on President Falconer's statements that Engineers should attain to a cultural development. "In addition to scholastic ability they should attain to the position of gentlemen."

He asked that those present, as engineers, should help to mould public opinion and educate the people so that they would accept, as legislation, the Forestry policy that the government was trying to inaugurate.

He pointed out that Forestry was the second industry in importance in Ontario to-day. It meant in round figures $120,000,000 in revenue last year, of which the wage earner got $35,000,000 and the government $5,000,000.

"One hundred years ago the forest was an impediment to progress and lumbering was carried on ruthlessly. Now we are beginning to see the end of our timber resources."

"The danger isn't eminent," he stated, "but nevertheless the problem must be faced, and we want to pass drastic legislation to preserve our forests. People must realize that timber is a crop, not a capital like a mine, and as a crop should be compared with a crop of wheat. The only difference is the cycle of the time of maturity."

"We want to adopt a scheme for preserving our timber wealth," he said, "and such schemes are not new. In Sweden, for instance, the cutting of timber is directly under the control of the government, whose chief Forester dictates not only how much may be cut but also where it shall be cut."

"Towards the end of forest preservation nine million seedlings were distributed last year, and it is hoped to increase this number to twenty million in the near future.

"In the central counties of the province the land is rocky and entirely unfit for agriculture, yet there are families there trying to eke out a miserable existence. In this case the remedy, which is yet in the experimental stage, is to spend the money that might otherwise be spent in trying to develop the region, in bringing out the families in that section to good agricultural territories, settling them and leaving the rocky regions to tourists and timber."

"We might better," he stated, "spend our money in settling good native Canadian farmers on good lands where they will have a chance than in bringing into this country undesirable Europeans."

Speaking of the future of forestry, Mr. Finlayson pointed out that Canada had assumed the first position in the world as exporter of newsprint, and largely because of this Canada was the only country whose currency ever went above par on the New York Stock Exchange.

The government's policy, Mr. Finlayson stated, was to aid pulp companies in planting trees under government supervision and thus assure a future crop. Boards of Foresters were dealing with basic problems, and the Air Patrol Service was combating the fire hazard, and in this way with intelligent co-operation of the people of Ontario there would be nothing to worry about in regard to the future forest wealth of the province.

At the conclusion of the address James McKenzie of the School Track Team was presented with a silver cup by Dean Mitchell for proficiency in track events this autumn.

The banquet closed with a "Toke Oike" and a "Toronto."

The following extract from the Queen's Journal containing a report of the banquet given by the Queen's Alumni Association to the Intercollegiate rugby champions is indicative of the spirit of harmony that, contrary to the opinion of some, exists in the Intercollegiate Athletic Union. "The toast to the Intercollegiate Athletic Union brought out the main speeches of the evening. Professor M. B. Baker gave the toast in an interesting and forceful manner. Professor M. A. Mackenzie of Toronto, who is president of the Union, replied. Mr. Mackenzie's sparkling speech was one of justification and commendation for the Athletic Union. He pointed out that while mistakes had been made, as in every other organization, yet all the while a spirit of perfect harmony existed between the representatives of the three colleges. SCHOLARSHIPS FOUNDED IN MEMORY OF DR. HASTINGS

Intended to Encourage Study of Public Health Among Students of Medicine

Commemorating the services rendered by Dr. C. J. O. Hastings in his capacity as Medical Officer of Health for the city of Toronto, two, and possibly three, scholarships will be established at the University of Toronto. These awards will bear the doctor's name and are calculated to encourage the study of public health, in which department they will be tenable. Originally the plan was suggested that a portrait of Dr. Hastings be presented to the Medical Officer of Health in view of his services to Toronto. The response of the public to this suggestion has been so great as to enable the idea of a series of scholarships in public health to be added to the original plan. Two awards are assured, and there is every indication that there will be at least one other announced later.

G. D. Quance, IV C. and F., U.C.: "Sure it's alright. It has to be. You can't get along without it. I use it on all occasions and would be lost without it."

Miss E. C. Norton, IV Moderns, U.C.: "Absolutely. There are times when the blunt truth would be embarrassing to all concerned."

J. W. Emerson, II S.P.S.: "No, I do not. You couldn't conscientiously do it and know you are doing the right thing. You will eventually be found out, and then the feeling you had intended to save will be hurt to a much greater extent."

Miss E. L. Turpin, III Pass: "I do not think in any case it is permissible; but I might indulge in one without realizing the effects upon my character."

Herb. Bell, II C. and F., U.C.: "Mundus vult decipi. The world wishes to be deceived. Why not let it?"

Miss J. Dow, III Moderns: "I certainly do. Under certain conditions it would be extraordinarily embarrassing and unkind to do otherwise. Heaven help us all if everyone said what they thought of us to our faces."

E. A. E. Merritt, I Dents: "Under certain conditions it is more ethical than not to lie. I think it is perfectly alright under these circumstances."

Miss M. Barton, III Mod. Hist., U.C.: "Yes, I think it is necessary if it makes things easier for yourself and for the other person. You don't want the blunt truth thrust at you all the time."

M. & E. ELECTRICALS MEET AT HART HOUSE

Mr. J. F. Neild Addresses Club on Some Electrical Problems Encountered by T.T.C.

MUCH DISCUSSION

About 125 Schoolmen from the Electrical section of the M. and E. Club gathered in Hart House last night for discussion. The evening began with supper in the Great Hall, followed by a sing-song and smoker. As a preliminary to the address of the evening, Prof. Price of the Electrical Dept. gave a short outline of the construction and commercial uses of the gyroscope.

The guest and speaker of the evening was Mr. J. F. Neild, Chief Electrical Engineer of the Toronto Transportation Commission. Mr. Neild's theme was the "Electrical Problems Encountered by the T.T.C." The address brought out many economic phases of the situation, which are not appreciated by the general public, but which are very important in the operation of the system.

In the discussion that followed, about twenty members of the Club took part, and many points relative to the subject were brought up, showing the interest with which Mr. Neild's address was received.

The score does not indicate the relative merits of the teams, for the Juniors pressed hard and only failed to score several times by a close margin. UNIQUE STUDENT GATHERING OPENS DETROIT DEC. 20

Many Outstanding Speakers Being Brought to Meeting

"THE COLOR LINE"

Convention Sponsored by Student Volunteer Movement

The Detroit Student Convention, to be held from December 20th to January 1, will probably be the largest and most representative student gathering on this continent for many years.

Representatives from all over the United States and Canada, including Varsity, are being sent, as well as many foreign students and national leaders—making an attendance quota of four thousand.

Students need facts as a basis for their opinions and discussions. Outstanding speakers from all parts of the world are being brought to Detroit, but the convention will not centre in the speakers. The high spots of the gathering will be in colloquia, a combination of discussion and forum groups. Here, in small groups, aided by international experts as "resource material," delegates plan to think their way through—to realize the possibility of creating in a group, through the interplay of thought, some entirely new ideas better than any individual opinions.

Among the speakers at the Detroit Convention are several from China, the hot spot of the Orient to-day. Henry Hodgkin is a British missionary, a well known Quaker who served in China with the Y.M.C.A., later under his own Friends' Foreign Mission Association, and more recently as secretary of the National Christian Council.

Francis Wei, a Cantonese by birth, the son of a family of culture, is the president of the Central China Christian University. Few men in educational work stand higher in China than he. From the Philippines comes Dr. Frank G. Laubach, a keen minded sociologist and psychologist, who for the past twelve years has been in educational work in Manila. Akintunde B. Dipolu, a graduate of Talladega College and Seminary, and now studying in the University of Chicago, is from Nigeria, British West Africa. Richard Roberts, of the United Church of Canada, who has been much in demand at student conferences, will also be present at Detroit.

For the afternoons, international teas are planned, which will afford welcome opportunities for informal contact. The dramatic production, "The Color Line," a play dealing with the significant implications of the present China situation, and "Ker-bala," the adaptation of the Passion Play of the Shia Sect of Mohammedans, will be appreciable contributions to the convention programme.

The convention is sponsored by the Student Volunteer Movement, a branch of which is located here at the University of Toronto.

The annual Retreat for the students of Loretto Abbey College was opened on Thursday evening by Rev. Father McHaffrey, S.J., and closed Monday morning with solemn Mass. Father McHaffrey gave a very inspiring series of sermons and conferences. A pleasing feature of the Retreat was the informal reception for Father McHaffrey by the Senior Year.

"O.T.A." CO-EDS OF SECOND YEAR VISIT MENTAL HOSPITAL

The ignorance of their fellow students concerning the pronunciation of the name and function of their course has been a source of the greatest pain and indignation to occupational therapists. "The Varsity" has several times come to their aid with an explanation or so, but up till now no glimmering has reached it of the noble work being done by the "O.T.A." For instance, did you know—all ye over-walked students—that the "O.T." co-eds must like a farther distance than from southern Baldwin House to northern Lillian Massey? If not, know then that twice a week second year visits one of the city's most noble and necessary buildings, the Toronto Mental Hospital.

After the students have been given a demonstration, in which the patients are cross-questioned, for the purpose of revealing their state of mind, they themselves are given practical experience in dealing with them. One young teacher, while demonstrating the venerable art of basketry, was much disturbed by her pupil, who seemed to consider the whole thing a huge joke. On being asked to imitate, however, the patient did so, with such skill and speed that the would-be expounder now keeps her distance.

Three patients are assigned to each student. But no reward is offered in a case of instant recovery. Their chief purpose is to take their charge's mind (Continued on page 4)

KNOX UNDERGRADS MEET FOR ANNUAL AT-HOME

Varied Program and Reception
Adds to Evening's Entertainment

The halls of Knox College reached to the sound of sweet music and merry laughter on Friday last when the students and their friends gathered at the annual Knox College Undergraduates' Association At-Home. At 8.30 the Principal, Dr. Eakin, and his wife, and the members of the staff and their wives received in the campus rotunda, which was beautifully decorated in purple and white. Following the reception a short programme was given in the campus rotunda. Two young ladies from the Toronto Conservatory of Music rendered some very sweet vocal and instrumental selections, assisted by a local elocutionist. A short intermission gave the students a chance to conduct their visitors through the college; then all gathered in the dining hall, where the programme was continued.

A short skit was vividly portrayed by local talent, under the direction of Mr. D. K. Perrie, B.A. Then lunch was served, and community singing was enjoyed by all, interspersed by college and Varsity yells.

An excellent musical programme was rendered in the chapel by Gordon Moffat on the violin, accompanied by the college organist, Mr. Ron. McEachern.

Mr. W. A. Young, B.S.A., chairman of the programme and worship committee, assisted by the members of that committee, was responsible for the fine evening's entertainment.

TRAFFIC THROUGH TOWER FORBIDDEN AS DANGEROUS

All University Roads Are Maintained by University Itself

That traffic through the Hart House Tower would be a menace to students walking to and from Hart House, was the reason obtained by "The Varsity" from the Superintendent's office for its being forbidden. At first, it was learned, north-bound traffic was allowed, but despite signs placed at Hoskin Avenue and south of the Tower, and the efforts of a man kept there to enforce the rule, motorists insisted upon breaking it.

Cars came through from both directions, sometimes at too great a speed, and this meant considerable danger to the almost continual stream of students passing by, unable to see what was coming. On several occasions, accidents almost resulted. Owing to this violation of regulations all traffic had to be prohibited. The inconvenience thus caused was felt by the officials as well as the students.

Traffic on the University roads had materially increased, so that now the roads were too narrow to handle it adequately. The University roads are maintained by the University.

Persinger String Quartet Concert Postponed Day

Owing to unexpected difficulties in arranging their time-table, the Persinger String Quartet of San Francisco will be unable to appear in Convocation Hall on Wednesday afternoon next. The concert will, however, be postponed for only one day, and will take place on Thursday at the usual hour, namely, five o'clock, in Convocation Hall.

McGill Mogul Mainly Mistaken Man's Mental Mainstay Magazines

Apparently the McGill professor who said that the modern student reads nothing but the newspapers was wrong. The male of the species around Varsity reads the Hart House magazines! The proof of it is that you can find someone else using your favourite magazine at almost any hour of the day or night.

"The Varsity" undertook to find out what magazine or magazines are most popular, and decided that general delapidation was the only standard by which to judge. The popularity then varies in direct proportion as the magazine is bedraggled, dog-eared and pilfered for clippings.

As might be expected, some of the more pretentious and high-brow periodicals displayed fairly immaculate covers. They had been handled, but not by the "common rag-tag." Of these we mention "Scribner's" and the "Atlantic Monthly."

Some of the foreign entries devoted to politics and the like appeared to be bearing up well under the strain. Perhaps superior newprint explains it. We venture to cite: "Literary Digest," "Nation and Athenaeum," "The Lon-

Boarders Trifle More Than Others

"Are men better students than women?" This is a question which causes college officials a good deal of speculation. Recently the Recorder of the University of Chicago issued the statement that the women there were far superior to the men as students. On the other hand, the Dean of another institution opined that the fair sex were more or less of a nuisance generally.

The answer to this question is being sought by "The Varsity," but information on the subject is very meagre. Mr. A. B. Fennell, assistant registrar at Simcoe Hall, was approached with a view to obtaining figures on the matter, but he stated that in the University records there was no differentiation made between men and women. By checking University directories for 1926-7 and 1927-8 it was found that 63 men failed between the second and third years in Arts, and only 44 women.

Professor C. E. Auger, Registrar of Victoria College, pointed out that in a comparison of the relative abilities of men and women, many factors should be taken into account. His opinion was, however, that more men than women failed in the first and second years of the Pass course at Victoria College.

It was necessary to remember, he stated, that far more courses and faculties are open to men. Almost all the women at the University are in Arts, so the best students among them figure in the Arts results. On the other hand, many of the most clever men go in for Engineering or Medicine or Forestry, and are not adequately represented by the Arts men.

Some very interesting points were brought up by Professor Auger during the interview with "The Varsity." From figures which he had compiled for Victoria College, he asserted that men in boarding houses studied less than either men in residence or those (Continued on page 4)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1927.

NO FALSE IMPRESSIONS SHOULD BE CREATED REGARDING STUDENT OPINION

The Chairman of the Hart House Debates Committee in a communication to The Varsity to-day states that, while he feels the influence of a distinguished visitor speaking at a Hart House debate to be very strong, and especially so when speaking last, it is his opinion that the seriousness of the decision has been over-emphasized. Not so! In those questions which are vital in Canada's public thought,—such as the last discussed before the House, where an eager press seizes upon a University opinion—it is desirable that no false impression be created as to just what Varsity's ideas actually are. That is, it is not fitting that the opinion expressed here be other than that formed by the student without undue outside pressure, or that it be swayed in one direction alone by other than University influence.

In suggesting a remedy, that of having two distinguished visitors speak on opposite sides and thus eliminate any unfairness, the committee appears to be looking in an acceptable direction. With such a system in vogue there could be but little need for any further alteration. But until such is in force, then, we should say, let us have a division of the House previous to the discussion of the single visiting speaker.

We grant that the latter would not be a sound solution, but we do contend that the present system is unfair. Certainly the party leaders in the House of Commons are given the opportunity of speaking last, but to give one side the advantage of a speaker with many years of public life behind him, together with a large personal following, is giving that side, in a purely University debate, too great an advantage. We do grant that the speakers from the floor often present facts of much merit, and that if no outside speakers were to be invited, their beliefs and statements should be weighed with care.

However much we might hope or claim that the House is a deliberative assembly adopting or rejecting resolutions, we cannot help but feel that the voting members are swayed in judgment by oratory and that the voting is also based on the manner in which the arguments have been presented and the merits of the facts expounded. If not, in what other way, then, are the voters to reach a decision,—by the use of their imagination, intuition, former ideas or personal affiliations?

But, mind you, we are tremendously pleased to have the assistance of these gentlemen who are so well known in public life. It is only the possible effect of an individual influence upon the students' own impressions to which we are objecting.

"THE CITY GONE WILD"—LOEW'S

We left Loew's Theatre last evening in a most bewildered state, after seeing "The City Gone Wild" make its Toronto premiere at the downtown picture resort. Not having proceeded more than five yards from the door, we began to imagine loaded revolvers being pressed against our sacred ribs, and a drawn sword hanging within an inch of the region in the vicinity of our Adam's apple, and we commenced to entertain serious fears as to how this precious manuscript would make its appearance in the venerable columns of "The Varsity." And then we awoke!

The picture is a melodrama of a fairly good type, depicting the underworld of that notorious American city, noted for its "windyness" and for a mayor who entertains strong likings for the British race. There is very little intrinsic value in the picture itself, no plot, and scant technical skill,—the possible success of the production, however, lies in what it portrays, and the able manner in which this is done.

Thomas Meighan plays an excellent role as the lawyer, John Phelan, who turns from the part of defending the city's criminal element to that of purging the metropolis of its most dangerous foes,—and all for the sake of a young girl, who little knows that her father is the financial backer of the underworld. Marietta Milner fills the role of the heroine to perfection.

This week's vaudeville bill leaves very little to be desired,—it is undoubtedly the best seen at the Loew's for a long time. The headline act is "His Magic Wand," featuring Walter Fehl and Company, consisting of a snappy band and an exquisite dancer. An abundance of rich humor permeates the exceedingly good offerings of Burns and Kane. Neilson and Warden are also rather fine.

This trial marriage argument is not all that a nice refined college topic should be. Sooner or later someone is going to drop an honest pronouncement and reveal his or her true feelings on the matter—and the result will be sundry blushes and sombre expiations. And that will be all—in the future harmless subjects like "Resolved that green ostriches exist only under certain conditions" will be restored to popularity with the debaters.

C-C

The age-old question of women's smoking rooms is beginning to be fumigated again. As Hamlet aptly put it:

To smoke or not to smoke, that is the question
Whether 'tis nobler in some corner dark

To draw a furtive puff and hope the smoke

Will miss the fond attention of the Dean,

Or whether, drawing a pack of Camels forth,

In broad mid-campus one should wildly smoke

Till she is haloed with a cloud of blue?

To smoke—perchance thereafter to inhale

But of that inhalation what may come

When we have sniffled deeply to the lungs

The pungent odour of the noxious weed

Must give us pause. Ay there's the cough

That makes calamity of such deep drag!

For who would bear the bitter contumely,

The professorial reprimand, the wink

Among the heavy frat. men and their like

When one might her quietus neatly make

With a mere smoking-room?

C-C

This broad-minded wielder of the pen who signs himself "Bad Boy" belongs to a well-known species that we have met before—the man who is an emancipator in prose and at heart a Victorian who would be the first to deplore any expression of freedom in one whom he married. Let's be very honest—was there ever a husband who didn't want to think for each and all of his wives, "trial" or permanent? Once a woman is allowed to think for herself, man becomes the mere victim of her emotions.

JUNIORS PLAY MARLBOROS IN S.P.A. SEMI-FINAL TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-night at the Mutual Street Arena the Varsity Juniors take the ice against the strong Marlboro entry, and the winner plays in the finals on Friday. Frank Sullivan has a smart outfit and will put up a real game. They fight all the way, and this was demonstrated last Wednesday when against Oshawa they scored twice in the second period to tie the score, and again in the last stanza to win the game. The Dukes are reputed to be of championship calibre, so taking things all in all, it will be a bell-to-bell battle.

At that, though, the locals will have to show more team work than they did last week. Each man on the ice certainly tries hard enough, and by the time the season is over they should be working pretty smoothly. That's one difficulty in getting together a Junior team at Varsity—the management is lucky if it can retain one or two players from season to season.

A notice in to-day's issue warns the various faculties to get dated up for their inter-year assaults. Up until yesterday morning only two had indicated their intention of taking dates. In the past these meets have been very useful in arousing interest in the sport. Many enter just for the fun of it—to try their hand and then find that they would like more and hence try the Junior Assault and finally the Senior, and if good enough make the Intercollegiate team.

The McGill Daily carries a story on the Queen's B. W. and F. team which indicates that the Tricolour will have a strong entry this year. Earlier in the season it was announced that a new boxing instructor had arrived at the Limestone City, and so there should be a great old battle for the title next February. In the past couple of years Queen's have not had a very strong team, and we wish them luck.

And here's another little note on fencing. The authorities seem to forget that in Intercollegiate sport there is no INDIVIDUAL fencing championship. There are two fencers on a team, and as a team they work together—one man cannot win alone. Each man on the team fights each man on the opposing teams, four bouts in all. Then the TEAM which has been scored against the least number of times wins. In the past the papers have declared that so-and-so won the fencing championship, and apparently the Athletic Directorate believed it without further investigation.

With the prospect of a real good tour of the States ahead of the squad, Coach McCutcheon has not much need of using the whip on this season's basketball prospects. The boys are only too willing to get out and work hard for a place on the team because such a trip as scheduled does not occur every year. The Coach has been forced to build up an almost entirely new team this year, but with the material he has to work with he should be able to turn out one of championship calibre despite the very glowing reports we hear from Western (last year's champions) and the other members of the league.

From a letter received from an organization helpful to the immigrant we learn that among the questions asked of these unfortunates are: "How many feathers has a goose?" "How long is a string?" "How many feet has an American cat?"

"The alien is supposed to say he does not know," the letter goes on. "But how little such questions take into account the motion of the prospective immigrant. America is a strange, vast country. Perhaps an American goose has only just so many feathers. Perhaps there are regulations about the length of a string in America. Perhaps cats in America—it is all very bewildering."—Boston Transcript.

Who was it said that it shouldn't be hard for co-eds to fill their own Christmas stockings on the now-nearing Yule feast?

At the London Regional Conference of the National Savings Movement Major-General Seely said many people contended that the character and self-reliance of the people were being sapped by industrial strife, love of pleasure, and the amount done for the citizen by the state. That was the reverse of the truth, as the figures of the Savings movement showed. Just before the general strike the amount due to depositors in their great organization alone was 475,000,000 pounds. This time last year it was 483,000,000 pounds. On March 31 last it was 493,000,000 pounds, and at present it was well over 501,000,000 pounds.—London Times.

VARSITY JUNIORS CLASH WITH FAST MARLBORO SQUAD

Babes Out to Upset Confident "Dukes" in Semi-finals of S.P.A. Series

TEAM AT FULL STRENGTH

Game Promises to be One of the Best of Pre-Christmas Hockey Season

Don't miss the Varsity-Marlboro Junior S.P.A. play-down if you care for good hockey, and there are very few teams that provide the thrills that the "kids" do. The Juniors go at the battles as if their lives depended upon the outcome, and consequently the fight is hot to the very last second and the youngsters battle no matter what the score may be.

The Marlboro squad is the favourite for the tilt this evening, but the Blue team is sure that the "Dukes" are going to have no cinch, and they will certainly know that they have been in a sweet battle. The Frank Sullivan coached team at the practice last night were going like blazes and are all set to give the Marlboros the surprise of their lives. The former St. Mary sextette have an all-star lineup that was picked from the best in Junior company of last year that the management could lay their hands on.

The Varsity team is going like a house afire, and have shown some sweet form in their games to date in the S.P.A. series; and if they "take" the Dukes into camp their looks for the Junior Big Four is a certainty. "Shrimp" McPherson, their centre star, is one of the finest pivots in the game to-day, and the pro scouts have been after him time and again, but to no avail. The work of the "pest" is a treat to watch, and those turning out to the minors' battle at 8.30 to-night will be amply repaid for their efforts.

Ohio State University athletic teams will elect no more captains for Varsity sports as the result of action taken by the athletic board.

This ruling is to go into effect at once and no football captain will be elected for next year, but one will be appointed before each game.

The official statement is as follows: "Hereafter in all Ohio State University sports a field leader will be appointed before each contest by the coach of that sport.

"At the close of the season the lettermen will elect an honorary captain, who will go on record as captain for the past year.

"This ruling does not apply to captains who have already been elected."

VARSITY RINK TO SMOOTH THE WAY FOR LOVE-LORN

Introduction Committee to Select Representatives for Various Residences

BOYS OUTNUMBER GIRLS

Ten Groups Use Arena Ice in Daily Practices

The social ambitions of students using the Varsity rink this year are to be gratified as usual by the special body of undergraduates appointed to introduce the love-lorn man or maid to a companionable member of the other sex.

Mr. Ross Workman is particularly anxious that the Introduction Committee of last year arrange for the selection of representatives from the various residences to form the Committee of this year, these to meet with him and spend a few nights at the Arena in becoming acquainted with each other. This rather unique scheme (for a skating rink) of aiding students from the different faculties to know each other has been found very satisfactory in the past, and will again no doubt.

It has never yet been found feasible to sell season tickets for the indoor arena; nevertheless about ten per cent. of those attending are students. The thousand mark has almost been reached this year, with always a few more men than girls, despite the higher admission.

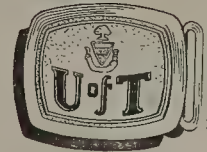

During the day the Arena is far from idle. Every hour is filled with hockey—on Saturday as many as ten different groups using the ice. The University women's team is shortly to make an appearance. And at the Varsity Arena there is no need to fear accidents—First Aid is always on hand.

This bit of Beerbohm Tree's wit has come to us. He was hiring an actor for one of his productions, a fellow of greater conceit than talent. The latter desired to be prominently advertised, to have his name appear on the billing after the star's, preceded by the usual conjunction.

"I shall expect you to bill the 'and' before my name," declared the actor. "Alas, my dear friend," said Tree, "how can I do so? You know it is 'and' to give the 'and where the Art can never be."

SENIOR U.C. WOMEN SWAMP MEDETTES TO TUNE 58—13

Emma Weir, Mildred Wilkins, Phyl Howard and Mary Jackson Star

A rather one-sided basketball game was witnessed last evening when the Senior U.C. women defeated the Medettes 58—13. At half time the score was 24—8.

The series is quite far advanced, and it is hoped will be completed by the beginning of next week, and the finals will be held before Christmas.

Emma Weir, U.C.'s fast side centre, was on her toes all the time, while Mildred Wilkins and Phyl Howard played a splendid defence game.

Violet Henry played a good game for the losers.

The U.C. sextette showed splendid form in their short snappy passes. The outstanding features of the game were the two beautiful goals scored from the side lines by Mary Jackson of Meds.

The basketball fans are in the minority this year, and it is hoped that more will turn out for the remaining games in the series.

A radio set mounted on a panel and not in a cabinet allows the entire system to be exposed to the ordinary dust and dirt of the air. Such a set should be inspected, especially around the condenser plates, which generally collect 90 per cent. of this dust and dirt, thereby greatly cutting down the efficiency of the condenser.

Theatre this week. "The Seventh Guest" would satisfy, in fact sate, the most ardent thrill seeker. Some of the stunts have been used before, but these are lost in the rush of really nerve shattering events. After two acts of dead men, falling chandeliers, and bloodthirsty groans, we were ready to cry quits, and had consoled ourselves with the thought that the third act is always devoid of thrills and devoted to explanations. Not so this play. Having got us to that state when any sudden movement would have resulted in our leaving the theatre a jibbering lunatic, the playwrights proceed to give us another scene equally as shiver-fraught as the first two. The suspense is cleverly held right up to the last.
It is natural to compare a mystery play with others of its species, and, in our opinion, "The Seventh Guest" ranks with the best.
Perhaps the most outstanding roles were those played by Arthur Allard and Samuel Godfrey. The former is his management of an opera company which does not contain one mediocre performer.

Any grand opera company, according to Mr. Frank, and to Signor Vincent Ciani, who is sponsoring the present tour, must depend for its success upon the complete personnel of distinguished artists. In addition, however, the production must carry a complete symphony orchestra in order to ensure adequate interpretation of the scores, and in order to produce the necessary atmospheric effects the presentation must be elaborately and carefully staged. All these requirements music critics have reported, are to be found in the company which comes to the Royal Alexandra this week.

Through arrangements made personally with Signor Ciani, a limited number of special students' tickets for the New York Grand Opera have been made available to the University of Toronto. These tickets, designed primarily to enable students of music to attend the operas at a reasonable price, are available to any undergraduate and are being distributed under the auspices of the Students' Council through the various undergraduate societies and at the Hall Porter's desk, Hart House.

lieve that women are not as bad as their champion has painted them, although her letter, in itself, might seem to substantiate her argument.

I have stated that the letter was both unfair and illogical. The following statement will explain the former condemnation:

"As regards trial marriages, of course the men would approve. They have nothing to lose, no suffering to endure, and they certainly do not sacrifice anything. What a nice little holiday!"

What, dear madam, have women to lose that men have not?

Proof that it is illogical is not difficult to find. Such a sentence as, "Five years of bliss and then walk off—for that is exactly what they (i.e., men) will do," contains a contradiction in itself. Why would anyone in his right mind, who has enjoyed five years of bliss, suddenly "walk off"? But of much more importance is the fact that she has built up her argument on several fallacious hypotheses. Paternal love has been disregarded entirely, or how could she say that men had nothing to lose? The fact that all men would be glad to relinquish the ties of wedlock when the five years was up, is also assumed. If this were true, marriage as an institution would have disappeared long before this. Lastly, I would point out for her benefit that a man's conduct is shaped by women, just as a woman's conduct is shaped by men. Which influence is the stronger it is impossible to state, for no person in this world could judge impartially.

Much more might be said in criticism, as well as in defence of trial marriage. But my purpose is neither to utterly crumble the arguments of a "Good Girl" nor to present the other side of the case, but rather to show that the letter is unjust, to say the least.

Very sincerely yours,

Mere Man.

HOLDS THAT QUALITY OF DEBATE ALONE COUNTS

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

I think I can safely say on behalf of the Debates Committee of Hart House that we welcome any criticism and suggestions relating to the conduct of the Hart House Debates, and will always give them serious consideration.

The suggestions in your columns on Friday last involve, however, some misunderstanding of the nature of the debates. In the first place, Mr. Connor over-emphasises the seriousness of the decision of the House. I admit that the influence of a distinguished visitor is very strong, and especially when speaking last. I would point out, however, that in the debates at Ottawa or Queen's Park the Prime Minister has the last word in an important debate. It is the wish of the Committee whenever possible to bring in two distinguished visitors on opposite sides, which would eliminate any unfairness. On one occasion Mr. Andrew McMaster, K.C., was opposed by Mr. P. P. Sparks. But I insist it is the quality of the debate that matters, and I should not worry over the awful effects of the decision. In the second place, I must take exception to your editorial suggestion that "voting be based on the manner in which arguments have been presented and the merits of the facts expounded," and that "the decision of the House should rest rather on the principal speakers of the evening." The House is not merely a group of 250 judges, in place of the three we know in intercollegiate debates, giving a decision on a sort of athletic contest in oratory. The House is a deliberate assembly adopt-away from Mary Pickford ambitions by interesting them in hand-crafts.

Hand-crafts will be employed also in medical hospitals, to exercise stiff muscles and to interest the morbid minds of the hopeless patients. Manual work for children's hospitals takes the form of wooden dummies and elephants—even jewelry is attempted; but it is rumoured that on failure to "land a job" after graduation, the O.T. co-eds will supply Woolworth's.

It must not be believed that while at the Asylum these unprotected maidens have any dealings with straight-jacket cases. Their patients are of fairly mild form, nerve cases mostly, with the exception of some possessing beautiful hallucinations. In fact, the patients themselves criticize a system wherein some of the mildest form of insanity are worried by spectacles of dangerous lunacy.

Hot shots for the legal fraternity featured the closing session of the nineteenth annual convention of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts, held in the Memorial Hall, when embattled farmers fired broadside after broadside at what was described as the "small town lawyer."—Calgary Herald.

PERFECT HARMONY IN I.A.U.

Professor Mackenzie greatly deplored the newspaper bunkum which insidiously suggested friction and ill-feeling among members of the Union. He declared that such a condition was wholly mythical, and only the incoherent and ungrounded babbling of newspaper column crammers. The president further stated that, in all his experience, he had never heard one unkind remark or nasty inference issue forth at an Athletic Union meeting. Old faults take time to rectify, even after they are recognized as faults, and Professor Mackenzie has faith in the Union to sweep away all weaknesses in time. Even now arrangements are under way, which, it is hoped, will lead to a satisfactory solution of the problem of the division of gate receipts among the three colleges.

FOOTBALL BECOMING A DANGEROUS GAME IN STATES' COLLEGES

McGill Daily Reports Danger in Some Features of U.S. Rugby Games

CHANGED RULES OF NO USE

Effort to Remove Accidents Results in Failure; Even More Deaths Now

[Ed. note.—The following article which appeared in the McGill Daily refers obviously to the American game and is not a statement that bears on the game as played in this country. Still with the discussion that arises from time to time regarding the introduction of American rules into the Canadian code it might be well to consider the matter contained in this article.]

Seventeen football players died of injuries received in the gridiron this year. This is a higher fatality than last year, when eight were killed, but is short of the 1925 total, which was twenty, and which is the record for the modern game.

The list of those receiving injuries which required hospitalization is shorter than in recent years, only about 100 cases having been reported. Last year 200 major injuries were listed, and the year before, the number was about the same as this season. The average age of those who died this year is just short of 19 years. The oldest age was 22 and the youngest was 15, two boys of this age having died. It is noteworthy that not one New York public school boy was seriously injured, and that none was killed.

It may seem startling that seventeen players were killed in the course of the football season, which is only three months long, but the game is being played on a gigantic scale in all parts of the country, and the average, if one could be determined, would find the percentage of fatalities very low. Insurance companies, always alert to classify the hazardous occupations, have not designated football as such, and thus far do not contemplate putting it on that list.

This season was expected to be more free of accidents than others because of the change in the rules, several of which were designed for no other purpose than eliminating injuries. The goal posts were moved back of the actual playing field so contestants would not bump into them, and the more open style of play was advocated with strict rules against roughness, such as upsetting the man kicking the ball.

ST. MIKE'S REGISTRATION GREATER THAN LAST YEAR

More Men Than Women Drop Out From Freshman to Senior Years

A study of the registration figures at St. Michael's College this year reveals the following interesting facts. There are roughly 59 per cent. of the men students in residence as against only 42 per cent. of the women. Since it is the practice not to allow those from out-of-town to live out of residence, it would appear 17 per cent. more women than men are from Toronto. From the figures obtained the descent in numbers from first year to fourth is much more marked in the male students than in the female, there being 57 freshmen to 20 seniors, and 34 freshies to 27 seniors.

The college as a whole has increased in numbers yearly since the abnormal years immediately following the war, and at present it stands third among the Arts colleges.

Connachers, Mercer, McPherson Score for Dukes, Beal and Beal for Jrs.

After having the dopesters on pins and needles for two and a half periods the Varsity Junior hockey team succumbed to the onrush of the Marlboros 4-2 in a game that provided plenty of thrills. The Blue team was leading the much touted Duke squad up until the end of the second stanza when the "Shrimp" McPherson outflung tied up the count on a tough break when the Marlboro centre shot and Hunniset failed to clear in time, as the puck was caught in Hunniset's pads, and Mercer came in fast to flip the rubber in behind the goalie to tie the count. The game was one of individual play, with very little combination and plenty of spills. The game did not provide the best of hockey, but the upsets made up for the lack of good team play. The Marlboros started out with a rush, and with only eight minutes gone of the first canto Charlie Connacher bulged the twine with a wicked drive. A few minutes later Gordie Beal came back on a solo effort and tied the score on a play that had the (Continued from page 3)

STUDENT DELEGATES GOING TO DETROIT

Many Register from Various Colleges and Faculties of U. of T.

CHEAP RATES ARRANGED

The Detroit Student Convention to be held from December 20th to January 1, will probably be the largest and most representative student gathering on this continent for many years. The convention is sponsored by the Student Volunteer Movement, a branch of which is located here at the University of Toronto.

About one hundred and fifty Canadian delegates are expected to attend the meetings. They will assemble from all parts of Canada, and if early registration is any indication this number may be passed.

Toronto was expected to send some fifty men and women, but already this quota has been exceeded. Practically every faculty and college on the campus is preparing to send representatives to the conference, and in some cases the demand for tickets is greater than the supply. At present Victoria is leading in registration with about fifteen representatives expecting to attend. The other Arts colleges, Medicine, Dental School, Knox, Wycliffe, Union Theological College, S.P.S. and Social Service follow behind with lesser numbers of representatives. A number of delegates are also going as representatives of the foreign students at the University of Toronto.

In order that students from great distances do not have to pay high railroad fares, the travelling expenses of the delegates have been pooled. It is expected that each Canadian student, whether he come from British Columbia or Nova Scotia, will just pay twenty-five dollars for his ticket. Cheap rates have also been arranged at the Detroit hotels.

U.C. LIT. FROWNS ON TRIAL MARRIAGE AT SECOND MEETING

Canon Cody Presents Portrait of Late Maurice Cody to Society

ALSO PRIZE FOR SENIORS

Unanimous Vote Gives Verdict to Second Year

A feature programme and a fine turnout combined to make the second meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society a decided success. Levity and sadness combined to produce the successful result, which was brought to a fine conclusion by the usual refreshments and sing-song.

The meeting was brought to order by the Honorary President, Mr. McLaughlin, and routine business was discussed, included amongst which was the establishment of the Maurice Cody Memorial Prize of thirty dollars, to be presented annually to the student of University College who shows the greatest adaptability to public speaking and the interests of the College in general. Candidates will be nominated at a meeting in the spring of each year and voted upon by the student body. Entries will be restricted to members of the fourth year.

Canon Cody then came forward and presented a photograph of his late son to the Society, and requested that it should be hung above the inscription of his name in the lists of officers of the U.C. Lit which adorn the walls of the Junior Common Room. The presentation was appropriately responded to by the president of the Society, Mr. A. Christie.

A debate between the second and fourth years was held on the subject, "Resolved that this House disapproves of trial marriage." J. H. Gringorton and R. W. Finlayson of 370 defended the motion, while R. H. Soward and M. Andrews of 278 opposed it. All in all, the debate was rather good and provided much laughter at times. It probably provided as much value for one's money as a lecture by Emma Goldman on "Birth Control." The second year was awarded the decision of the House by a majority of 13-0. Discussion upon the motion then followed.

MEDETTES HOLD ENJOYABLE MEETING AT WOMEN'S UNION

Mrs. G. E. Bott Says Psychology of Student Life Offers Great Interest

The Medettes spent an enjoyable hour's get-together last Monday afternoon at the Women's Union, when the M.W.U.A. held its December meeting. Tea and conversation constituted the beginning of the meeting, followed by the transaction of a few items of business. Mrs. G. E. Bott then addressed the gathering, speaking on the subject of the necessary adjustments made in college life by the student, especially in the matter of the length of time allowed for work and play. Mrs. Bott dealt with the subject in a most interesting way and showed the large field of thought opened up by a study of the psychology of the college student. A short period of discussion followed the address, during which several made enquiries about the practicability of a group in which the problems of college students could be studied. The general feeling was that such a study would be very beneficial should an opportunity of carrying it out present itself.

PASCAL IS SUBJECT OF ESSAY AT SCIENCE CLUB

Canon Rollo Declares Him to Rank with Descartes and Newton

The Trinity College Science Club held its fifth regular meeting of the year at Trinity House last evening. The essayist, Canon Rollo, Honorary President of the Club, gave a very interesting talk on the life and works of Blaise Pascal (1623-1662), French religious philosopher and mathematician. Pascal gave evidence of his mathematical ability early in his life, and at the age of eleven was able to join in scientific conversations and wrote a treatise on sounds. At sixteen he produced a treatise on conic sections. His later scientific works included investigations of the weight of the atmosphere, equilibrium of fluids, theory of probability and the solving of many problems associated with the cycloid curve.

Intense study and an accident that befell him in 1646 injured his health, and his later philosophy took a serious turn. At Port Royal, the convent with which he became connected, he produced his proverbial letters and pensées. These writings showed Pascal's great command of the French language, and it can be truly said that as philosopher and mathematician Pascal ranks with Newton and Descartes.

MANY SUBJECTS TREATED AT PHYSICS SEMINAR

Electron Theory, Light, Atomic Hydrogen and Oxygen to be Discussed

The Department of Physics will hold a Seminar on Thursday, Dec. 8, at 4.15 p.m. in Room 43 of the Physics Building. The following papers will be presented:

"The Electron Theory of Metals"—Die Naturwissenschaften, 15, p. 825, 1927—Professor J. C. McLennan.
"Light Quanta and Interference"—Dempster and Batho, Phys. Rev. Nov. 1927—Professor L. Gilchrist.

(a) "Some Properties of Atomic Hydrogen"—Kaplan, Phys. Rev. Nov. 1927; (b) "An Active Form of Oxygen"—Bichowsky and Copeland, Nature Nov. 19, 1927—Mr. J. M. Anderson.

"Contact of Flat Surfaces"—Rolt and Barrell, Proc. Roy. Soc. Oct, 1927—Mr. R. Turnbull.

Professors Say Overeating Causes Inattention in Afternoon Lectures

Evidently Professor Lafayette Mendel is right when he says that too much eating harms mental activity. Several members of the staff in four different faculties were interviewed and all agreed upon this fact. Evidence of this truth was to be had at any two o'clock lecture in any of the lecture rooms and in any faculty.

In Medicine, Forestry, Arts and Science all students who did show up at two o'clock were apparently overcome with a soporific daze which they only partially threw off when asked a question. For instance, if a professor were to ask, "How do you form the plurals of German weak declension nouns?" the answer is just as likely to be "Yes" as "No." So there you are. This is apparently true of all theological students who are able to devote much time to much food and more meditation, except of course in the case of Wycliffe, which is stronger on the meditation.

In Forestry the ill-effects of this after-lunch state of coma wears off more quickly, as the boys are generally forced out into the open air, and about ten minutes after two generally are wondering how long it is till dinner time.

As for Meds, it is noticed that if the morning be spent in a certain top

WRITES ON METHODISM

Praises Dr. Barber, Vic Librarian, and St. Michael's Staff

An interesting figure to be seen at St. Michael's and in Victoria College Library during the past week has been Rev. Maximin Piette, O.F.M., Docteur et Maître en Théologie (Louvain) Doctor Piette, who has already produced a bulky work dealing with the history of Protestantism, is at present preparing a book to be entitled "Methodism in the Religious Evolution of North America." He declares that the library of Victoria College contains one of the richest collections of works on John Wesley and on Methodism in North America that he has ever seen, and his experience embraces research work at Oxford and Epworth in England and at the library of the Dominion Archives and at Montreal in Canada.

At the outbreak of the late war he was a Chaplain in the Belgian Army, and as such he participated in the defence of Liege. In contravention of international law he was captured and detained by the Germans for four months. He was accused of being a French spy, and once faced a firing-squad, which fortunately was apparently for the purpose of terrifying him. Even while in confinement he was allowed to continue his studies, although one time he was sent to Russia for giving utterance to his patriotism. He was in the occupied area during the whole war, and whatever he said or did was spied upon by the Germans.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Majority Say Co-ed's Must Pay

Do you think the co-ed should ever pay the shot in entertaining men?

Mr. H. Henderson, III UC: "They do already with their at-homes, tea dances, etc."

Miss L. Procter, IV UC: "Yes. I think it would be a good idea if girls put on big dances like the Athletic Dance."

Miss V. Dowler, III UC: "It would be very difficult for the girls to hold a big dance since they have no place like Hart House."

Mr. M. Fotheringham, I S.P.S.: "Although it would involve a great change in social organizations, I think that since women have equal rights with men, the answer should be in the affirmative."

Mr. B. Widdis, III Meds: "It is logical that the girl should return the man's hospitality."

Miss H. MacDonald, II H. Sc: "Girls already contribute their share with their pleasing personality."

Mr. V. J. Bourke, IV St. Michael's: "The whole social edifice of whom would break down if such were the case. Why bring sordid thought of money into the social world of make-believe?"

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1927

TO-DAY'S "OPEN MEETING" OF THE S.A.C.

When the Students' Administrative Council throws open its doors to the undergraduate body to-day those who care may witness the initiation of what should prove to be a very interesting experiment, the success or failure of which will be determined entirely by the attitude and reception of the student body. Their work long covered by somewhat of a mantle of mystery, the Council at length hearkened to the voice of popular demand and threw wide its doors. Now that such a concession has been granted, it remains for those urging this step to signify their approval by their attendance at these meetings, by giving careful consideration to the questions that come up before the Council and by observing a quiet and decorous manner.

In granting the "open meeting" several reasons may be advanced by the Council. In the first place, the student executive body cannot now be accused of taking the initiative in a step of which the undergraduate knew nothing or of which he would not approve, for, while no provision has been made for a statement from the floor, the columns of the press will always be available for approval or constructive criticism. In the second place, more interest should be aroused throughout the undergraduate body in its own affairs; and it is possible that, with faculty representatives working together towards a common good, more friendly relationships will be engendered between the various colleges. Again, representatives to the Council from the lower years in the University will now find that their absence from meetings will not be treated with indifference. Their constituents have elected them with a definite purpose in mind, and it is unfair to them if neglect on the part of their member should leave them without proper representation. They will demand that, now that the opportunity is provided to learn whether or not that representation is forthcoming. No longer will the electors be required to nominate for office the same man year after year on the strength of precedent alone. The opportunity is now provided to discover just what are the qualifications of a Council man, and the nominee must be prepared to meet these requirements if he seek election. And, lastly, those intending to run for office in the future will be given an opportunity of acquiring a knowledge of Council affairs that should bear them well.

Neither the meeting to-day nor the meeting two weeks hence will determine whether or not the S.A.C. was justified in throwing open its doors. It may be expected that the curious, rather than those genuinely in search of information, will predominate at the first few meetings, but it is upon the attractiveness of the new idea to the latter upon which the Council will base its decision to continue. It is therefore in the interest of the undergraduate to attend these meetings, as otherwise they will be discontinued, and so will go all expectation of the average man in interesting himself in the welfare of the undergraduate body.

SIGNS AND SYMBOLS

Once upon a time, not so very long ago, a black and white policeman's sign post mysteriously disappeared from the middle of an avenue. The arm of the law was destitute. The force was summoned. The stop-and-go sign was found—in a students' library. Even the cast-iron constables grinned as they carried it off. The lack of any connection whatsoever between a stop-and-go sign and a study room was fearfully amusing.

And yet "stop-and-go" might well be encribed, by practice, on the threshold of all campus libraries. Ten minutes before lectures—a dash in and out to return a book—a transitory visit to speak to a friend—or, worst of all, an "unconcentrated" half-hour before being "called for."

Oh, where is the red-blooded idealist who will transport and fasten with three-foot spikes to the door of each library, the sign "Zone of Quiet," or, better still, "Stop—Through Street?"

Art, Music and Drama

O.C.E. DRAMATIC SOCIETY

The Dramatic Society of the Ontario College of Education is to be congratulated on the signal success of the second of their series of performances, which was presented on Tuesday evening in the U.T.S. auditorium to a large and appreciative audience.

The first number, a comic skit, Cook and Glaspell's "Suppressed Desires," was ably presented by Miss Marjorie Tow, Miss Margaret Ness and Mr. Donald Graham—the action centering round the problem of psycho-analysis.

As their second number the Society attempted the rather more pretentious task of interpreting in "Great Catherine" the subtle wit of Bernard Shaw. In this production James E. Dean, as the drunken but wily Patiomkin, excellently interpreted the dissolute court manners of 18th century Russia. Mr. H. VanEvery Shaw, as the dashing young English captain, made a perfect foil for Shaw's customary satire on his own countrymen. The Empress was admirably handled by Miss Gertrude Godley, and Miss Helen Munro played an adequate and charming role as Patiomkin's niece. As the fiancée of Capt. Edstaston, Miss Ruth Clement showed to good advantage, as did also Mr. Pierce as the Chancellor, especially in the third act.

Both productions were under the able directorship of Miss Margaret Ness and the President, Mr. Harold Spence, to whom much of the Society's success is due. Mr. Walter Rennie and his U.T.S. orchestra rendered appropriate numbers between acts.

After much mental contortion we finally announce the great college epic in three eps by Epigram Eppie.

The freshmen are arriving at old McDram. Some are walking, some are motoring, some are sent by their parents, but they all come. Freshmen always come to college, for some reason or other.

A sophomore named Eustace McSkunk is being mean to a freshman on the front steps of Boogie Hall. He has to read six pages from the University Calendar at sight.

"Stop that!" rings out a clear young voice. It is Howe Noble, a very green freshman with red hair. Mark him well—(this also applies to examiners)—he is to be our hero.

"And who the deuce are you?" demands Eustace, sneering. Eustace sneers absolutely upon the slightest provocation. He drinks near beer. "Who," he demands, "is going to stop me?"

"I will!" cried Howe, in his ringing voice. He looks Eustace straight in the eye.

The cad flinched visibly, turned, and slunk off. "Aw, fudge!" he swore. It is apparent that trouble is stirring on the campus of old McDram.

Eustace McSkunk is a bad boy, we fear. He refuses openly to subscribe to the following doctrine of faith:

"I believe that to proceed to a degree in an Honour Course one must have or have not have fulfilled the conditions as proscribed in Section A, (83), B (64) or Subsection 6-c of the O.M.V.A. and the O.L.C.A., Subsection c, part 3. I agree, if my standing is deficient, to read ten complete chapters each evening from the University Calendar as penance."

Not only that, but he chews gum and puts it under desks to decorate the knees of the succeeding class. He may be struck by lightning any time now, and expelled.

Howe Noble, like Eustace, is an all-round athlete. But what a difference! Howe is a joy to the heart and eye; a typical product of our coming generation—

(Interval of 6000 words)

III. This is the greatest day that McDram has ever had. The stadium is full of cheering crowds.

The players are in the dressing-room.

The coach is telling them funny stories.

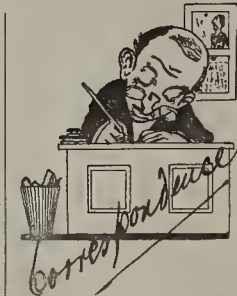

The game is on. One by one the McDram players are losing their lead. One by one their unconscious forms are carried out. The Perennial Bat-rook of Scream's is up to his old tricks—Boy! he's a knock-out!

Finally only Howe and Eustace are left on the field.

"Pshaw!" cries the coach, "Scream's Eustace us pretty badly in the last quarter."

Only Howe and Eustace—can they bear up?

ANOTHER COMPLAINT ABOUT BIOGRAPHIES

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

With regard to biographies vs. biographies or quotations may I be allowed to ask—

First: Why Torontonensis is published if not for the students? If saving money is the aim, why is it published at all?

Second: Why, if the average student is to be so carefully eliminated, is he given a book which he indirectly pays for? If a student has greatly furthered the interests of his University his name or picture will appear on the various committees or teams. Therefore why should he monopolize the space devoted to biographies with a thirty-five word summary of his great deeds. If he wishes it, we do not object to his biography—but why must all the insignificant enter blanks to give him space? Why is not each entitled to ten words to express his personality? He pays as much and is probably just as good, or better. Is it a case of "all or none?" Is he

"TWO ARABIAN KNIGHTS"—UPTOWN

The feature at the Uptown this week is a new post-war comedy combining the virtues of two other tableaux de guerre, that is to say, "Two Arabian Knights" is a sort of combination of "What Price Glory" and "Behind the Front." At present many American producers are endeavouring to discover another comedy team that will rival Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in popularity. They have tried Karl Dane plus George Arthur, Victor McLaglen plus Edmund Lowe, and now we have the best duo yet, Louis Wolheim and William Boyd. Wolheim, who was the star of the stage production of "What Price Glory," has a grotesque individuality and a natural genius for comedy of the hard-boiled doughboy variety. He is so fearful facially that his expressions of anger, despair, disgust and general Kriegschmerz that he compels us to regard him as the best of the post-war comedians. With him is William Boyd, not especially remarkable in talent but pleasing on the whole. The two are captured by Germans, escape from a Sillesian prison camp, and finally stow away on a small Asia Minor coaster, where they are called on to rescue a lovely houri who is affianced to one of Mustapha Kemal's underlings.

VARSITY INFANTS OUTLUCKED TO LOSE 4-2 IN S.P.A. SEMI-FINAL

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Despite the fact that the various league schedules do not start for some time, the Varsity Seniors are not easing up in their practices. The full squad is out every night, and they not only turn out but they take things seriously. The outfit looks better now than it did even against the Grads, and there is every reason to believe that they will improve still more. It may be that the chance of a trip to New York has something to do with the general enthusiasm, but at any rate there is plenty of it.

If they keep on at the rate they are going, they will be serious contenders for the O.H.A. title. At present they are a good team, but they are not world beaters. However, there is plenty of time, and prospects are bright indeed for the wearers of the well-known Blue and White.

With the continued cold weather, thought of the hockeyist begins to turn to the Jennings Cup series. While no open-air rinks are in operation, it only needs a few days' weather like last week-end to start the rinks going. The games in this series are played on the outdoor rinks till the semi-finals are reached, these being played in the luxury of the Varsity Arena. Little is known as yet about the various inter-faculty teams, but it is almost safe to say that there will be stirring competition as there has been in past seasons.

allowed to enter his picture so as to humiliate him with the blank after his name? Very effective we assure you! But why can he not have a quotation to hide behind.

We grant that biographies can take less space—one thirty-word biography and six empty spaces take less space than seven ten-word quotations. As this is the aim, why not openly acknowledge that Torontontensis is "of the elect, for the elect and by the elect?" Enter only pictures of those outstanding geniuses and give the book only to them. This would save much time, labor and heartache, and we of course would still pay.

To have a biography surrounded by names gives prominence to it. If the names have quotations, one of course passes over the uninteresting list of

Just paste this on your hat band. Varsity Juniors have as smart a team as there is playing minor hockey in Toronto, and if you want the proof just glance at the big score the Blue "kids" gave the far-famed Marlboro sextette. The game was closer than the 4-2 score indicates, with the Frank Sullivan boys having as much of the play as the winners, and for two periods outplayed the Dukes.

The Marlboros will have to play clean hockey if they want to get anywhere. Last night for no reason whatever the former St. Mary gang were using the elbow and tripping far beyond what was necessary. The multi-colored squad is a good one, and if it plays clean hockey should go far. There is no place in the Queen City sport world for teams that have a monopoly of the penalty benches.

Just watch this boy Geordie Beal gambol around the centre position. His work is a treat to watch. He had "Shrimp" McPherson hog tied for a while, and the pro scouts have been chasing the diminutive pest. Watch Beal, is the cry of the fans, and they are not bellowing on an empty reputation but on Geordie's fine all-round work.

committees, teams, etc., and enjoys the brain-children of the much maligned "helpers in the ranks." That would never do! To be passed over, unthinkable!

For a list of students and their addresses we have the directory. We do not need a second one, with pictures blurred on cheap paper. Why is it a sin to have a quotation from another Torontontensis if it is suitable? Biographies are always the same.

Enough from Disillusioned 2T7.

AREOPAGUS CLUB FOSTERS YOUNG STUDENT ORATORY

Seven Undergraduates Speak Before Saint Michael's College Club

The regular weekly meeting of the Areopagus, a students' club devoted to the fostering of oratory, was held in St. Michael's College last night. J. Monahan was in the chair.

"Fools" was the subject of the opening speech by Pat Flynn.

Ross Hilborn spoke at some length on MacPherson's Forgeries, one of the greatest literary freaks of the English language.

Leonard Moran discussed certain problems arising out of the modern mechanical age. Superfluous legislation came in for much criticism.

The relationship of economic wealth and true wealth was the subject of H. H. O'Connor's speech.

Pat McAndrew and Wm. Kendrick acted as student critics.

Ed. Scully gave an extempore account of old age pensions.

Rev. W. B. O'Toole was faculty critic.

VIC. JUNIORS BEAT SAINTS' BASKETEERS DURING CLOSE GAME

Clever Game at U.T.S. is Won by Team Which Proves the Steadiest

ST. HILDA'S STRONG

Norma Bateman and Mary Parks Star for Vic; Pat Tilson for St. Hilda's

Vic Juniors won by a score of 29-17 at U.T.S. gym on Tuesday night last night at O.C.E. gym, the Vic girls ran up a score of 45 points against 12 made for U.C. The game was much faster than the scoring indicates. The floorwork of the U.C. team was swift, but not swift enough to intercept the Vic passes. Vic played a better game as a team than any they have played so far in the series. Their combination work and steady shooting was an outstanding feature.

Betty MacDonald, side centre for U.C., played a splendid all-round game, and Marian Forward, side centre for Vic, did some very pretty shooting and sent the score booming.

The game was one of the best that has been played in the series this year.

Line-up:
Vic: Forwards, Ede Buchanan, Grace Keffer; centres, Dot Ker, Marian Forward; guards, Al Muckle, Fran. Service.

U.C.: Forwards, Ede Blackwell, Jean Robertson; centres, Edith Peake, Betty MacDonald; guards, Marian Henderson, Phil. Ferguson.

The line-ups were as follows:
Vic: W. Mahoney, M. Parks, H. Beal, M. Beattie, N. Bateman, E. Taylor, H. Merritt, B. Moore, B. Doyle, K. Carscallen.

St. Hilda's: P. Tilson, M. Johnston, B. Button, R. Harrison, B. Borbridge, D. Cox, M. Dickinson, D. Langley, M. Lewis.

crowd on its feet hollering for little George. The Blue and White sextette was having the better of the play and had the Marlboros ragged for a time. The Sullivan boys were without a doubt the better of the two gangs.

With only two minutes of the playing time in the second period gone, Beal came flying up the ice to score a neat goal that put Varsity up on the Dukes and shoved the "know all" crowd down to the depths of despair.

And what is more, the Blues were holding their own with a team that already has the Canadian title under their belts, or at least that is what the moguls have it; 13 minutes later Mercer bounced one into the nets to tie the score.

The teams settled down for good hard hockey in the third period, and it looked that it would go overtime until a lucky goal went past Hunnisset off Alex. Connacher's stick. The Varsity squad came back and forced the Marlboros up against their own nets until the Dukes had a fluky break when McPherson shot from centre and the puck rolled down the goalie's chest pad in behind him.

The whole Varsity team deserves oodles of credit for their fine showing against a team that was supposed to have the Blues beaten before they went on the playing surface. Geordie Beal was without a doubt the best man on the ice, and that does not exclude even the far-famed "Shrimp's" work of the Marlboros' centre. Beal and Mooney on the defence were a big obstacle to the striped sweatered forwards, and were bowling them over right and left.

Summary:
FIRST PERIOD
Marlboro—C. Connacher, 8.30.
Varsity—Beal, 2.20.

SECOND PERIOD
Varsity—Beal, 2.30.
Marlboro—Mercer, 13.05.

THIRD PERIOD
Marlboro—A. Connacher, 10.00.
Marlboro—McPherson, 5.05.

Varsity: Goal, Hunnisset; defence, Mooney, Beal; centre, Beal; wings, Lister, Smith; subs, Clute, Arnold.

Marlboro: Goal, Baxter; defence, Horner, Irvine; centre, McPherson; wings, C. Connacher, A. Connacher; subs, Mercer, Miller, Pickersway.

Referee: Bobby Hewitson.

SENIOR VIC ARE VICTORS OVER JUNIOR U.C. TEAM

Win by 45-12 in Women's Basketball Game at O.C.E. Gymnasium

Needless to say the boys make a complete mess of the Turkish forces and sail back to the "land of the spree and the home of the rave" with the lovely houri in tow. As war comedies go, it is very enjoyable and all that a comedy should be. The rest of the bill at the Uptown may best be described as rather deplorable. Mr. Jack Arthur, that master of the mise-en-scene, creates a pretty Wedgewood plate opus, but the dance and song thereabouts are very ordinary. Two smart alecks billed as "The Radio Boys" are just what one would expect. On the radio distance would lend enchantment, but in person the boys are 100% Nix. Hal Roach's Rascals or Child Monstrosities torture a few more hapless animals to the huge merriment of all. Too much could not be said of the feature picture's merit, too little, etc., about the rest.

Princeton, N.J.—A long light on the part of The Daily Princetonian to win for the students the right to vote at municipal elections, a fight begun when the franchise was denied at registration time, has ended with the refusal of the county elections board to reopen the case.

Whether the politics of the mayor-alty fight had anything to do with a desire to keep the students from voting, is not clear. Presumably the opposing candidates stood with the collegians. But the election board decided that the resident requirement of five months had not been fulfilled, due to summer absences, and on this ground denied use of the ballot.

Modern parents should have lived a hundred years ago. Williams College, in its student publication, estimates the cost of a college year expenses then as $125 and compares it with the approximate $1,500 a year which is needed by the average college student of to-day.

Stanford and California enthusiasts organized a separate rooting section on the new steamship Malolo, and as reports came in of the game's progress, cheered for their teams.

Berkeley, Calif. — (IP) — Irving "Brick" Marcus, University of California, back, is believed to be the only football player to wear glasses on the gridiron. He has a special helmet with the lenses inserted in a leather case. He has suffered no difficulties so far this season.

ATHLETIC DIRECTORATE HONOURS MISS DAVIDSON

Popular Assistant Presented with Plate and Cheque on Leaving Staff

There was an unusual item on the agenda of the Athletic Directorate at yesterday's meeting when Miss Stephanie Davidson, Assistant in the Athletic Association, was presented with a piece of plate and a cheque on behalf of the University Athletic Association. Miss Davidson has been in the Athletic Office for the past five years, and her efficient and courteous attention was accorded to all and sundry who had business dealing with the Athletic department.

Miss Davidson is leaving the Staff to be married, and takes with her the best wishes of a large and admiring group of friends. She will leave Canada around the end of January for India, where her prospective husband, Captain J. O. L. Mason of the 3rd Batt. 2nd Punjab Regt. is stationed.

Limitation of Numbers to be Investigated

The question of limitation of registration in Victoria College, which was discussed in "The Varsity" some time ago, has received action on the part of the Senate of that College. A committee has been delegated to find out how similar problems are being solved in other American and in European universities. This committee is to report at the next meeting of the Senate, and will then make any recommendations which seem feasible.

a hazard to the attacking team in the hope that it would find wide use and divert play from the more strenuous line plunging tactics, but many teams reverted to the old style of running attack this year. The result was that line play was stressed and injuries began to mount.

Mr. C. Grant Robertson, Principal of Birmingham University, in a speech which is in strong contrast to many pessimistic utterances made to-day, said: "Why should people make everyone so depressed by imagining this country is helplessly backward and being out-distanced in all her industries? In a great many ways it is very unjust to this country, and unduly unjust to other countries. We are not down and out; we have not lost brains, energy, and enterprise. We are going to maintain our position in the world, and we need not be afraid of competition, although it means hard work. We have had plenty of competition in the past, and shall have plenty in the future. I believe in my countrymen."—Birmingham Post.

Tea at Wymilwood Given by Junior Year Victoria Women

The 279 Victoria women held their first monthly tea yesterday afternoon from 4.30 till 5.00 in Wymilwood. Residence and out-of-residence girls enjoyed a social hour together to the tune of assorted biscuits and hot tea. Everyone had a fine chance to get acquainted—"I knew your face, but what's your name?" was a sure way to start the conversational ball rolling. The next tea will be sometime in the beginning of January.

 Father Piette praised Dr. Barber, Librarian of Victoria College, for his untiring courtesy and kindly aid in pursuing his studies. He further stated to "The Varsity" representative that everyone with whom he has come in contact here has received him with uniform welcome. In this regard he wishes to mention specially the authorities of St. Michael's College, where he stayed while in Toronto.

 "Gee, I didn't know they could make paper from such filthy material."
 "Sure, for the tabloids."

Boston, Mass.—The strange sight of several pieces of sweet chocolate lying on the professor's desk as he enters to greet the class in the morning may become a regular performance at the College of Business Administration at the University of Boston, if certain members of the class carry out their plans. It is said that $7.50 has been contributed to the fund at the present time. He may blame only himself for this action of the class. Achilles was lost after it was found he was mortal in his heel; this professor may expect to give up teaching through admitting he had a chocolate complex.

Bozeman, Montana.—Seniors at Montana State College this year inaugurated the tradition of wearing what are known as "Senior jackets." Judging from the number of students appearing in the new garb for seniors, the new blazers of blue felt trimmed with gold braid are proving popular.

 "Foiled!" sneers Eustace as he tackles seven men.

"Go way!" rings out Howe, shoving twelve men twenty yards down the field.

Suddenly Eustace groans and passes out. He has been chewing too much gum.

Only Howe—will he hold?

Suddenly he pounces on the ball—an idea comes to him.

He runs rapidly backwards, and makes a noise like a haggis. The Screams men think he is one of their number, and make way for him. Howe makes a touchdown—the game is won!

Note.—This is the outline. One fat boy, one Rhodes Scholar, one heroine (daughter of the dean), sundry professors, cabarets, cars, co-eds, races, etc., may be added as desired. Eustace sneers—Howe wins the little lady. Thaddelido!

Euphony:
 Come, my dear, and let us go
 Where the reeds and rushes grow,
 Let us drink the joys of May—
 Splashing onward as we say:

Oh, to paddle
 Up the Taddle
 In the twilight!

Mark, my sweet, the setting sun;
 Watch the little shadows run;
 Hear the very ripples say,
 As the towers darken grey;
 Let us paddle
 Up the Taddle
 In the moonlight!

Now, we admit freely that this is a chronological, geological and biological impossibility from certain viewpoints. Even in its better moments, the Taddle was only a No. 3 creek. Yet we know our drinks! The distinction is etymological. We do not mean a canoe Spaziergang, not by any means, but a paddle where you go in à nus pieds and look out for the w.k. crabs.

O.C.E. DECEMBER BALL IS HELD IN U.T.S. GYM

Fancy Decorations, Coloured Lights, Good Music Aids to Merriment

Coloured lights, tissue paper creations, flags, crests and strings of miniature chapeaux transformed the U.T.S. gym from its usual gymnastic bareness into a fitting background for the annual O.C.E. December ball on Friday night.

Lesson plans and observation reports were forgotten for a few hours, while the embryo teachers made merry to excellent music provided by an orchestra seated on a raised platform at one end of the gym. A novelty dance and a lucky number, or more properly speaking a lucky animal, dance, won by Dr. and Mrs. Sandford, who held the lucky donkey, added to the interest of the evening.

Supper was served during an intermission, in the cafeteria, where the habit which characterizes the usual noon-day meals in that place was pleasantly lacking.

NEW ASSOCIATION CELEBRATED BY STUDENTS AT DINNER

Society of Undergraduates of Italian Descent Formed CALLED FRATENLANZA
Professor Shaw Speaks of Machiavelli's Doctrine

The inaugural meeting for the institution of a new association into the arena of University life had its official conception at a banquet given by the members in celebration of the inauguration of an association for Italian students at the University of Toronto.

The "Fratelanza," as it is called, is what its name signifies, a brotherhood for the furthering of the social and literary activities of the undergraduates of Italian birth or extraction.

In his opening speech the chairman, M. A. Sansone, expressed himself as being grateful for the opportunity which the occasion presented for a greater friendship to be cemented between the men and their instructors.

The toast to "The King" having been proposed, Dr. A. Vance was called upon to propose the toast to the University, to which J. B. Bickersteth made the reply, welcoming the organization to Hart House on behalf of the Board of Governors.

Professor J. E. Shaw of the Department of Languages congratulated the Association on its aims to cherish the traditions of their race. Not only was this possible to do and yet to remain good Canadian citizens, but it was highly important that it should be done. In referring to the subject of patriotism, the speaker touched on Machiavelli, a man who has an undeserved reputation for putting forth a political doctrine, both cold-blooded and unscrupulous.

Remembering that Professor Santayana had said that no country is well governed unless by the dead, Professor Shaw developed the point to show great and honourable traditions were sufficient to guide a country on the road to progress. It is best to begin a new life in a new country bearing well in mind the honourable traditions and ideals of one's Fatherland, therefore it is well further to continue acquaintance with all that it best in Italian literature, art and music.

Rev. Dr. G. B. Phelan of St. Michael's College drew to the attention of the members of the association that those Italians who came to this country

Journalist of Ability Does Child Welfare Work

Charlotte Whitton, M.A., Assessor for Canada to the Child Welfare Committee of the League of Nations, gave Social Service students a new vision of the meaning of service and of community on Wednesday morning. With deft, vivid strokes the speaker sketched in the personnel of as varied a group of people as ever met around a council table. Poland, Belgium, Japan, Roumania, on through the long list she went, describing the methods used in planning for the welfare of little children all around the globe.

A journalist of ability, a woman to whom a political career would be easily possible, Miss Whitton elects to throw her abilities and energy into social service, through the work of the Child Welfare Council of Canada. The children of this country and of many others will have fairer and brighter opportunity because of the work she is doing.

ARNOLD BENNETT IS SUBJECT OF PAPER AT U.C. WOMEN'S LIT.

Is Realist But Provides Working Philosophy of Life

DISTRICT OF FIVE TOWNS

"There is a danger of calling all novelists who deal with contemporary life, realists," stated Miss Edith Martin, in her paper on Arnold Bennett, at the U.C. Women's Literary Society in the Women's Union, Tuesday evening. In dealing with the question of realism, Miss Martin pointed out there must be a distinction between genuine realism and a respectable theory of human conduct. Was realism mere photography or did such writers as Arnold Bennett provide a working philosophy of life?

The popular opinion that Bennett had no general ideas was explained by the fact that he did not attempt to make his novels serve at the same time as a narrative of events and as a philosophical dissertation. He has set forth his ideas and philosophy in such books as "Mental Efficiency" and "How to Live on Twenty-four Hours a Day."

Bennett's novel "Old Wives' Tales" was the life story of two sisters, Constance and Sophia, who hungered for life and love but quietly and proudly starved in their respectability rather than touch forbidden fruit. There was no attempt at solving any problem of human life, for the author presented his picture of the lives of these two lonely women and left it at that.

A large number of Bennett's novels centred around the district of five towns, and using these as a background he has given a clever representation of the life of the lower middle class as it was lived in this district. The "Clayhanger Trilogy" was probably Bennett's best known work, and expressed with the moving force of dramatic representation the ideas more simply exposed in "The Plain Man and His Wife." The first volume of this series portrayed the boyhood and early manhood of Edwin Clayhanger, while the second volume gave a similar picture of the girlhood of Hilda Lesways. "These Twain" completed the trio, and developed these characters further through the difficult and almost baffling process of adapting themselves to living together as man and wife.

"Riceyman's Step" was probably Bennett's greatest achievement as a pure craftsman. This was the story of a miser whose one passion was money, and through love of him his wife also became a miser. Bennett became an idealist in his attempt at depicting the love of the maid of this family for her half-idiot lover. The characters were all very real, and even though common-place and sordid were an exact copy.

Bennett seldom depicted young love, but unlike most went farther than the marriage ceremony. He showed that the most unromantic husband had hidden in his bosom a deep and sincere regard for his middle-aged wife. The author's sexual relations, however, remained too general in that they only concerned a man and the sex and not a certain man and a certain woman.

CIVILIZATION OF OLD ASSYRIA IS DISCUSSED

Third Year Give Papers at Oriental Association Meeting

MODERN IDEA INTRODUCED Difference Between Assyrians and Babylonians Result of Environment

The Civilization of Assyria was ably dealt with in two papers by members of the Third Year at the Orientals Association yesterday afternoon in Wycliffe College Reading Room. Mr. R. T. Hallock, in the first paper, spoke of the private life of the Assyrians. After describing the organization of the towns and construction of the houses, Mr. Hallock stated that the common people of that day struck a modern note when they complained that their beer was not strong enough.

The difference between the Babylonians and the Assyrians, Mr. Hallock stated, was mostly on the result of difference in environment. Despite the cruelty attributed to them, he went on to say, their treatment of slaves was of a high order.

Mr. H. K. Eward then read a paper on Assyrian religion. Mr. Eward gave an interesting account of the Assyrian deities, which he said were mostly taken from Babylon. He spoke of the liturgies and scriptures of their religion and their extensive use of incarnations. Their religion included no human sacrifice, but, like that of the Hebrews, consisted only of meat and meal offering.

VICTORIA SENIORS HOLD DINNER

Shakespearean Characters Portrayed by Members of 278

The fall revels of the Victoria graduating class were displayed in great array last night at the Pica-dilly Tea Rooms. A chicken dinner, topped off by dancing, interpretative and otherwise, filled out the evening. Cleopatra, with her adder, Sir John Falstaff, Juliet, Hamlet, Shylock and other Shakespeareans, were present. The party was chaperoned by Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Ford, Honorary Presidents of the year.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Does Liquor Control Control?

What is your opinion of the Government Liquor Control Act? Is it a success or not?

Mr. D. Rose, II Vic.: "No, because of the added impetus given to smuggling at the border."

Miss Francis Murphy, II Household Econ., U.C.: "Yes. I think it tends towards more moderation in drinking."

Mr. J. N. B. Kennedy, I Arts, U.C.: "Yes, but it could be improved by the sale of light wines and beers by the glass, especially in hotels."

Mr. Samuel de Beauregard, II, C. and F.: "Six months ago, before government control, I couldn't even buy a bottle of whisky. Now I can't either. I'm not yet twenty-one. What difference does it make?"

Mr. F. C. Foley, III, Vic.: "No. Drinking is more open and noticeable, even to the point of being obnoxious."

Mr. C. H. W. Cane, I, S.P.S.: "No, for the simple reason that too many when allowed to obtain liquor only make darn fools of themselves. It also takes money from a man's pocket to go into pockets of those who already have more than enough money."

Mr. J. R. Wilson, III, Pol. Sci.: "You can't legislate people into heaven, but you can help them. Six months is not very long to judge the L.C. Act. But I fail to see much increase in drunkenness."

LARGE PERCENTAGE OF MED STUDENTS MIGRATE TO U.S.

Dr. Routley Declares That Canada Can Absorb Her Graduate Doctors

POSSIBILITIES IN CANADA Dean Primrose in Favour of Abolishment of Council Exams

Addressing an open meeting of the Medical Society held last night in Hart House, Dr. T. C. Routley, secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, outlined much of the work which the Association is doing for the medical profession and for the improvement of national health. In discussing the problems which confront the recent graduate, Dr. Routley deplored the fact that a large percentage of doctors, soon after graduation, leave Canada and practise in the United States. In this regard, Dr. Routley declared that Canada was able to absorb all those who graduate in Medicine from her universities, and submitted figures to prove the assertion. The speaker stated that because of the tremendous possibilities of this country, the young medical man might well remain and at the same time repay the State the debt of his education.

Of great importance to medical undergraduates is the statement of Dr. Routley that at the present time negotiations are being conducted by the Canadian Medical Association which may result in the abolition of Dominion and provincial "Council" examinations. At present, graduates of the various Canadian Medical schools are required to pass these further "Council" exams before a license to practise is granted. The belief appears to be growing that such examinations are unnecessary. Dean Primrose, who presided at last night's meeting, announced that the Faculty of Medicine at this University has already gone on record as being in favor of the abolition of Council examinations for those who have passed the final year examinations. No indication as to how soon the proposed change would be effected was given by either Dr. Routley or Dean Primrose.

Last night's meeting, the first which the Medical Society has held this term, was well attended, and it was announced by T. H. Belt, president of the Society, that open meetings would be held monthly. The dates of Daffydill, Feb. 9 and 10, and of the Medical At-Home, Jan. 31, were also announced.

S.A.C. MAKES 4 DOLLAR FEE PERMANENT AT FIRST OPEN MEETING YESTERDAY

M. Stupin Performs at Hart House Concert

M. Stupin, 'cellist, former musician at the Court of the Emperor of Japan, will give a combined programme with S. Alberto Guerrero in Hart House on Sunday evening, December 11.

M. Stupin began his career in Moscow, from thence going to the East, where he travelled extensively, spending some time in Java. He was 'cellist to the Emperor of Japan at the time of the latter's death. When the Court went into mourning for a year, Mr. Stupin found it necessary to seek a new field for activity—and came to Toronto in the spring of this year, where he has since appeared with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and in a professional recital.

S. Guerrero has been a staunch friend of Hart House, and at each appearance has been greatly appreciated.

"WILL SHAKESPEARE" GIVEN BY U.C. GUILD

Clemence Dane's Famous Play Proves Splendid Dramatic Fare

JAMES KNIGHTS STARS

Last evening the Players' Guild of University College gave their second performance of Clemence Dane's famous drama, "Will Shakespeare," and in the opinion of this reviewer the presentation was one of the truly great achievements in undergraduate dramatic circles. It is the custom of the Players' Guild to attempt the seemingly impossible in the realm of drama, and in their choice of "Will Shakespeare," a poetic drama of four hours' duration, they not only lived up to old tradition, but nobly honoured it in the season's outstanding dramatic achievement. The play is one of the truly great works of the twentieth century, and it is sufficient praise to say that the players did full justice to an exacting and difficult task.

The plays opens in Stratford, where the youthful Shakespeare learns that he has been tricked by Anne Hathaway, and abandons her to go to London town with the troupe of Henslowe, a strolling player. In Act Two Shakespeare is ensnared at the Court of Elizabeth by Mary Fitton, the Dark Lady of his sonnets, who saves the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" by acting the part of the heroine. On the wave of fame and ecstasy Mary and Shakespeare begin their perilous love affair which ends in the following act with Mary abandoning the Bard for the impetuous Kit Marlowe. The third act is laid in the tavern on the Deptford Road, where Marlowe is accidentally killed in a struggle with Shakespeare, who has traced him and Mary to the Inn. Mary spurns the greatest poet of all time, and in the inspiring last act Elizabeth dismisses Mary, and sets Shakespeare to his immortal life-work, after his soul has been refined in the crucible of sorrow. The conclusion of the play rivals Shakespearean drama in its nobility as one sees the great mind of Shakespeare rising superb from suffering to the heights of poetic creation.

As Will Shakespeare, James Knights was short of perfection only in the fact that his admirable restraint, so commendable in ninety per cent. of the action, was maintained at odd moments when perhaps a trifle more vigour and passion seemed necessary. His diction was splendid, and he showed

$4,000 of $6,000 Deficit Already Paid Back to Board of Governors

TORONTONENSIS DISCUSSED

Students Show Little Interest. Attendance is Diminutive and Fluctuating

Apparently the majority of the students at the University of Toronto take little interest in the affairs of the Students' Administrative Council. At any rate, only ten of them were present at the meeting of that organization on Wednesday evening, the first open meeting which the S.A.C. has held. The attendance was not only diminutive but fluctuating. "The Varsity" reporter alone sat through the whole session, which lasted from 5 o'clock till 6:20.

The main item of business centred around the $4 S.A.C. fee, which has now been charged for two years, replacing the old $3 fee. Much discussion was aroused in trying to decide whether the newer rate should be made permanent. The existence of Torontensis was brought into the argument, and it was revealed that there was much confusion and entanglement in connection with it. As Mr. W. A. Higgins, the Secretary-Treasurer, was appointed for only six months, this spring, applications will be requested for that position through the advertising columns of "The Varsity." Several reports were presented, that of the Centenary Committee being the most important.

During the meeting it was announced that the first prize award won by Trinity College in the Centenary parade was to be awarded on Friday, December 9th, at a meeting of St. Hilda's Library Society. The Meds prize is also to be donated shortly.

Mr. W. A. Donohue, the President of the S.A.C., during the discussion on making the $4 fee permanent, pointed out that the Board of Governors had loaned the S.A.C. $5,000 two years ago to pay a large deficit on Torontensis and "The Varsity." The extra dollar is levied to pay off that debt and its interest; already some $4,000 had been returned. By rigid economies no further deficits have been incurred; the handbook has shown a small surplus.

WOMEN'S BUILDING AGAIN

Countless words probably have been written on the subject of a Women's Building. It would seem to be a mirage that beckons us ever on. However, it has recently been proved that we do not stand completely alone. The Local Council of Women have passed a resolution supporting better facilities for physical education of women at the Provincial University. They have come to realize the great need of the women students at the University of Toronto.

The facts, when faced, are rather startling. Five years ago compulsory physical training for women was introduced at the University. To-day there are two hundred and fifty-eight girls in these classes. They are from the first year at University College, Household Science, Meds, Dents and S.P.S. Victoria, Trinity and St. Michael's College women do not have to attend, nor do any women from the second year. If physical education was made compulsory for these, the enrolment would be eight hundred and two—over three times what it is at present. Besides this there are many girls from all the colleges who swim, take fencing or play games. It is estimated that the number taking part in games is about two hundred and thirty-five.

The equipment and facilities provided are indeed very meagre. The gym, which must be used for all compulsory classes, gymnastics, dancing, fencing and games, has a total floor space of sixteen hundred and fifty square feet, and of this part is not available for use. The swimming pool is small, only forty-five by twenty feet, with a depth of seven feet at the deep end. There is only one office for the instructors; the dressing rooms are not nearly adequate, and in the drying room from four to six bathing suits must be kept in one pigeon hole. It sounds impossible.

It has this year been charged that interest is not being shown in the women's sports. It has been suggested that this is due to the short season for each sport—it is also due to lack of an adequate place in which to play. It is impossible to play baseball in the Lillian Massey gym, and basketball is not a great success. Teams from the University have to rent outside gymnasiums to play Inter-faculty games. When a team from the largest college of all has to travel some three miles away to practice and play games in the basement of a church, a large turnout of players or spectators cannot be expected.

Manifestly the great need is for a Women's Building, and not one but several gymnasiums, and compulsory physical training for the women of first and second years in all the colleges—and that immediately.

WHY THE ANONYMOUS LETTER WRITER?

After withholding many letters from publication simply because of the fact that they did not bear the signature of the writer, the fact is borne more and more to mind as to the large extent with which the average human shuns public opinion. The understanding is, and has been, that in every case a letter for publication in "The Varsity" must be accompanied by the signature of the writer, although, if so desired, a pen name may be published. The signature is purely as an indication of good faith on the part of the composer of the letter and is for the information of the editor alone.

Such a ruling, as regards the validity of anonymous letters, cannot be regarded in any other light but as a distinct concession. Of course there are exceptions, such as those running in the present series of "Trial Marriage," or others of a semi-humorous or personal nature, but of those letters which criticize or which bear the honest opinion of the writer there should be no necessity of anonymity. If a man has enough faith in his own opinions to seek print, if his convictions are firm and honest, why should he refrain from signing his own name to his own communication?

It is the sneak and the bully that attacks in the dark, a man with neither convictions nor courage. Is the letter writer, attacking an idea, organization, society, or man, to be considered in any more favourable light? Not by an intelligent people, and but little attention should they honestly be expected to pay to his opinion.

It is a fact that those men who have been known as pungent letter writers to "The Varsity" in the past, and who obviously carried the courage of their convictions, did sign and did allow their own names to be printed. Such were to be admired. They, at

Most of us have outgrown the whispering stage—so why whisper through the medium of the press? Rather, now is the time to take your place in the affairs of men, and now may you first make use of your opportunity to lay worth-while facts before the public as a public man. You will find it educational, and, we wager, more worth while as a training for the years which are to come after graduation.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The University of Toronto will play host this evening to a group of America's most distinguished musicians, when the Persinger String Quartet gives its first Canadian concert in Hart House Theatre. The Persinger Quart, of Santa Barbara, formerly of the Chamber Music Society of San Francisco, was founded in 1916 by the late Elias Hecht of San Francisco. Mr. Hecht, a flautist and an authority of distinction in the chamber music world, gathered a group of distinguished and famous artists under the musical direction of Louis Persinger, a violinist who had made a name for himself both in Europe and America. Other members of the Persinger ensemble are: Louis Ford, second violin; Nathan Firestone, viola; and Walter Ferner, violoncello.

In the last eight years the Persingers have enjoyed an unbroken record of artistic successes. Their performance, which has been acclaimed as well-nigh flawless, is imbued with surprising vitality, and warmth and beauty of tonal coloring. Louis Persinger is a master programme-builder as well, and for to-night's concert will present an evening of chamber music with a distinctly modern flair. The Quartet will play, for the first time in Canada, a quartet written by Dr. Howard Hanson, Director of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester. In addition to the Hanson Quartet, the second number will be by Debussy, while the classical portion of the programme will be represented by Mozart's Quartet in B Flat.

DENTAL AND VICTORIA INTER-YEAR ASSAULTS TO-NIGHT AT 7.30

SPEAKING OF SPORT

In Tuesday's S.P.A. semi-final there were few fans ready to concede Frank Sullivan's squad much of a chance. But what happened? They went right into the game with what some people would like to call the "Varsity spirit," and not only extended the highly-touted Marlboros for a 4-2 decision but outplayed the winners for two periods.

We hear a lot of criticism of how slow the pro hockey games are. Well, the Juniors never slow anything up unless they are worn right out, and that is apparently what happened at the Arena the other day. Still you can't expect full season form in the first two or three games of the year, and by the time they are handing out cups and such things, Varsity should be fairly close to the platform.

The Faculty inter-year assaults are away. Last night in the Upper Gym S.P.S. conducted their annual, and as usual it was a real peppy one, with good bouts in all departments. Tonight Victoria and Dents stage their assaults. There has been a bit of misunderstanding in dates, and as this is Victoria's premiere showing, there is not any too large an entry list. Therefore the double-header tonight—there is plenty of room for both. At Vic there are few wrestlers and boxers of known ability, but Burwash Hall has some husky inhabitants, and if earnest effort is any indication of interesting bouts theirs should prove interesting.

A change from the usual order of things is being permitted this year, and Meds and U.C. are having their affairs in the early part of next week, the same week of the Junior Assault. Messrs. Barton, Martin and Black have a busy time ahead of them with all these assaults to look after, and incidentally they will be on the lookout for material for the Intercollegiate team. Varsity has never yet lacked an entry in every event in the Intercollegiate assault, but that good rule still holds good—"there is always room at the top."

It seems as though the men at Varsity do not have much fear of practicing in advance. The Intercollegiate hockey team is hard at it with no prospects of league games for nearly a month yet. Likewise the basketball squad is not losing much time on cancelled practices. Maybe the Christmas tour of the States is an added incentive to both these outfits, and who wouldn't practice with such a carrot dangling in front to urge you on?

And such practicing is not confined to Intercollegiate sports, for practically every team contending for the Sifton Cup is already trying to get the hop on opponents by huddling around the basket and sneaking in the odd shot. Reports indicate that the Jennings Cup aspirants are as yet not practicing.

McGill got away for a good season in the basketball series, as the Daily says when—"Fred Weldon of Science '28 was elected captain of the McGill Senior basketball squad last night by the team and will therefore lead the Red and White colours during the coming cage season. Fred was one of the mainstays of the Intermediates during the 1926 season, and when transferred to the Seniors last year he played regular centre with great success. His election will undoubtedly be very popular both with all the men and also with the student body at large."

Jr. U.C. Defeats St. Mike's in Basketball 26-16

Jr. U.C. women defeated St. Mike's 26-16 in a basketball fixture at the McGill Street Y yesterday. The game was fast and rough in spots. The play was fairly even, but St. Mike's girls were unlucky in their shots. The U.C. forwards turned in good games, and Marion Henderson played well on the defence.

ed that he possessed the ability to convey his own studied conception of a great figure to an enthralled audience. Second place in merit must be given to Miss Isobel Godfrey, who made Elizabeth a truly regal figure of queenly dignity and power. Her last scene with Shakespeare was a memorable one in the annals of University dramatics. As Mary Fitton, Marjorie Eoll was perhaps too arch and coquettish in her first scene, but she was perfect in her delineation of the fascinating wanton in the Theatre and Tavern episodes. As Henslowe, the actor, Earl Tauman gave the proper gusto and courtly verve to the character of the old player. Miss Margaret Gordon was excellent in the very difficult first act as Anne Hathaway, playing with all necessary force and passion the role of Shakespeare's abandoned and heart-broken wife. As Kit Marlowe, Hamilton Miller was very good, yet he might have put more dash and colour in the character of Marlowe in the earlier scenes. Mention must be made of an exquisite bit of acting by Margaret Barton as the Child Player in Act One, and in closing, one must compliment Miss Isobel Brown for the part of Mrs. Hathaway, Mr. Raymond Card for his direction of the play, and the three tavern revellers for their general good spirits. All in all, it was a great achievement on the part of the Players' Guild of University College.

S.A.C. MAKES FOUR DOLLAR FEE PERMANENT

The Board of Governors have suggested a sinking fund in order to cover Torontonensis costs. At present a committee from the S.A.C. is considering ways and means of supporting the year book. Mr. Christie pointed out at the meeting that the first three years should contribute towards Torontonensis $1.25, $2.50 and $3.75 respectively, but only $1.25 of the old $3 fee be allotted to that publication. Meds and Dental students with six and five year courses pay more than their share of the costs. These anomalies are all being straightened out.

Among the suggestions brought up were that Torontonensis be done away with; that the fourth year students pay for it; or that it be sold to interested students. These ideas were all shelved and the motion that the $4 fee be made permanent carried by 9 to 5.

AGE OF ELIZABETH FULLY REPRESENTED IN THE FAERY QUEEN

Professor Macdonald Discusses Spenser in Lecture of University College Series

RANGE OF FEELING

Spenser a Master Who Gave Direction to English Poetry

"The death of Chaucer 1400 marks the beginning of a well-nigh barren period in English poetry," said Prof. Macdonald at his lecture in West Hall Thursday afternoon.

Spenser, born in 1852, was six years old when Elizabeth came to the throne, thus living in that great period so filled with activities, intellectual and political. It was the period when English was first beginning to be favoured in preference to Latin, but when Spenser went up to Cambridge there could not be said to be any English literature. Even the new Renaissance critics found nothing to praise.

Caxton did as much as anyone to fix the form of the language that Spenser used. The influence of his schoolmaster Mulcaster, and the influence of the Plethiad which advocated the use of the vernacular induced Spenser to use English as his medium. There is something almost academic in his method of proving his mother tongue a worthy vehicle for his genius. The Shepherd's Calendar marks his formal appearance before the critical public—something like a manifesto of a new school. The fitness of English for the expression of a variety of effects is demonstrated by the number of different metres used—some 13. But Spenser conceived the function of the poet to be more than that of a mere clever craftsman. He believed the poet should convey a message as critic of church and state, and a leader of his fellow men.

In 1580 Spenser received an appointment in Ireland, where he lived for the balance of his life. Here he wrote the Faery Queen, his masterpiece, and one of the glories of English literature. Only six books and a fragment of a seventh were completed of the twelve books Spenser planned. Each book narrates the adventures of a knight.

CONDITION OF CHINA DECLARED CHAOTIC

Mr. Grosart Opens Discussion at Meeting of Foreign Events Club

VARIED VIEWS PRESENTED

Present conditions in China was the subject under discussion at the December meeting of the Foreign Events Club. Mr. Grosart opened the subject by a comprehensive sketch of China's foreign relations from the beginning, and leading up to the civil wars of the past few years. The speaker at least instilled the impression that China's internal affairs were in a very chaotic state. Dr. Lindsay took up the subject and gave a description of the present state of affairs from the point of view of a professor in a Chinese University. Mr. Maston, who was a member of the volunteer machine-gun company that took part in the defence of Shanghai during the recent trouble there, described the organization and system of the defence.

Mr. Clinton emphasized the improvements due to the presence of the foreigners in China, and maintained that the present attitude of the Chinese was really due to envy. Mr. Davidson spoke of the influence of the European-trained Chinese as the real cause of the present revolution, whose influence as far as education went.

PAPER IS PRESENTED BY PROF. McCALLUM

Philosophical Society Meets for Discussion at Wymilwood

SENSE AND THOUGHT

The first paper presented before the reorganized Philosophical Society was a discussion of Sense and Thought. The meeting was held at Wymilwood. Miss Morrison, vice-president, acted as chairman in the absence of Mr. Cragg, the newly elected president. It was decided to let the programme committee draw up the rest of the programme for the year. In order to keep the club limited to a convenient group for discussion the members of the society were to be restricted to fourth year honour students, graduates and members of the staff. In addition several students of the third year were nominated as associate members, also a representative was named from fourth year pass. Miss Lillian McBride was the secretary-treasurer. The time was placed at 8.15, and members urged to be punctual. The first paper of the new year was to be on "Critical Realism and Psychology" and would be taken by Mr. D. J. Wilson.

In his paper on Sense and Thought Prof. MacCallum pointed out that the distinction between sense and thought was to a great degree unreal. The unsatisfactory nature of dualism was evident from the fact that some rationalists and empiricists resolve them into either one or the other. They try to find a common ground in synthetic totalities. Functional wholes are incapable of analysis, but the functional whole may be a structural unit.

Perception, said Mr. MacCallum, is always of a whole pattern. This pattern is spacial temporal. Perception becomes memory.

Thought was struggle against differences. Advance in thought was establishing a series. To think was to relate. Perception became thought speeded up, and thought an elaboration of sensations registered by the nervous system.

Coffee and cake brought the evening to a pleasant close.

OPINION IS DIVIDED AS TO ADVISABILITY OF GUEST SPEAKERS

Influence of Distinguished Visitors on Decisions at Student Debates Under Discussion

VARIOUS SUGGESTIONS

Custom at St. Michael's to Discuss Remarks of Prominent Guests

A considerable controversy has been current about the campus during the past week or so regarding the advisability of distinguished speakers taking part in student debates. Interest has centred especially about the recent Hart House debate in which the Honorable G. H. Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, was invited to take part in the discussion. It is alleged by some that a powerful speaker, carrying with him years of experience, and holding the responsibility of high office in the State, necessarily influences the vote of the House, both as a result of superior oratorical persuasion and also because of the respect which is considered due to one who has had considerable practical experience and whose opinion would probably be of greater weight than that of the average student.

Moreover, they insist, when such a speaker is slated to speak at the very conclusion of the debate, there is no opportunity left for contradiction and discussion, on the part of the student members of the House, of the statements made in the address. Hence the vote, following immediately after, will be unduly influenced.

Opinion, however, is divided among the student body. Many believe that the system, as it is at present, is quite suitable, basing their arguments upon the ground that the guest speaker should be accorded the due respect of being given the opportunity of replying to all statements and attacks made during the course of the debate. They further affirm that the decision of the average well-balanced student is not influenced by the participation of a prominent man in the debate.

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Miss Edith Martin Outlines
Meetings to be Held Next Term

A very urgent if rather hurried business meeting was held by the Women's Press Club at the University College Women's Union on Thursday, Dec. 8. The meeting was primarily called to elect new officers since the president had resigned from office. After a delightful half hour over tea the elections were held. Miss Edith Martin became president, Miss Mary Davey secretary-treasurer, and Miss Mary Kempel undergraduate councilor.

Miss Martin then took the chair and briefly outlined the work of the coming meetings. Several speakers will be asked to visit the club and give lectures on their own specific literary fields. Miss MacDonald of Eaton's, Henry Button of the Bents Publishing Co., Miss Delamore of The Globe, Lucy Doyle ("Cornelia"), Miss Ethel Chapman and several others were suggested as probable. There would also be several meetings devoted as usual to the reading and criticising of the members' own literary endeavours in poetry, short-story and advertisement writing. Since the president and many of the members wished to attend the quartet concert, the meeting adjourned earlier than usual.

TWO ONTARIO RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS ARE AWARDED TO U. OF T. STUDENTS

Christmas Issue

The last issue of "The Varsity" for this term will be published on Monday, December 19. The issue will be a special Christmas number and will be devoted to the contributions of members of the University. Prizes, of five dollars each, will be awarded for the best contributions in verse and prose. No restriction is made regarding choice of subject, but it is hoped that a considerable proportion of the contributions will deal with matters connected with the Christmas season. Any undergraduate in the University is eligible for the prize.

W. L. Smith, B.A., and M. St. A. Woodside Are Announced Recipients of High Honour

TRINITY AND U.C.

Both Have Brilliant Records in Scholastic and Student Activities

Moffatt St. Andrew Woodside and William Lyndon Smith, both of the University of Toronto, have been chosen as the Rhodes scholars from Ontario, according to an announcement made last night to "The Varsity" by D. M. Michener, of the committee in charge.

M. St. A. Woodside is in the fourth year of the course in Classics at University College, and W. L. Smith, B.A., of Trinity College, is a graduate student at the University. At present Mr. Smith is visiting the University of Minnesota as a member of the Toronto debating team.

Mr. Woodside's home is in Winnipeg, and during the year he is a resident of Knox College. For three years he has taken first-class honours in Classics, ranking first in the last two years. An accomplished pianist and organist, he has taken a great interest in music in the University. He was Music Editor of "The Varsity" last year, and is now serving his second term as a member of the Music Committee of Hart House. In addition, Mr. Woodside is an officer of the C.O.T.C. and is considered one of the crack shots of the local corps. In University College societies he has taken a prominent part, particularly in the Players' Guild and the Classical Association, of which he is president. He has played interfaculty basketball and rugby for Knox and U.C.

W. L. Smith, who graduated from Trinity College last spring at the head of his course in Philosophy, English and History, was awarded the Moss Scholarship as the best all-round student in the senior year. He has taken a keen interest in Trinity athletics, and has been an enthusiastic member of the Trinity College soccer team. His ability as an executive and a journalist has been shown in his work on the "Trinity University Review" and in the Student Christian Movement, of which he is this year's president.

But Mr. Smith has excelled particularly as a debater in the Trinity Literary Institute and in the Hart House Debating Union. In the fall of 1925 he spoke with the late Maurice Cody against the policies of the King government, in Hart House. He spoke against the same government again this fall in Hart House. He spoke in the Hart House debate of 1926 in which the Imperial debaters joined, and supported the Ferguson proposals for government control in another Hart House debate last year. He was a member of the University of Toronto team which lost to McGill in 1926 and of the team which proved victorious over the Cambridge visitors last year. This year he was chosen to go to Minnesota to represent this University in returning the visit here last year of the Minnesota men. Mr. Smith claims Sandwich, Ontario, as his home town.

Athletic At-Home

Dancing at the Athletic At-Home will commence to-night at 8.30 sharp. Entrance will be by the south-west door of Hart House only. Dancing until 2 p.m.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Are Freshmen Too Young?

"Do you believe that the freshman of to-day is unduly immature and that the age limit should be raised to 20 years for those entering University?"

F. Campbell Rutherford, II, S.P.S.: "By all means steps should be taken to raise the average age of those attending University. The brawny world-wise Varsity man of yesterday has been replaced by the downy-cheeked child prodigy so evident on the campus, who may be clever, but on graduation lacks the initiative and experience necessary to the successful man."

J. C. Kovach, I, M. and P., U.C.: "The freshman of to-day with a few exceptions is not too brainy and yet not unduly immature. The age limit should not be raised, for it would cause a break in the education of many a youth at that age at which systematic training of the mind is essential."

Wallace Graham, V, Dents: "Yes. The child of less than 20 years cannot appreciate or imbibe the knowledge at his disposal and is totally unable to cope with man-eating co-eds."

Charlie G. Boyd, II, Pass, U.C.: "I do not. If the age limit were raised to 20 years what would we do without our tender, sweet, innocent, cute little 'Flowers of the Campus,' the Freshmen? Why have unruly and mature Frosh of 20 years?"

E. Stevens, VI, Mede: "No. If the child has shown the precocity necessary to have reached the University before 20 years of age he should by all means be allowed to continue to drink at the fount of knowledge and should be encouraged to come closer to its source."

Leslie E. Wismer, I, M. and P., Vic.: "No. Should such conditions exist the University would slowly degenerate to the ancient and useless study of the Classics which as far as it aids the progress of the affairs of the world is time absolutely wasted."

COLLEGE CYNICISM

"Much learning hath made thee mad." This popular quotation has been in vogue for a great many centuries, and is of time applied to the University trained student, who attempts to seek and to construct life after the course laid down in his study years. One form of madness that is often attributed to the University trained mind is that a Cynicism. Unfortunately the meaning of Cynicism has undergone much change from the time of the Cynic philosophers of ancient Greece. They would hardly co-relate their own noble thought with the shallow and superficial thinking that appears under that name to-day.

Unfortunately the term cynicism is not unfounded among University students. There is a certain type who constantly, either through their own ignorance of the true facts of life, through the desire to pose before the public as the highest level of intelligencia, or through a disappointment in some small love affair, make a practice of thinking, talking and acting in terms of Cynicism.

To be as kind as possible to these people we must say that they are ignorant of the truest and most far reaching facts of life. They have regarded it in some small narrow channel, or else have lumped it together so as to miss the exquisiteness of detail.

Often in general conversation some so-called, and often self-styled Cynic, utters ponderous statements about the futility of the worth-while. The Philosopher, the Theologian, the Poet fall under their displeasure. Nor are the sciences safe from their attack. The Doctor attends to the patient only out of the love for money; the Politician enters parliament merely for the honours, and perhaps more worldly things, to be gained.

Happily the University as a whole does not lean towards this shallow philosophy. The great mass of the students show a brighter and deeper attitude toward life. The presence on the campus of the various organizations, all of which discuss their particular questions with a regard toward future development, the attitude of the student toward the University as a whole, both point away from Cynicism. Moreover, the attitude of the student toward national and world-wide affairs, as exemplified in the Hart House debates, and the prominence of Varsity graduates in after-University days, shows clearly that we, as a University, cannot be accused of the curse of Cynicism.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The fact that the Rhodes Scholarship has been awarded to two Toronto men is a distinct honour to this University as well as a personal tribute to the recipients of this award. That Lyndon Smith and M. S. Woodside receive the heartiest congratulations not only of ourselves but of the entire University and the Toronto public generally we feel certain. Both men have set high standards in academic work throughout their courses here, and we are certain that they will carry on the traditional representation of the Rhodes man.

It has been pointed out that some exception has been taken by the O.T. students to the feature article on them appearing in Tuesday's issue of "The Varsity." The sentence to which the exception was taken should have read: "It is rumoured that on failure to land a job after graduation the O.T. co-eds will supply Woolworth's with jewellery." The idea that they themselves were to fill positions there is a pure misconception.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen

Two orange pens, a green pen, a black pencil, a gold-pencil and a brown leather purse with some money in it are at present residing at the U.C. Registrar's Office waiting for their owners to claim them.

"So often students come in and ask if some article has been turned in, but they do not come back and ask again a few days later, when quite possibly the finder has had time to bring it here." "The Varsity" was informed. "Several days ago a girl came in and inquired for a gold pencil, a keepsake, which she had lost. We had not seen anything of one and she departed without leaving her name. The next day a gold pencil was turned in and the girl has never come back to inquire."

"Losers should persist in their search for their valuables—and we would be glad if the owners of the articles mentioned would come and claim them."

Persinger String Quartet

The third of the Hart House Theatre String Quartet Series was given last evening by the Persinger String Quartet of Santa Barbara, appearing for the first time on the Canadian concert platform. Their programme was distinctly modern in character, and perhaps for that reason was not as wholly satisfying as the splendid Haydn-Mannes-Mozart selections of the Flonzaley Quartet. The playing of the Persinger artists was, however, imbued with warmth, vitality and beauty of tonal coloring.

Their first number, Mozart's Quartet in B Flat Major, was by long odds the most enjoyable part of the programme. The first movement, allegro vivace assai, was typical Mozart, with its fanciful and graceful passages of sprightly nature. The first violin, Louis Persinger, brought out with finesse and delicacy the gay melody of the movement. The second part, menuetto, possessed the lightness of the preceding movement, but at times there was a deeper mellowness to the menuetto than one might have expected. The third movement, adagio, was the purest of solemn tonal beauty whose slow lovely opening quickened imperceptibly with the cello sounding its deeper sustaining voice as an accompaniment for the ineffable sweetness of the first violin carrying the rich perfect melody. Of the entire concert this movement was by far the most appealing, and one felt so the absence of its pure classical beauty in the amazing number that followed.

The second part of the programme provided a tremendous and not entirely pleasing contrast with the first. Dr. Howard Hanson, its composer, is one of the foremost figures in American music. He is at present director of the Eastman School in Rochester, and his quartet played last evening was written in Rome while he was studying there after gaining the Prix de Rome. This quartet was first given at Washington in 1925. There is no division into movements in it, but certainly this is the least modern feature of this ultra-modern chef-d'œuvre. Lovers of the recent must not be dismayed if this reviewer confesses that certain passages possessed all the variety of keening at an Irish wake, prolonged whistlings on New Year's Eve, and the potent thunder of the departure of the Twentieth Century Limited; at other times it was mere sound and fury signifying chaos. The viola introduces the theme, in its beginning reminiscent of "Danny Boy," evolving slowly into a sombre elegiac of swelling woe. The strident cello aided the wailing crescendo of grief voiced by the other strings. After the really poignant middle passage, the opening theme is repeated with its sustained note of pathos. The second movement, as we grasped it, began with a sort of wild barbaric note heightened with modern squeals and more dynamics. Happily it soon changed into a deep melodious passage of Scandinavian melancholy. The latter part of the quartet degenerated into a mere Bacchanalian orgy of passionate sound with a wild demon-dance leaping forth at intervals in astonishing discord. It was surprising to hear a truly beautiful passage of sombre strain begun without the first violin follow the previous din. A beautiful waltz-like movement came just before the abrupt and unexpected conclusion.

Debussy's Quartet in G Minor was a return to craftsmanship, pure music, and the true sanity of modernity. At times Debussy may be difficult to comprehend, but after Dr. Hanson's astonishing gyrations, he seemed almost classic and pastoral. The first movement was animated, and strong in form; the second possessed the marked pizzicato rhythm of dance developed into a weird fantastic crescendo, but the third rivalled in depth and beauty of tone the adagio of Mozart. The title of the last movement, "très modéré, très mouvementé et avec passion," perfectly describes (Continued on page 4)

For a moment we felt that good old Dee had forever relieved us of the Cat's whiskers, but three consecutive nights of meowing melodiously were enough for him, and so here we are back again, compelled, nay, delighted, to take up the cudgel.

Recently our circle sees Valiant old Diogenes Asking questions right and wrong, Themes of woman, wine and song. What of one's fair moral carriage In companionable marriage? What does Government Control Do to dry the droughty soul? If he asks: "Does poetry Give a wage to you or me? Does it shower power and pelf?" I shall answer: "Be yourself!"

THOSE WHO DECLARE MARRIAGE A FAILURE

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

What is the meaning of all this talk about the failure of modern marriage? Do statistics prove that marriages at the present time in Canada are failures? I do not think they do. The man who says modern marriages are futile points to the tremendous number of divorces obtained in the United States each year. But because such a condition exists within the borders of our southern neighbour does not necessarily mean that Canada is in the same state of social confusion. It may quite readily be admitted that our American cousins have shown a remarkable mania for variety in recent years and an insatiable thirst in seeking for the temperament that is not "incompatible," but I do not observe that Canadian life even approaches this. Canadians are more sensible and less inclined to chase flitting shadows and passing fancies.

I think you will find that there are two classes of people who declare that modern marriage is a failure: (1) Those gentlemen who are themselves as yet unmarried and to whom a "trial marriage" looks rather tempting.

(2) Those men and women who have already made a failure and mess of a matrimonial adventure. These people quite naturally have a pessimistic view of married life.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The announcement to-day of the awards of the Rhodes scholarships for the present year brings us once more face to face with the same old question that has been arousing interest for several years. This year both of the Ontario scholarships went to the University of Toronto. In this regard we can make no complaint, and the honour is one of which the University as a whole may well be proud. But the point is that of late years it has been the exception rather than the rule that a Rhodes man has been one who was entitled to wear the first colours of the University. It is not claimed that an athletic record of the first class should carry more weight than high academic honours, but, on the other hand, academic excellence should not be the only factor considered in choosing a representative. The Rhodes scholar represents not his faculty, or his University, but the Province as a whole. In fact he is a representative of Canada. Is it not fitting that he should be one who is capable of at least making a creditable showing in one line of athletic endeavour? There are several men at the University of Toronto who beside having enviable academic records are ranked among the leaders in the realm of sport. Should not these men receive some consideration?

The Junior hockey season opens next Thursday at the Arena. Varsity gave the other entries a real surprise in the S.P.A. series, and it would occasion no surprise if they continued to upset the dope in the regular season. They have a smart team, and Marlboros, the favourites, will be kept stepping all through the season.

The schedules for the Intermediates and the Seniors will be drawn up this week. The Intermediate schedule will be arranged this afternoon, and the Senior schedule will be drawn up at the meeting of the O.H.A. executive on Saturday. There will be a strong Senior group this year, composed of five teams—Marlboros, Kitchener, Peterboro, Preston and Varsity. Peterboro was supposed to be out of the Senior series this year after several of their players joined the pro ranks, but the last reports from the Lift Lock City were to the effect that the Petes would again exercise their franchise in the Senior group.

Kitchener are reported to be strong as ever this year, while there is no doubt of the class of the Marlboro outfit. The Dukes showed a flashy brand of hockey in the first S.P.A. game against the Grads, and at that they did not have a full team out.

VIC. WOMEN ORGANIZE FOR SWIMMING CONTESTS

Competent Instructors Will Assist All Interested in Swimming

All those Vic. women enthusiastic about swimming met in Annesley Hall Common Room yesterday noon to organize for swimming. The Vic. meet is scheduled for January, with the Interfaculty meet soon after, so that leaves just a few weeks for the girls to get into training. Marj. Horwood, this year's curator, outlined the types of events usually run off at the meet in order to give prospective candidates an idea of what would be required of them. She also mentioned the inter-year trophy and the individual cup given to the year and the individual running up the greatest number of points at the meet each year. Regular practice—even half an hour at the end of the day's work—was stressed as absolutely necessary if anything was to be achieved.

The girls were given slips on which they were to write down the days and hours most convenient for them to go swimming. In this way the curator can make out a satisfactory schedule. The suggestion was made that inter-year teams be organized, just as in basketball and baseball, with a captain at the head of each, thus giving everyone interested a chance to take some active part in swimming.

With such instructors as Mr. Cochran and Miss Cochrane, and the additional advice and help of certain of the senior girl swimmers, Vic. women

U.C. SENIORS TAKE GROUP BY BEATING VIC. JUNIORS

Qualify to Enter Final of Girls' Basketball Schedule Next Week

One of the most important games in the girls' basketball schedule was played on Tuesday night at the U.T.S. gym at 8 o'clock, when U.C. Senior team won from Vic. Juniors by a score of 29-21. This victory makes U.C. Seniors the winners of their group, and if Vic. Juniors had won they would have tied with the U.C. Senior team for first place in their group.

Vic. Senior team is the winner of the other group, and the championship game will be played next week.

On the U.C. team the defence was strong, and Emma Weir played the best all-round game, although Connie Smith put in the most shots. The winners showed that as a team they had a good deal of experience and several old players to keep them steady at crucial moments.

Vic. Juniors played a fast short passing game with good team work. Mary Parks scored eleven points on free shots, which was rather a record. It was difficult to pick out individual stars, but Eleanor Taylor and Norma Bateman on the Vic. defence were rather outstanding. Mrs. Clifford Marr acted as umpire.

should certainly make a good showing, both at their own meet and at the Interfaculty meet which follows soon after.

SOPHS WIN VICTORY IN DENTS' ASSAULT

Feature Event of the Evening Provided by Campbell and Hudson

AMUSEMENT PROVIDED

The finals of the annual Dental Assault-at-arms were held last evening in the Upper Gym at Hart House, and the second year succeeded in obtaining a decided margin over all other years. The preliminaries had been run off in the afternoon, so consequently only the best ones were left. As is usual at these inter-year assaults, there were few outstanding examples of any particular skill, but all the participants displayed plenty of courage and ambition. Griffith, the former lightweight champion of the British Navy, put on an amusing exhibition bout with Wally Graham. The champion sent the crowd into roars of laughter by allowing Graham to hit him on the jaw almost at will and seeming to take no notice of it whatever. Whitaker and Warren were very closely matched, and the result of this bout was in doubt until the referee had declared the winner. Perhaps the closest scrap of the evening, however, was that between Horwitz and Brohman. Time after time one fighter would pile up a lead only to see his opponent launch an attack that offset it and obtained a margin for himself. Finally after a great deal of careful thought on the part of the judge and referee the decision was awarded to Horwitz.

Wrestling is not nearly as spectacular to the untutored eye as the fistic art, but these encounters were far from lacking in interest. Probably the best bout of the evening was that between Campbell and Hudson. These two men are both competing for a place on the Intercollegiate team, and so there was added excitement. Campbell was finally awarded the decision.

Plans for Season Drawn Up at Meeting of B.W. & F. Club

In an executive meeting of the B. W. and F. Club yesterday, at which President Don Carrick presided, tentative plans were drawn up for the current season. Prospective trips to the States and Guelph were discussed, as were tournaments with city teams. Every effort is to be made to have the men in good condition for the Interfaculty Assault on 7th and 8th of February and the Intercollegiate Assault later in the month. Some routine business was transacted before adjournment.

MUCH ABILITY SHOWN BY VIC. ASSAULTERS

Two Knock-outs Provide Thrills When Sophs Win First Place

THEOLOGS ARE SECOND

At the first inter-year assault-at-arms in the history of Victoria College, the Sophomores took first place with 31 points, and the Theologs second with 23. The other years were as well divided, Juniors 17, Frosh 14, while the mighty Seniors trailed with a lonely "trey." Though Vic. supporters were not noticeable in the Upper Gym last night, over thirty men participated in this premiere assault, and it is to be hoped that this may be termed the "first annual assault."

Though scientific wrestling and boxing was not always in evidence, the bouts on the cards proved to the liking of the fans, and where the one ingredient was missing, the willingness to mix it provided thrills enough, including a couple of K.O.'s. The wrestlers gave some fair exhibitions, Jack Scott stepping out of his class to give Wilson a good battle.

Perhaps the gamiest exhibition of the evening was that of Lou Sutton. He fought three men in order to get the 158 title. His first with Al. Young was a real slug feast, both being hardly able to raise an arm at the end of the third round. It looked like a close decision, but Lou had a slight margin. Then after a rest he disposed of McCulloch in a boxing match while for the finals Sutton received a close decision over McVittie. Any man who takes on three others of an evening deserves to win. Cox and McMillan also put on a good fight.

The results:	PRELIMINARY BOXING

the character of the close.
All in all, it was a very stimulating programme, and one more artistic achievement on the part of the distinguished musicians of the Persinger Quartet, but Dr. Hanson, it must be confessed, convinced us finally of the incontestable merit of classic form in music when compared with the subtle boisterousness of modern methods.

Inter-year Baseball Schedule
Has Good Start at Vic.

Inter-year games make an important contribution to women's sport at college, because an increasing number of players have an opportunity to develop their skill and add to their pleasure in sport. The interfaculty baseball is over, and this week Vic. has made a good start at the inter-year baseball schedule.

On Wednesday afternoon in Vic. gym 1st and 2nd year played a peppy game from 5 to 6 o'clock. The teams were evenly matched, and the score was 11-7 in favour of the Sophs. There were a few wild plays, but on the whole a good brand of ball was displayed. Second year gained five runs in the first innings and kept the lead, although the Freshettes also piled up five runs in the last innings.

Mr. I. D. Cook umpired.
Line-ups were as follows:
1st Year: A. Tilley, F. Cameron, A. Chorolsky, D. Quance, E. Sedgwick, B. MacQuarrie, K. Carscallen, D. Darling, K. Jordan.
2nd Year: N. Bateman, M. Jarrit, I. Cowie, M. Lindsay, E. Craw, M. Snider, S. Peacock, B. Peer, A. Graham.

FOSTER FELLOWSHIP

Summer School in French
Offers Unique Advantages for Study

Mr. A. B. Fennell, B.A., Assistant Registrar of the University of Toronto, is the honorary Toronto correspondent of the Overseas Education League, whose aim is to foster the idea of fellowship and unity in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The Overseas Education League is now busy organizing its fifth annual visit of University undergraduates to Europe, and in doing this it seeks in particular to serve the dual purpose of introducing members of the party to University life in Great Britain and France, and to provide a travel programme of a general nature which should mean much to the college student. In general, the object of the League itself is to assist those engaged in education to interpret its purpose in the broader terms of human fellowship and understanding. It seeks to emphasize the significance attaching to citizenship in the British Commonwealth of Nations. Less directly does the League endeavour, in some small measure, to interpret Britain and France, the respective mother countries of the two great branches of the Canadian people, and to develop a consciousness of the international role of education as a means to peace among the nations.

A somewhat similar tour is being arranged for Dominion teachers for the summer of 1928. This tour, in which teachers from Canada, Newfoundland, Australia and New Zealand will participate, will include in its itinerary Great Britain, France and Italy. Thorough-going arrangements have been made to assure that the visit will be one which will include the main points of interest along the route.

Owing to the great success of the Summer School in French, organized by the Overseas Education League, in Paris, during the summer of 1927, arrangements have been made to continue the School during the summer of 1928, for which purpose the entire accommodation of the Lycee Victor Duruy, Boulevard des Invalides, has again been placed at the disposal of the Overseas Education League by the French Ministry of Education.

The general object of this Summer School is to provide facilities for students and teachers to improve their knowledge of the French language in an atmosphere which is wholly French, and at the same time afford special opportunities to become personally acquainted with the cultural life of Paris and of France in general.

A staff of experienced French teachers will be in charge of all organized classes, supplemented by a number of ladies intimately acquainted with the social and educational life of France, who arrange for visits to places of interest, and generally provide a recreational programme wholly French in character, atmosphere and language.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME
Apparently the powers-that-be on the Keith-Albee vaudeville circuit have really turned over a new leaf—or rather a new bill. We have been expecting ever since we saw a really good show there, a month ago, that it must sooner or later fall back into its old level of from fair to intermediate trash. But still the management keeps up the excellence of the bill. This week is thoroughly good throughout.

The movie is "Very Confidential," starring Madge Bellamy. As a salesgirl in a sports store she falls in love with the athletic and rich son of the leader of the social set at Clear Lake—Roger Allan. She goes to this fashionable resort—"clear" because it takes a clear million to get it—assuming the name of a famous sports-woman. Complications result, but she gets her man after motor boat races, rescues, burglar capturing, and the last thrilling auto race down the mountain. The feature is unusually good.

The Pathe News Review shows the Dominion rugby finals between Balmby Beach and the Tigers. The Collegians are back—unfortunately also in an auto race. If we are not mistaken, it is over the same course as the feature race previously shown.

Julian Eltinge features the vaudeville in feminine impersonations. Every mannerism and fad is minutely copied. Oliver and Crangle open the bill very creditably in "Aristocrats of Variety." In Ross Wyse Jr. we have discovered the only perfect rugby physique—no spine, cast-iron head and feet that know their stuff. His father in the same bill is "not slipping" by any means. Harris and Pepper have some good jokes—we discovered why girls have clocks on their stockings.

enjoy as much happiness in their marriage relationship as their forbears did in past generations. If married life is a failure in this country at the present time, then it has always been a failure. If permanent marriage is contrary to human instinct then it has been a false convention from the start. And Christianity has been wrong!

Is modern marriage a failure? Certainly not in this country. Those who think that it is have the privilege of going to Russia at any time. As for me, I am content to live in Canada under present conditions and I am mighty proud of being a citizen of God's country.

MARRIAGE ORDAINED BY GOD

Editor, "The Varsity."
Dear Sir:
Before the little controversy concerning trial marriage becomes a thing of the past, I would like to reply to a remark of "Bad Boy."

He says that God has no more to do with marriage than He has with how many arrowroot biscuits to feed the baby.

The religious aspect of the question of marriage is the only one that should be considered. God has everything to do with marriage.

If our bad friend is not too far advanced in his extraordinary independence of his Maker he will heed Holy Scripture.

"Have you not read," says our Saviour, "that He who made man in the beginning made them male and female? And he said, for this cause shall a man leave father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh." Matt. xix, 4-6.

Our Lord recalls marriage to its primitive institution as it was ordained by Almighty God (Gen. ii).

And there is indeed scarcely a moral precept more strongly enforced in the Gospel than the indissoluble character of marriage validly contracted.

One does not mind questions that give room for wit and discussion in "The Varsity," but the question of marriage is too serious a problem today to be treated lightly. "Bad Boy's" very irrelevant remarks should not go uncorrected.

He is precocious though naughty, this child. I would like him to assimilate some history and realize what Christian marriage owes to Jesus Christ—all its dignity as a Sacrament, preserved as such throughout the years by the church.

Yours very sincerely,
"C."

could not instruct but only lead the inert mass of countrymen at least for some time to come. He extolled the virtues of Sun Yat Sen, though Dr. Lindsay thought him an unsentimental radical and communist, who was already half defied in the minds of the Chinese, but who was rapidly riding for a fall.

VARIETY OF OPINIONS ON GUEST SPEAKERS

On one point all seem to be agreed. All would have the student debates honored with the presence and participation of eminent personages. The point of difference lies in the fact that some would have them speak at the conclusion of the debate, while others would prefer them to take part in the midst of the conflict.

W. J. O'Meara, Speaker of the St. Michael's Parliament, when interviewed by "The Varsity," stated that he was in favour of having prominent speakers at the debates, and that their statements should be open to discussion after they have spoken. He also informed "The Varsity" that this was the custom in vogue at the St. Michael's College debates. At the last session of the Parliament at that College, Mr. Harry Sifton, the guest speaker, was followed by several student speakers from the floor.

AGE OF ELIZABETH

ture of a knight and represents one of the twelve virtues. Magnificence, the chief virtue, is represented by Arthur. The main object of the poem is to portray the perfect gentleman. It is not a pure allegory like The Pilgrim's Progress.

Through the vividness of characters this poem is one of the most picturesque in our language. Spenser describes as if with his eye on the object—lavish in detail, gorgeous in pageantry. No poet is more sensitive to beauty in land, sea and sky, or paints it more lovingly. He has power to paint character with a few broad strokes. There is nothing more remarkable than the range of feeling which he is able to express. He pictures women and children with profound sympathy.

Yet in spite of this Spenser advocated the utmost severity towards the Irish, for whom he had no use whatever. He outlines a scheme to bring them either to complete subjection or extermination. No doubt Ireland was the real background of the Faery Queen. The wild land with its savage people seemed a fitting place for the seeking of adventure by valorous knights.

The whole teeming life of the age, the passing away of the medieval world, are reflected in the Faery Queen. The spirit of daring and adventure and the intellectual expression of the new age are found side by side. No single work as fully represents the many-sided age of Elizabeth. Spenser married and lived for some years on his estate in Ireland, but when rebellion broke out he fled to England, where he soon died.

Spenser's place is firmly established as that of a master who gave the direction to English poetry.

On his tombstone in Westminster Abbey is inscribed, "Prince of poets of his time."

TORONTO DEBATERS SCORE IN WEST WIN POPULAR VERDICT, BOTH COLLEGES

In Spite of Adverse Decisions of Judges in Both Debates Visitors Win Favour

PROCEEDINGS BROADCAST

Subject: "Resolved Principle of Legal Censorship Should Be Condemned"

Two popular verdicts were gained by the touring Toronto debating team last week, although the Toronto debaters secured an adverse verdict from the judges in each event. The Varsity men gained this popular majority in spite of the fact that they upheld opposite sides of the same motion in the two debates. The result is regarded as a tribute to their persuasive powers.

In the debate held in Minneapolis between representatives of this University and of the University of Minnesota, the Toronto debaters won by the popular vote of the audience, 244-127, but lost the decision of the critic-judge. This trip to the States was made by A. W. F. Plumptre, M. K. Kenny and W. Lyndon Smith, B.A., in return for the visit of the Minnesota students who debated in Hart House and U.T.S. last year.

The debate, which was held in the Music Auditorium of the University of Minnesota was on the question, "Resolved that the principle of legal censorship should be condemned by this House." The Minnesota team, composed of Sidney Kaplan, Cedric Adams and John Marshall Palmer, upheld the negative, and the Toronto men the affirmative.

The critic, Professor Charles Tempier of Hamline University at St. Paul, decided in favour of the Minnesota team, but the audience voted 244-127 for the Canadians. The chair was occupied by Professor Harvey Hochauer of Minnesota.

The debate at Minnesota was the cause of widespread interest, and this was augmented by the fact that Station WLB broadcasted the proceedings.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 9.—The University of Toronto debaters won the popular verdict, but lost the decision of the single judge, at to-night's Toronto-Marquette debate. The subject was the same as that debated at the University of Minnesota, but here the Toronto team upheld the negative of the motion.

The debaters from the University of Marquette were Messrs. Leonard, Bernhard and Younce. Mr. W. R. Duffie was chairman of this meeting, and Mr. Cotton acted as judge.

This debate was not quite so well attended as that held against the Uni-

HOPE OF ALCHEMISTS NOT IMPOSSIBILITY

'Atoms and How They Combine' Subject of Lecture by Princeton Professor

ATOMS HAVE BEEN DIVIDED

The hope of alchemists may yet be realized, according to Professor Alan Menzies, of Princeton University, speaking for the Royal Canadian Institute, on "Atoms and How They Combine," in Convocation Hall Saturday night. Professor Rutherford has already succeeded in breaking up the nucleus of some of the lighter atoms, and so in changing the elements. He uses the alpha particles—pieces shot out from the nucleus of heavier, radio-action atoms—to serve as missiles to break into the others. These particles, which come notably from radium, and are consequently extremely precious, have an energy of four to nine million equivalent volts. If a corresponding energy can be given to loose and more common electrons—and Dr. Coolidge has succeeded in making their energy as high as nine thousand volts—the transmutation of elements will be an established thing.

Molecules are partnerships of atoms, but atoms are in themselves couplings, each containing protons and electrons. All the protons and some of the electrons are parcelled together to form the nucleus, and around this centre, circling in orbits, are the remaining planetary electrons. If you take the solar system and shrink it to one-tenth its size, shrink the result to one-tenth its size, and continue for twenty-three times, you will have a picture of an atom. Hence the nucleus is small compared with the vast empty spaces which lie between the planetary electrons. If all the protons and elec-

CANADA OFFERING INCREASING FIELD FOR S.S. GRADUATES

Many Openings Available for Social Service
Graduates

TEMPTING BIDS FROM U.S.

Bulk of Graduates Find Work in Canada, Says Miss Agnes McGregor

"The demand for social service workers is so great throughout the Dominion that graduates from this department have no difficulty in securing positions," stated Miss Agnes McGregor, Director of Field Work, when interviewed by "The Varsity" recently.

In the early days when there were not so many openings as now for direct social service work, a good many graduates went into other types of work, such as teaching, foreign mission work, Y.W.C.A. work, where they were still able to turn their knowledge of social problems to good account. But now there are plenty of positions open for direct social service work. In Toronto alone there are about ninety graduates, engaged in child welfare work, family case work and settlement work. Miss Russell, head of the department of Public Health Nursing of this University, is a graduate in social service.

Elsewhere in Canada there are about 41 graduates, numbering among them such people as Reginald Hopper, Commissioner of the Social Service Department of Ottawa; Mrs. M. S. Thomson, Director of the Central Bureau of Social Agencies in Hamilton; Mrs. Mildred Kensit, chief of the Children's Bureau of Montreal; Leora Masters, B.A., with the Children's Aid Society in Halifax. Four graduates have just gone out to British Columbia to engage in work connected with child and family agencies. Thus social service workers are to be found from end to end of this Dominion.

Some graduates, in preference to taking positions immediately at the conclusion of the course, go on with further courses in specialized forms of work. For instance, two graduates are now studying at the London School of Economics.

Despite the fact that many tempting offers come from across the line, only 15 out of 266 graduates have so far taken up work there. The excellent records made by students who did temporary work there have made Toronto Social Service graduates greatly in demand in the States.

Until recently, when students enrolled with the department, they were required to carry fairly extensive field work along with their theoretical work, thus combining the academic and the practical. It was found that "this sudden plunge into responsibility and into contact with distress and social disaster was often seriously un-

Trinity Men Turn Out to Welcome Lyndon Smith

Trinity men turned out in force last night to welcome back to the college from a successful debating tour William Lyndon Smith, B.A., who has just been named as one of the 1928 Rhodes scholars. The new scholar was met at the Union Station by about a score of men in the familiar Trinity blazer and escorted with honour back to the college. His own year, 277, especially congratulated him as being the second man of that year to win the coveted award.

PLEASED WITH RECEPTION

Debaters Well Entertained By Their Hosts in Both American Colleges

"Successful in almost every detail," seems to be the unanimous verdict of the Toronto debaters with respect to the trip they made last week to the University of Minnesota and the University of Marquette. The Toronto men, who returned last night, were M. K. Kenny, Victoria College, W. F. Plumptre, University College, and W. L. Smith, B.A., Trinity College.

One of the objects of the trip, according to the "Minnesota Daily," was to allow "the Canadians to observe university life at an American school at close range." The headline of the article in "The Daily" regarding the trip reads: "Brilliant Record of Gopher Opponents Bodes Ill for Local Trio." As far as the popular opinion went, "The Daily's" evil forebodings were not without ground.

The procedure followed in the debate with Minnesota is almost unknown in Toronto. Each speaker is given from twelve to fifteen minutes for positive argument. Then each speaker in reverse order so that the affirmative closes the debate, is given five minutes for critical argument. The result, according to one Toronto debater, was better than might be expected.

The Toronto men all express appreciation of their reception in the United States. Especially to their hosts at the University of Minnesota are they grateful. While in Minneapolis Mr. Smith and Mr. Kenny stayed at the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and Mr. Plumptre at the Beta Theta Pi house.

The open house debate that had been scheduled as part of their programme at the University of Minnesota was cancelled. In its place the Toronto debaters went to the annual "M" banquet, an elaborate athletic dinner held every fall.

During their trip they also visited Northwestern University in Chicago. They were delayed in St. Paul for four hours in twenty below zero weather by a snowstorm.

Professor Tells How Students of Old "Worked" Their Way Through College

The spectacle of University students "begging their way through college" was vividly conjured up before the minds of the second year class in British Constitutional History last Friday morning by Professor L. B. Pearson, in a description of the Poor Laws in England under the Tudors. At the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge a licence had but to be obtained from the Vice-Chancellor and the budding intellectual could go out and play the part of the "sturdy beggar," who found that he could make a far better living upon the proceeds of begging, than from the few shillings he might earn by the "sweat of his brow."

It is rather amusing to imagine such a state of affairs in a modern university. Should a student happen to be in need of a five-dollar bill to take his girl to the dance, he would

Perhaps She Lost it on Purpose Merry Matron Leaves Wedding Ring

That a plain gold band commonly known as a wedding ring must be considered an insignificant article by at least one individual is evidenced by the fact that such a piece of jewellery has been held at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House, and advertised by a "Found" card there ever since the eleventh of October. This is only one article in the miscellaneous collection which the Hall Porter has in his care. Compacts, lip-stick (kiss-proof and otherwise), ear-rings, gloves, canes, flasks, pencils, scarves, keys, umbrellas and sundry other articles both useful and ornamental are all awaiting their apparently none too anxious owners. Money has its place in the array, their being one lot termed simply "a sum of money," another "money-change," and another "a gold coin handed in to the Faculty Union in error."

The majority of these articles were found at or immediately after parties. Of the 49 "Found" cards on the board, 29 were dated the day of and the day after the masquerade. People were very slow in claiming found articles. Of all the cards in possession of the Hall Porter and dated from October 11th, only 4 had been reclaimed.

The number of "Lost" cards on the board was comparatively small, their number being scarcely one-fifth that of the "Found" cards posted. The Hall Porter estimated that fully ninety per cent. of the articles lost were recovered. Very occasionally something entirely disappeared, but although many of the things which were found were left unclaimed for a long time, the great majority were eventually returned to their rightful owners.

ELITE OF ATHLETES STAGE ANNUAL DANCE

Closing of Social Season of 1927 Marked by Gala Festivities

EVERY SPORT REPRESENTED

The annual At-Home of the Athletic Association of the University of Toronto, the last event of the social season for 1927, was held Friday night in Hart House. The dancing was held in the big gym, which was decorated to good effect with blue and white bunting, with a false ceiling also of blue and white. Three of the "jousting" flags also formed part of the decoration. Supper was served at 12 and 12.30 in the Great Hall in conventional style.

The élite of the athletic world and their friends were to be seen: "TM" holders, members of almost every team; runners, hockey, rugby, soccer, basketball players, swimmers—every sport was represented.

Lady Falconer and Mrs. Primrose received at the door of the gymnasium. Others in the receiving line were: Mrs. Wallace Secombe, Mrs. M. A.

Programme of Music and Addresses to Entertain New Members of Sodality

Rev. Father McNab of Newman Club conducted a very impressive ceremony at Loretto College, in the reception of new members of the Sodality. After an inspiring address delivered by Father McNab and Benediction, a banquet was served to the College in the dining room. In the evening a programme of Canadian music and readings was greatly enjoyed. The programme consisted of songs and semi-choruses by the undergraduates, among which was the spirited French-Canadian folk song, "Ma fille, veux-tu un bouquet?" Miss Marcella Murrodo sang "Duna" and Gena Branscombe's "My Love." Rev. Father L. Rush of St. Michael's College added greatly to the musical programme, and Brother Gabriel of De La Salle College gave several dramatic and humorous readings. Rev. Father McNab and Rev. Father Callahan of St. Anthony's were also present. The evening closed with the singing of the new Confederation Jubilee arrangement of "Oh Canada."

Shaggy Shebas Shun Snipping Shears Luscious Lassies Like Long Locks

From the wilds of Wisconsin a communique has reached the editor of "The Varsity" asking whether the crop eared millions who have bobbed their hair are yet allowing it to grow again. The originator of the question, who is a young lady, had been in Paris this summer, where she claims that all the young girls from sixteen to thirty-six are letting their hair grow. The editorial staff of "The Varsity" were asked to see if the malady had spread into the draughty regions north of the Great Lakes, and it is found that it has. All one has to do to verify the truth of the statement is to walk along the corridors of any one of the Arts colleges and inspect the innumerable members of the fair sex who are walking up and down wondering whether to go to a lecture or to the newest facial garage for a duco and a hair cut. They generally compromise on a trip to Woolworth's for a package of hair pins.

The strange part of the malady is that, like malaria, it reoccurs rhythmically in that the sweet things let their hair grow till it looks woolly around the ears and sticks out about an inch and a half over their coat collars and then suddenly look into a glass, burst into tears and charge into the nearest chirotonsor's and then and there, their travel begins all over again. The summer camps have in part solved the problem, because then the shaggy shebas can withdraw into the wilderness and give themselves up to meditation; until the ends are long enough to tuck under. A canvass made at random of one hundred women students scattered over the various faculties has revealed that 20 per cent. have finally reached the stage where their hair is long enough not to be designated as bobbed, while another 25 per cent. have exercised sufficient will-power to allow their tresses to grow till now they would pass as "doctored." While the remaining 55 per cent. are going to begin to let theirs grow "next week" or "after Christmas," and even in some cases they are putting off embarking on the venture till exams begin in the spring, when most of the official social affairs are canned on account of the moral pressure of approaching exams. This, however, is in the dim and distant future, and the facts remain that a good many more than half of the women undergraduates of the University of Toronto still have bobbed hair in various stages of deshabille and are likely to leave it that way until they return to Snake Landing and their parents see them.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Shall Curfew Ring at 12 o'clock

"Do you consider that 12 o'clock is the proper time for parties staged in college buildings to close up, even on Friday night?"

"Bishop" John R. Ramsay, III Yr. Wycliffe: "By all means, all respectable people are in bed by that time, and students certainly should be, for at this hour one's vitality is at the very lowest ebb, and so to maintain a high standard in one's work retire early."

Miss M. W. Price, 1st Yr. Pass: "No, I certainly do not! I think that two o'clock is the earliest hour at which they should close."

T. S., Postgraduate, Medicine: "No, delay in a great many cases makes it impossible to get started on time, and parties only begin to get warmed up by midnight. At all the college dances I have attended everyone has had a better time after midnight than before."

Miss Constance Smith, IV Yr. Pass: "The question is not whether they should cease at that hour, but shouldn't they. I see no reason at all for stopping at 12 o'clock just because we are students and in college buildings."

E. C. Rudd, 1st Yr. S.P.S.: "If we are here to do justice to our studies twelve o'clock is quite late enough. In certain cases like Hart House Masquerade exception should be made, but, generally speaking, I think they should stop at midnight."

ARE WE JAZZING TO DESTRUCTION?

An article in the November number of the National Review, by Sir Henry Coward, merits the notice and discussion of the thinking student. It decries with vehemence the devolutionizing effect of modern jazz, not only on the individual, but upon the future of the white race.

Historically, the decay of great nations was caused by the nature of ethics and morality derived from the form of their pleasures. Jazz, according to the writer, is a type of primitive music both in structure and mode of performance. It is decidedly atavistic, deadening and vulgarizing the senses. But it has a greater significance. Scientifically, it denotes a "going back to the standards and crudities of the cave man and negro of the Southern plantation." And, "because the popularization of this class of music, and its reaction on the subconscious memory evokes practices and usages of the past, such as immodest dances, it leads to—in fact has led to—a lowering of prestige of white races."

"If we wish to escape the fate of nine great Empires which have dominated and declined, we must see that our lotus-eating does not take the place of working, and that in following a 'wearisome and irritating reiteration of cacophonous imbecility,' we do not allow jazz to pay fat dividends . . . while our high thinking and spirituality decay."

The future world supremacy of the east has for some time been a subject of discussion. That we, as a people, are hastening to our own decline is, perhaps, a new slant on the question. Sir Henry concludes his article with the hint that the white races have lost a lot of "that subtle element of the superman superiority" owing to the fact that visiting coloured students see so much of the giddy side of English life, and miss the sober elements.

How can we reply to such a condemnation? Eastern students on our own campus have commented on its shallowness. We have adopted the jazz orchestra, of an evening, as our major relaxation, and "safety-valve." Are we to discover that, by research and study, we are "evolutionizing" in the day time, and by our off-hour scintillations, devolutionizing at night, and that the faculty or fraternity "hop" may have a broader consequence than that of missing lectures in the morning?

WHEN STUDIES STOP

While college may be primarily the young man's game, one is prone to suppose that the desire for knowledge, or, rather, the wish to increase one's fund of information, will never cease. As a matter of fact, we are inclined to believe that, as one grows older, the things unlearned become more and more apparent and the desire for a better understanding proportionately increases. Many men at least have, after pursuing a short, dilatory course of study at music in their youthful days, regretted their inability to entertain themselves or others at later years, and, with many, the feeling has been so pronounced that they have recommenced practices and achieved proficiency. And similarly the desire for a knowledge of literature, art, law, finance and countless other subjects is known to increase with the years. Evidence of this is given by the common statement that "the educated man is he who realizes that he actually knows but little."

We, at least, are led to believe that the older one becomes the harder it is to learn. The statement of J. C. Egbert, director of the extension courses at Columbia, would serve to disprove this. Last year one student of 83 years of age was enrolled; another was 80, another 77, and one 75, while sixteen more were above 70, eighty-seven between 60 and 70, 345 between 50 and 60, 878 between 40 and 50, and -832 between 30 and 40, with only 192 under 20. The statement is made that the older people showed just as much ability to learn, and perhaps more eagerness, as the youngsters.

The small number of those "under 20" may be explained by the fact that the majority are still at a day school or else engaged in those things which appear to "particularly matter" with youth, and little discredit can be thrown upon a younger generation. Rather credit to the universities that provide those facilities of study and to the primary education that demanded and popularized such courses with those of more mature ages.

Art, Music and Drama

Sunday Evening Concert

One more Sunday Evening Concert in Hart House helped to illustrate the not very well known fact that "classical" music can, without cultural hypocrisy on the part of the critic, be as pleasant to the ear as the latest explosion from Mr. Friml, Mr. Romberg or even Mr. Berlin. Last night Sergei Stupin, cellist of the Imperial Japanese Court, rendered a programme which, at least for the first three numbers, was altogether superior from the viewpoint of technique and selection of matter. There is something in music, at the hands of an artist, which sets it apart from the furred medleys which are too often strewn about Toronto in the small concerts and over the radio. Last night's music, however, was clear and effortless, and held the audience in the Great Hall closely attentive.

The first part of the programme was devoted to Rachmaninoff's Opus 19; selections which can be given the honest approval of any auditor, however lacking in appreciation of tone poems and harmony he may be. Many selections of Tin-pan Alley origin seem suspiciously familiar when parts of this Opus are played; another boost for "Classical Music."

Beethoven's Variations in E Flat is quite charming despite a title which suggests masterly playing with chords, flats and sharps in a bewildering manner; yet it is quite suited to the taste of an average audience.

In all, the programme was a great triumph for Hart House. The ease and smoothness of the renditions of both M. Sergei Stupin and Signor Alberto Guerrero were discernible even to an inexperienced listener, and should increase the prestige and popularity of these Sunday concerts to an even greater extent among the undergraduate body.

Wymilwood Sing-Song

"You are going to sing for us, and we are going to sing for you, and we are all going to sing together," said Mr. G. D. Atkinson of Sherbourne Street Church, in opening the Christmas carol sing-song at Wymilwood, Sunday evening.

Mr. Atkinson was assisted by a choir of sixty voices which rendered quartets, solos and led in the general singing. The musical was very well attended, some four hundred students stretching the seating capacity to the very limit. "The First Noel," "Jesus is Born," "The Holly and the Ivy," "We Three Kings of Orient Are," "Good King Wenceslas" numbered among the selections.

We are a bit weary to-night, so we print here a dubious contrib. On the perils of over-eating. The moral is: "It only costs two bits, so don't get indigestion for that reason":

Stay your appetites at luncheon,
Lest when you return to class
Profs. turn from Greek to Oratory,
Wake up, my lad—or lass.

Choose your food with care and cunning,
Predigested sloppy goo,
Watch for dreaded soporifics
In soup or salad, pie or stew.

That's what causes you to wander
Through the fields of red romance
Instead of mentally digesting
The Rise, Decline and Fall of France.

Then think how very disconcerting
It must be to all your fellows
To try to seem attentive
With you snoring like a bellows.

The night winds fall
Across the dark of years—
Why sorrow and sighing
Why—all the—tears?

Light fades and space falls
And a rose smiles from a bud— . . .
Why night-time without stars,
Why—all the—drops of—blood?

THE DEFEATED

So: it was not I—
Not my hands could bring comfort to his heart,
Not my fingers could smooth softly
Slow and softly
The wrinkles from his brow.

No tenderness of mine
Was what he sought—
He found serenity at last, at last,
In Death's white alien arms.

AT DAWN

I lie at dawn by the Amazon;
The sun smiles victor, the stars have gone,
And all about
The flowers creep out
Beneath their covering leaves of tawn.
Kinkajou wakes, armadillo takes
His stumbling way on his quest for snakes,
While by the stream
Behold the gleam
Of sleek squat sloth as his thirst he slakes.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Junior Assault on Thursday and Friday nights of this week promises some keen and exciting contests in the boxing, wrestling and fencing line. The Junior Assault is open to those men who have never won an assault at Varsity, and as a result all the members of the Intercollegiate team are ruled out, making it fairer for those with less experience. This year there is an unusually large amount of material, and the assault bids fair to be the most successful in years.

The coaches are extremely gratified at the way the men are turning out, and they can foresee nothing but another big year for the Blue in B. W. and F. circles. The faculties assaults have disclosed some fine prospects and the assault this week will provide another opportunity to get a line on the budding champions of the various divisions.

The result of the Varsity-Central basketball game should go a long way toward dispelling a feeling that has been prevalent around Hart House this year that Varsity would be the weak sister in the Intercollegiate basketball series this year. Most of last year's team graduated, and it was necessary to rebuild the machine, but it looks as if a very good job had been made of it. The tour of American cities during the holidays should put the boys right on edge for the College series. The teams that they will meet are not easy picking by any means, and these exhibition games will do as much as many weeks of practice towards putting the finishing touches on the team play.

These Intercollegiate basketball contests provide perhaps the most thrilling form of entertainment, but for some reason or other the fans refuse to give basketball the support which it deserves. Perhaps this is due to the fact that few people realize the exciting nature of the game. For the benefit of these we suggest that they attend the first game and if they do not enjoy it and get their money's worth we will stop harping about it.

The Intermediate hockey team this season should be stronger than the outfit that wore the Blue colours last season, and at that rate they will be right in line for more than group honours. Last year Varsity won their group, but were defeated by the fast Oshawa team in the play-downs. Several of last year's players who are out with the Seniors will probably perform on the seconds, and there is a world of material coming up from the Jennings Cup teams. As regards the Intermediate Intercollegiate series nothing definite is known as yet. The matter of entering a team is largely up to the coaches. There is a possibility of entering two Intermediate teams, one in the O.H.A. and one in the College group; on the other hand, the same team may represent Varsity in both series, as is the procedure in the Senior series.

"Our Lady of the Snows," as evinced by a clipping from the "London Truth" of 45 years ago, edited by the eminent Henry Labouchere:

"The Canadian Pacific Railway company has begun to launch its bonds. This railway, if it be finished, will run through a country frostbound for seven or eight months of the year, and will connect with the eastern part of the Dominion, a province which embraces about as forbidding country as any on the face of the earth. British Columbia is a barren, cold mountain country, that is not worth keeping. It would never have been inhabited at all unless by trappers of the Hudson Bay Company, had the 'gold-fever' not taken a party of mining adventurers there. Fifty railroads would not galvanize it into prosperity. The much touted Manitoba settlement will not hold out many years. The people who have gone there cannot stand the coldness of the winters. Men and cattle are frozen to death in numbers that would astonish the intending settler if he knew; and those who are not killed outright are often maimed for life by frostbites."

Attention of raters of present late-leave system:

The Washington Missionary College, Seventh Day Adventists, has decreed "any student attending a photoplay or motion picture theatre automatically severs his connection with this college." Also "any student using tobacco in any form, having tobacco, pipes, cigars, cigarettes or cigarette papers in possession or allowing another person to use them in one's room is automatically expelled."

Co-eds are put in their place at Ann Arbor:

That the life of the average woman student is already too complicated without adding intercollegiate athletics, and that she is not strong enough physically for athletics, is the belief of the chairmen of the advisers for women at the University of Michigan.

COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE UNSUITED TO PRESENT DAY

Clearly Designed for Student at High School or University Undergraduates

Companionate marriage, very obviously, is designed for college and high school students. It is an attempt to solve an existing problem, and, much as the novel departure is being ridiculed in newspaper circles as being foolhardy and merely an attempt to gain notoriety for its originators, it must still be considered as a step in the right direction.

What is the marriage problem in school?

Marriage to-day is synonymous with independence. No sane, young person considers marriage unless he sees ahead of him tangible evidence that he can, of himself, support a family. But such evidence is not easy to find. Independence is being reached much later in life. The law seems to be universal, that the higher the education and development the later independence arrives. Young people find themselves twenty-five, or more, years of age before they are in a position to consider marriage, often much older if they expect to live on a scale commensurate with their education.

The marriageable age, ideally, is between eighteen and twenty-four, and from a eugenic and national welfare viewpoint the earlier, in this period, the better. To be blunt, marriage should take place before the parties have too much of the "horse sense" so often mentioned in favour of late marriage. When analysis and cold-blooded economic considerations enter, cupid goes out the window. The greatest source of mismatching to-day results from these "understanding" synthetic marriages in which one or both parties are coldly calculating and marrying as a last resort or a remedy. Iron to hold fast should be welded, and marriage should likewise be a matter of sincere feeling and natural liking rather than reason. Iron that is bolted together seldom holds long.

Whether we like it or not, late marriages take on the synthetic tinge. Youth and romance have turned into wisdom and cunning.

School and marriage do not go together. Certainly there have been some who have done this, but they are the exception. The business of life precludes the spending of three or four years in the more or less hypothetical pursuit of education. Concrete results are the order.

Further, public opinion makes student marriages objectionable. The world looks derogatorily on the young couple which is "sponging" off its parents. People invariably sneer at dependent-marriage. In short, marriage for a student is almost impossible.

A companionate marriage, of the Haldeman-Julius type, is an attempt to alter antiquated public opinion to make assistance from parents acceptable and commendable, to encourage marriage in early life.

Unfortunately, companionate marriage as it stands to-day is incompatible with conventional standards, but it is an indication of an existing problem, and, as such, should be given more than flippant consideration.—Minnesota Daily.

Women's Interfaculty Finals to be Played on Wednesday

The Hart House gymnasium will be the scene of the finals in women's Interfaculty basketball, to be played on Wednesday and Saturday evenings at 8 o'clock. The contesting colleges are U.C. and Victoria, and since both teams are composed of Senior girls experienced in their game, an exciting struggle is promised. The players are very evenly matched, and as a result the play should be fast and furious. All students with college spirit should turn out, both to cheer their faculty's team and to supply the Girls' Basketball Society with sadly needed funds. Come and enjoy an evening of clean sport, all for 25 cents.

BASKETBALL SQUAD DEFEATS CENTRAL 'Y'

Senior Basketball Team Begins Season with Win, Score Stands 47-31

FORWARD LINE EFFECTIVE

The U. of T. Senior basketball squad opened their season Thursday night with a brilliant win over the Central Y team on the latter's floor by a score of 47-31. This was the first time the Blue and White team has played together against an outside team, and coming on top of the victory of the Central Seniors over the fast West End Y earlier in the week, it says much for the quality of the 1927-28 Intercollegiate quintette.

The feature of the play was the fast effective combination of the Varsity forward line. The Currie-Hurwitz-Sakler defence proved very effective against the attacks of the Y forwards. Coach McCutcheon used his subs freely and they did not weaken his line-up.

Newman, the ex-St. Catherine's flash, was high scorer, getting twelve points, with Faber and "Mo" Mitchell scoring nine points each. The latter was also a power on defence, checking back continuously. Gord Johnston, last year's Intermediate centre, was in uniform, but did not play much due to his weak ankle.

Len Sharpe, back in a Blue uniform after a year's absence, showed good form while on, but had hard luck around the basket.

The team looks nearly as good right now as last year's, and with the added experience of the American trip they should go a long way towards annexing the Wilson Cup now held by the University of Western Ontario. With only one of last year's regulars to work from, Coach McCutcheon has rounded out a well balanced team. Currie, Faber and Sharpe are the experienced men in Senior competition, the latter two having played with the championship Broadview team. "Mo" Mitchell has been going better every day out, and with Gord Johnston and Newman the forward line looks good enough to tackle any team in Ontario. The big weakness last year in the substitutes, but this winter "Mac" will have eight men, all of Intercollegiate calibre, and ready to step in without weakening his line-up.

The following was the "T" line-up Thursday: Faber (9), Mitchell (9), Newman (12), Sharpe, Johnston (4), Currie (6), Hurwitz (3), Sakler (2), Dunn, Putnam (2).

Appropriate Presents Given at Victoria College Party

The guest of honour at the second year class party of Victoria College in Annesley Hall Friday night was Santa Claus, who distributed presents to members of every course, such as "dates" to the English and History, "cribs" to Classics; B. and M. were presented with "bones."

Professor and Mrs. Robins as honorary presidents of the year, were present, along with Miss Addison, Dean of Women. The party was considered the most jolly in the history of the class.

PRESENTATION MADE OF CENTENARY AWARD

Trinity College Receives Award of Committee at Lit. Meeting

PLACED IN SPECIAL CASE

The cup awarded to the college making the best showing in the undergraduates' parade during the centenary celebrations was finally presented to Trinity College at a combined Trinity-St. Hilda's debate on Friday evening.

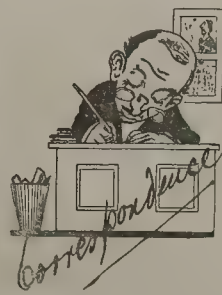

Mr. Scott presented the cup on behalf of the S.A.C. and congratulated Trinity on its part in the parade. Mr. W. B. Jennings accepted the cup on behalf of the students and thanked the donor for his remarks. The cup is to be placed in a special case and preserved in the main college building.

The debate that followed the presentation aroused much eager interest. The subject was: "That among all social institutions the gentle art of drinking tea is the most useful." On division the motion was upheld.

Miss Eleanor Clarke, leading for the government, said that tea drinking alone had the power of abolishing vulgarity. Miss Margaret Spun, leading for the government, worked backwards over the motion in order to show the absurdity of the government's position. Mr. R. Loosman, for the affirmative, attacked the negative as a group of budding socialists who were attacking existing institutions. Mr. Edgar, fourth speaker, regarded tea drinking as the root of unhappy marriages.

From the floor of the house the following spoke for the government: Misses Turner and Foster, and T. Taylor, S. Ryan, J. Wilson and R. Little; for the opposition: Misses Laing and Winspear, and P. Nind, J. Clough, A. Brookes, H. Martin, D. McCullagh and J. Evans; from the cross benches, G. Murrel-Wright.

The motion was upheld by a vote of 43-30. A. Baldwin acted as speaker and A. Walters as secretary.

HOLDS WITH CYNICS Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir: Friday's number of "The Varsity" contains an editorial purporting to deal with college cynicism.

The article to which I refer is obviously the work of a rather credulous writer. Without grasping what lies beneath the mental attitude which he aims at discussing, he has accepted as the fundamental belief of a powerful minority which is at worst merely the superficial stirring apparent in all student life—indicative of vitality and honest strivings at bottom.

Further, the statements made in this editorial are frequently quite incomprehensible. Might I ask the writer just what he implied by the following pronouncement—"Unfortunately the term cynicism is not unfounded among university students."

It is unfortunate that a paper which supposedly represents an intellectual body cannot produce editorials with greater claims to literacy and common sense.

I am, yours truly, J. W. Walker, Arts IV.

Soccer teams have been chosen by the women of Northwestern University as a means of inter-class competition.

A women's special took 100 girl rosters from the University of Colorado to witness the recent football game with Utah.

sentence-with curses. Well, down at the C.O.T.C. they asked a lad to illustrate the word "howitzer," and he ejaculated, "Up at 'Art 'Ouse the students walk in and howitzer!" (in and 'outs er!) Hevvin'tes!

This Bee person interrupts to ask why the Salvation Army never walks through the University grounds. To save their souls!

Comrade Dee again refused to write the Cat for us, so in conclusion we'll just dash off a few limericks:

There once was a snappy trial marriage,
Dismaied by the moralists' barrage,
The groom lived at home,
And his bride wouldn't roam
And never had need for a carriage!

There once was a prophet called Moses
Who had a most curvy proboscis;
Of pilgrims the Dean
Imbued Litterine
And never possessed halitosis!

A merry young punster called Dee
With many a pun amused me,
Some worthy of fame
And some very tame
And some made me cry: "Comrade D—!"

Can Frosh Froth Blowers Flourish Sudsy Seidel As In Days of Yore?

Diogenes' daily dozen for last Friday gives rise to the oft-recurring question: Are freshmen in the University getting altogether too young, callow and innocent? The impression being that in the olden days undergraduates at large were a bunch of great big roistering hellions, instead of somewhat mild individuals who can enter university the day after their sixteenth birthday. To-day, it seems, the male student can hardly raise a mis-placed eyebrow on his upper lip, while class pictures and team snaps of the "80's" give the impression that the collegian of those days went about peering wildly through an undergrowth of hirsute ornamentation; moustache cups were provided in every residence, and everyone repaired to Caer Howell's for a stein of the stuff that cheered to the accompaniment of froth.

The following extract from a book on undergraduate days in 1878 may shed light on the subject:
"For the remainder of the week there was not much danger of any strain from lectures. The whole town was in a state of excitement about the boat race. The fever spread uptown, gathered force at every tavern and liquor store until it reached the lodging houses of students who lived in the vicinity of College Avenue; thence it extended westward, like the plague, to the University, where the old Residence became a hive of industry in what is termed by the sporting fraternity the art of making books. . . .

Knox College was invaded by the great King Sport, and it was whispered that one of the professors of languages had been heard to say that in his opinion Hanlan was sure to win, and that if he were a betting man himself, he'd gladly give odds of 5 to 1. . . .

Ten minutes later we were sitting in the little dining room of the Albion Hotel, toasting our toes . . . when the proper time arrives, I'll order drinks. Of course it's your dinner, and if you wish another magister bibendi . . .

Academica

Frosh philosophers in the Wild West:

The ideal professor is one who understands his students and makes his students understand and like him, say the students of the University of Omaha. They also say that the ideal student is the one who can discriminate wisely between what must be done and what can be left undone.

Tonsorial activities of campus heroes in the Land of Cotton:
Louisiana State University is without three varsity football players and five other students because these men applied the barber's clippers too diligently to the heads of 300 freshmen.

Paw gets his'n down by Chicago:

The Knights of the Checkbook, secret order of the fathers of Northwestern University students, was organized as a climax of the Dad's day celebration at Evanston this fall. The members swear faithfully to "sign all checks that are necessary to the well-being of my son or daughter while attending Northwestern, never to speak harshly to him when his account is overdrawn, and to come back every year and give the place the once-over."

Practical pedagogy for pedestrians:
A course in the prevention of accidents will become a permanent part of the curriculum of New York University. This is the only institution of higher learning in the country to teach this subject.

Each electron is moving with ter-

This energy cannot be utilized.
Atoms are bound together by sharing one or two electrons, and it is only the energy of these outer ones that is free, and used in chemical reaction.
Oxygen is one of the few atoms that is free. "There is not even a buy it to give oxygen, as a partner, and to use the energy which the union in partnership gives. This energy is simply that resulting from chemical reaction given out by the outermost trons circling around is fifty thousand times as great, and that of the nucleus infinitely greater.

Under such conditions, it is also not

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO DEBATER GIVES DETAILED ACCOUNT OF TRIP

Had Many Novel and Interesting Experiences With American College Life

HIGH LIGHTS OF DEBATES

Saw Many of World's Largest and Best Works in Creative Genius

The following account of the recent trip of the three Toronto debaters to the Universities of Minnesota and Marquette was written by Mr. A. W. F. Plumptre of University College, who was one of the party.

"Now I can really appreciate John Held Jr.," said Mr. Lyndon Smith, one of the three debaters who have just returned from the Universities of Minnesota and Marquette. This remark was, however, made in connection with Northwestern University, located in Evanston, a suburb of Chicago. Here these men beheld the typical John Held Jr. Co-ed. And the students went to lectures in sweaters emblazoned with huge letters and numerals, drove about in runabouts, and wore the inevitable coon coats.

After seeing the world's largest furniture building, the world's largest expanse of brick, the advertisement of the world's largest police dog show, the men went to the world's (second) largest moving picture theatre. Here, among the news reels, they saw "Big Bill" Thompson being implored by a tribe of Indians to revise their false history books. "Big Bill" accepted the royal order of the feathered head-dress, and executed an energetic, if somewhat undignified, war dance. Some of the audience clapped, but at least as many booed and hissed. To be on the safe side, the Toronto representatives expressed no opinion. They had been warned to get off at the "depot" of arrival, to take a speedy taxi across the city to their "depot" of departure, and there to remain until their train left. Shooting, they were told, was not allowed in the depots!

The next day they arrived at Minneapolis, where the University of Minnesota was situated. The University has Protesting against having been treated like a bunch of children, the student body of the University of Oklahoma staged a revolution on the campus. Despite announcement that the revolution would not materialize, the students walked out of classes one morning and returned hilariously to their revolution. They have, however, now given up their notion and have returned to their regular work under the same "childish rules."

M. Gaby, of H.E.P.C.
Speaks To Eng. Soc.

M. Gaby, Chief Engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, spoke at the Engineering Society meeting held yesterday afternoon. He spoke on the operation of power plants and the distribution of the power in Ontario.

He also dealt with the problem of providing sufficient power in, say, ten years, when the increase in demand every year is 100,000 H.P. and the ultimate supply of power is 1,000,000 H.P.

INVIDIOUS BOOR PROVOKES ABUSE

Self-ordained Critic Thrives
When Profs. Attempt Witticisms

CLEVER HECKLERS

There is to be observed, in college life especially, an odious boor who can be heard in almost any class mumbled under his breath "witticisms" or corrections of the lectures and recitations. His semi-audible comments are usually facetiously derogatory; rarely are they given in the spirit of honest and straight-forward criticism. This self-ordained critic usually disdains recitation work (mayhap it is incapability), yet he is to be seen and heard everywhere casting caustic remarks.

He thrives especially well in the lecture room, where he is more free to indulge in his favorite pastime. Whenever the lecturer attempts to embellish his discourse with a vignette of humor or his burish friend breaks out in raucous guffaws or catcalls in order to excite the attention of his fellow students. This particular egotist dearly loves to wallow in the spectacular whether it be approved or not by his fellows. Emotions of repugnance and dislike are almost displaced by a feeling of pity for this individual who vainly tries to bask in the calcium glare, much as we would pity the trapeze-performing evangelist or the one-armed female trans-oceanic flyer.

Yet it is true that there are others who grumble with this undercurrent chorus, who do not crave publicity as much as their brethren, yet their actions are just as invidious and cowardly. Rather than try to make refined remarks, they prefer to give outlet to their opinions in an undertone. Instead of openly challenging the speaker

CANADIAN STUDENTS LINK ACTIVITIES OF UNIVERSITIES

Desire for Co-operation Brings Convention of Universities to Toronto

MANY PROJECTS

Representatives From All Over
Canada to Meet Here in December

The linking up of Canadian student life by keeping Canadian universities in touch with students in their territory is one of the aims of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, which will meet here during the Christmas holidays.

Next year, when eastern students go on the harvest tours, it is hoped that they will be accommodated at the various western universities. The Federation will also arrange for similar facilities for visiting British agricultural students.

In their desire that Canadians may learn more of their own country, the members of the Federation will propose a regular system of exchange of students between the universities of the Dominion, as well as trans-continental tours of debating teams.

Probably the most important step which may be taken will be the joining up of the students' councils with the Canadian League of Nations Society. If this move is made it will be, in the opinion of many, the most revolutionary step ever made by undergraduates of this Dominion.

Besides lengthy discussions of common problems of self-government throughout Canada, the students' representatives will consider the difficulties of obtaining employment for students, and such intimate details as the advisability of arranging group insurance for students' personal effects scattered, as they will be, over three thousand miles of land.

The question of undergraduate tours to Europe will be opened by the proposal to arrange a trip to Europe to include the Passion Play at Oberamun in 1928. It is expected that arrangements will also be made for a Canadian debating team to visit the United States next year, and, perhaps, later, to go to England.

The most ambitious project to come before the meeting will be that of establishing an All-Canadian Collegiate Press Association. So far the only telegraphic news connect established between universities here was the sporting service between "The Varsity" and "The McGill Daily" last year.

FRENCH CLUB ELECTION OFFICERS FOR NEW YEAR

Weekly Meetings To Be Conducted in French

The Senior French Club of St. Michael's College met last night in the College Library in order to elect officers for the coming season. Rev. Fr. Murray, professor of French, is sponsor of the club. The following officers of the club were elected:

Pres.: Vernon J. Bourke.
Vice-Pres.: Cyril McAlpine.
Secretary: J. Frank Mallon.
It was decided to hold weekly meetings Monday evenings. The proceedings are to be entirely in French and will include short speeches, readings from the French classics, addresses by prominent French visitors, and most important of all, round-table discussions to give practice in French conversation.

FRENCH SOCIETY HEAR M. POIRIER IN SPLENDID TALK

Very Detailed and Interesting Account of French Province

'LA BRETAGNE' THE SUBJECT

Miss Alice Baker Enlightened the Meeting by the Rendering of a French Song

M. Poirier gave a very interesting talk on "La Bretagne" last evening at the December meeting of the U.C. French Society. M. Poirier continued the series of talks that have been given on the various provinces of France.

A very intimate description of this picturesque province was presented to the members. The province was viewed from every angle, the physical features, the natural resources, the inhabitants, the legends, and the occupations of the people.

The inhabitants of this region, in which the existence is sometimes very hard, are of a rough and strong physique and possess a severity of expression.

The language is absolutely different from the French which surrounds them and is purely a Celtic language. The principal cause of the retention of this tongue is due to the church, where it is always spoken.

The Celts who inhabit Brittany are full of mysticism and poetry, and their literature abounds with legends. These are very amusing and interesting and show the close relationship of the region to the sea.

Almost all the men of the villages of Bretagne are fishermen, and spend the whole summer at their occupation. Those who have read Pierre Loti's "Pêcheurs d'Islande" will recall the stories of the fishermen.

Miss Alice Baker gave a delightful rendering of the French song "Chanson de Florian."

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served to the accompaniment of French conversation.

The attack Saturday night by a skulking prowler on a resident of Annesley Hall once more gives reason for apprehension as to the safety of unaccompanied women in the University district after dark. This case is by no means unprecedented in the University, and calls to mind especially the disturbances in the fall of 1925, when the Dean of Women of University College was compelled to issue official warning to the women under her jurisdiction.

SAINT MICHAEL'S NEW GOVERNMENT

Governor-General Calls Upon Crusaders to Form Cabinet

POWER PREMIER

The political atmosphere at St. Michael's College has finally cleared, following the ousting of the Liberal government from power. George C. Power emerges as the premier to be. The Governor-General has called upon him as leader of the Crusaders to form a cabinet. His cabinet is announced as follows:

Premier and Minister of Education: Geo. C. Power.

Minister of Justice: J. M. King.

Minister of Finance: Joe Lammon.

Minister of Transportation: G. Cruse.

Minister of National Defence: C. Daly.

Minister of Health: V. Kennedy.

Minister of Interior: R. Toulman.

Minister of Customs: J. Warren.

Minister of Immigration: Ed. Sammons.

Chief Whip: R. Fortura.

The provisional date set for the meeting of Parliament is Thursday, Jan. 12, at 8:15 p.m.

In the recent episode, Miss Dorothy Crawford of Annesley Hall is said to have been coming back to the hall alone at about 11:20 p.m., and on the very steps of the hall a man rushed out and laid hands on her, and told her to keep quiet and threatened her. The vicinity of the attack was quite dark.

Miss Crawford, however, is reported to have screamed, whereupon her assailant fled towards Queen's Park. In wrenching herself from the man's grasp, Miss Crawford's clothes were torn. She then went into the Hall and gave the alarm.

The police were summoned, and Detectives Whitelaw and Miller were assigned to the job. Though they conducted a thorough search of the district, they were unable to find any trace of the skulker.

When interviewed yesterday the Sergeant of No. 2 Police Station said that incidents of this type are not at all frequent and rarely come to the notice of the police. "No," he said, "there is not much of this sort of thing going on." When asked if the efforts to apprehend the criminal had met with any success, the Sergeant remarked, "There are no clues, but our detectives are working on it." Queen's Park and the vicinity of Annesley are not, it is understood, under the jurisdiction of the University police force, who patrol the ground between College Street on the south, Bloor on the north, and between St. George Street and Queen's Park.

Miss Addison, Dean of Women at Victoria College, in an interview with "The Varsity" last night, corrected the impression concerning the attack on one of the girls in residence at Annesley Hall.

UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT PLAN CHRISTMAS TREE

Weston Boys' Band and Church
Choirs to Give Musical Programme of Carols

The University Settlement House is again planning the annual Community Christmas Tree. The date this year will be Thursday, December 22nd. Last year there was an attendance of over nine hundred. The Settlement workers are expecting even greater numbers this year.

The Weston Boys' Band will be present to help out a splendid musical programme, also several of the church choirs of Toronto. Carol singing will be a feature of the programme.

The Community Tree festivities are always eagerly anticipated by hundreds of boys and girls in the district. It is the happiest time of the year for them. Mothers and fathers are present as well, and interested people from the community. Grange Park is the chosen spot for this year's programme. University students are asked to do all they can to help and to be present on the occasion if at all possible.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Has Student Time To Earn?

Do you consider the present length of holidays between the closing of College and Christmas sufficient for the student who must work?

F. J. O'Laughlin, I, St. Michael's: "No, I don't, and furthermore, I think that all the holidays should be before Christmas if they are to benefit those who must work. It is much easier to obtain a position in the rush season before Christmas than after."

N. Mallon, III, U.C.: "No, I don't, because a student cannot obtain a position for the three days before Christmas. They need at least a week."

Miss M. Downey, II, St. Michael's: "No, I think it would be better to close a week before Christmas, since that is the time when it is easier to get employment."

H. M. Barrett, III, Trinity: "I think college should close a week before Christmas at least."

L. E. E., II, Meds: "No, I think a week's holiday before Christmas would be preferable. It is easier to get work before Christmas than after."

Miss M. White, IV, Trinity: "No, I don't. I think students need the time before Christmas rather than after. And as many need the Christmas vacation to get through the rest of the year, the time before Christmas is more valuable than that after."

First Telephone Inventor Arrested By Wishes of Well Educated People

(Editorial in a Boston newspaper published 61 years ago):

"A man about 46 years of age, giving the name of Joshua Coppersmith, has been arrested in New York for attempting to extort funds from ignorant and superstitious people by exhibiting a device which he says will convey the human voice any distance over metallic wires so that it will be heard by the listener at the other end. He calls the instrument a 'telephone,' which is obviously intended to imitate the word 'telegraph' and win the confidence of those who know of the success of the latter instrument without understanding the principles on which it is based. Well-informed people know that it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires as may be done with dots and dashes and signals of the Morse code, and that, were it possible to do so, the thing would be of no practical value. The authorities who apprehended this criminal are to be congratulated, and it is to be hoped that his punishment will be prompt and fitting, that it may serve as an example to other conscienceless schemers who enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow creatures."

UP, THE VIGILANTES!

Saturday night's regrettable occurrence in Queen's Park, when a young lady resident at Annesley Hall was viciously attacked by a marauder, is the final incident necessary to convince all and sundry that the grounds of Queen's Park and the University are not sufficiently patrolled by either the University or the Civic Police Forces. Where the blame lies one cannot say, but that there is blame to be placed is an undoubted fact. It is reported that the jurisdiction of the University Police end at the gates of the grounds, and similarly that the Civic Police have no authority to patrol the University grounds. Where the power of either stalwart body ends or begins is not important, but it is important that all defenceless women forced to traverse the dim reaches of the park and grounds must be given full protection. To all beings sufficiently intelligent to comprehend the difference between day and night, it is a little more than obvious that a uniformed sentinel on duty at Simcoe Hall for the noble purpose of keeping fee-payers from leaning on the wall might be much better employed in patrolling the dark and lonely confines of Queen's Park at night. It is no secret that, after dark, the crossing of Queen's Park by unescorted ladies is a procedure to be wholly condemned, for that section of the Park behind the Parliament Buildings is a lolling-ground for loungers of a dangerous type, and unless the University and Civic Police are given more scope, impetus and admonition, it will be necessary to form a corps of student vigilantes for the protection of all women who have to cross the park and grounds after nightfall.

This is not a matter for trifling investigation, negotiation or explanation. It is a matter that demands instantaneous ACTION on the part of both "protective" organizations. Only once has this writer seen a policeman in that section of the park adjacent to Victoria College where the outrage occurred. And now that they have been confronted with the facts of the case, it is for the chiefs of the University and Civic Police Departments to say whether women in the vicinity are to be given more ample protection or whether they are to be exposed by indifference to undescribable dangers. We ask these gentlemen—what are they going to do about the matter—and when?

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Editor is in receipt of a postcard containing greetings from the Hart House String Quartet which is now giving recitals in California. The card reads, "Greetings from the Hart House String Quartet, now touring sunny California," and was mailed from the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco.

Once more we resume the mantle as chief agitator of this concatenation of cackinnation. Excuse us while we dispose of a delegation from S.P.S. which has been bothering us to write more and funnier Cats. Now, we're well away! Just to warm things up a little, Signor Frutti di Tutti will give his rendition, that charming aria from "Duco"—Mighty lacquer rose! One might call that a musical saw.

So, as the cavalryman remarked, "Hussar old friend to-day!"

That worthy Ursprünglichelimerich-ensgedichter, N.A.B., did us the honour of a nifty in his verbal asparagus yesterday. We are duty bound to reply with the courtesies of artillery and parrassian mayonnaise to this slinger of galloping pterodactyls, but the Muses do not seem to be on deck. N.A.B., however, to paraphrase our effusion of last day, is a man who would riddle in the middle of the moonlight, or any other place, for that matter.

Now that the minutes of the Mutual Admiration Society have been read and approved (we beg to report that Phyllis Uppenbunc has been writing us more poison pen notes. WON'T PET PUSSY

Editor, "The Varsity."
Dear Sir:
I would like to register my disgust at a certain kind of joke so-called that has been making its appearance from time to time in the column sacred to the Cat, namely, one which connects Queen's University with professionalism. Either your whiskered colleague is unwise enough to believe all he hears from prejudiced rotters who know nothing about the subject, or he is indulging in small-town stuff because a University far smaller than ours has turned out for the past few years a first-class rugby team. It may be that he merely thinks that Queen's is a suitable butt for a space-filler.

In any event, it is obvious that even if the slander were true, such remarks could do nothing but harm, and could only lead to feeling of the worst kind. If he wants the truth about the relations between Queen's and Toronto, I would advise him to have a talk with Professor Michael Mackenzie.

Yours truly,

R. H. Loosemore,

Trinity College, '28.

Violent P.S.—Moreover, Mr. Editor, after having written the above I go on to see myself described in the account of a certain debate as a "loose man." This I must vehemently contradict, as it has no basis of fact. Not only that, but the report also said that "Miss Margaret spun." I was

A veritable feast of beauty—masculine and feminine—awaits the fan at the Uptown this week. John Barrymore and Dolores Costello gesticulate through several thousand feet of celluloid as the traditional hero of the cloven chin and clinging vine heroine. The picture is placed in the period of Louis XV. Dolores as Monton is innocent and menaced by a group of villains, including her own brother and the King of France. Our hero, about to enter the priesthood, saves her, and with her leads an idyllic if irregular existence for one week in Paris. He loses her, saves her, loses her and saves her again, bringing in the traditional duels, galley-slaves, etc., etc., and ends up headed for America, even then "the land of the free."

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE ASSAULT-AT-ARMS IN HART HOUSE TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

A short resume of the fall sports shows that Varsity did not do too badly, despite the deep lamentations over the Senior football title. It seems as though some seven cups were at stake and five of them came to Toronto. The five are Junior Rugby, Harrier, Track, Tennis, Golf. Not too bad for one season when you consider that Senior and Intermediate football are the only ones missed.

To-night marks the close of the inter-year faculty assaults, and then there will be a day lay-off before the Junior Assault takes place. There is some regret expressed that the assault should take place at this late date, as the term exams seem to claim a lot of attention around this time of the year. Still the real enthusiasts can get in a lot of studying, training and scrapping.

These inter-year affairs sure pep up a lot of interest in the colleges, and often a man steps out for the first time and right then and there becomes an enthusiast. Besides providing much material for the Junior Assault, they have a strong tendency to revive the dying class and year spirit which has recently shown much signs of becoming extinct since the advent of the no initiation mandate.

Some of us have not quite realized that Christmas will be upon us within a week or so, but the boys of the hockey and basketball teams are not able to put such thoughts from them. They, with no schedule for the immediate future, are attaining condition and battling for positions on their various squads in the hopes of making a place for the much coveted trip to the American colleges and universities.

For the first time in years Meds have apparently decided not to hold an inter-year assault. In the past Meds have put on one of the best assaults of this series, and it is to be hoped that they are not going to make a practice of it. This year there has been a sort of general misunderstanding about these assaults, and besides running two on one night, they extended the last of them to this week.

Thursday marks the official opening of the hockey season when the Juniors take on Parkdale in the premiere of the O.H.A. series. Though Marlboro eliminated the locals in the S.P.A. series, Frank Sullivan has great faith in his proteges, so with a little more team work, condition and seasoning the Varsity squad should go a long way in the fight for the cup.

To-night in the Upper Gym, University College is holding their annual assault at arms, and though as yet the entries are few, there is bound to be a last minute rush which will assure the success of the meet. If any judgment can be made about this one, the Sophomores should come out ahead, as in the previous assaults this year 370 has always come across with a long list of entrants.

Despite word from the Physical Director's office to the effect that the Meds have arranged for no date, rumours come from the Medical camp that they are intending to stage their "annual" to-night too. Only one fact is substantiated, and that is that U.C. have the gym and all other necessary equipment. Of course it might be possible to repeat last Thursday's performance when Dents and Victoria held their various assaults together, but this arrangement is not very acceptable to either party.

Junior Assault Entries To Close Wednesday

Entries for the Junior Assault at Arms will close at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 14. The lists may be signed at the Athletic Directorate's office. Those eligible for entry are men who have not yet won a Junior or Senior bout.

While we are at it, the programmes at dances should be simplified so that one who is not in Actuarial Science, or who is not a Chartered Accountant, can keep his books straight. Almost every dance supplies the interesting spectacle of some person or persons throwing dreadful fits because he missed the last marriage with someone very special. It will be made a matter of editorial policy in the Cat.

And we wonder if Messrs. Plumptre, Smith and Kenny brought back mince-pies from Minneapolis. That brings to mind the three Minnies—Tonka, Ha-Ha, and Mum. There is also the little sister, Chever. They are all related to Arthur. Is there silence, or does some sceptic yell "Arthur who?"

"Husband grabbing" college girls were defended recently by University of California women and by Fred Fox, editor of the Daily Californian. "Going to college to find a mate does not mean that a girl's character is in the least reproachable," is the assertion made by women of the university in their college daily. This statement was occasioned by a tirade against "husband grabbing," launched by two men students.

The average cost of a four-year course at the Ohio State University is estimated to be $4000. Three-fourths of this amount is personal cost to the student. The remaining expense is assumed by the state and the federal government.

Seniors of the University of Ohio are wearing black hats as the official insignia of their rank.

contained one or two useful hints for Mr. Martin and Dr. Barton. The cartoon comedy was a symphony in bars.

From the popular viewpoint, the high-light of the evening's entertainment was the performance of ten juvenile actors and actresses. Some of these had lost their juvenile standing years ago and were an imposition. The rest were talented in their way, but to any but the most superficial presented a pitiful spectacle. It is high time to call a halt when sentimental old fogies who should know better will commercialize and exploit defenceless children of four and five merely to get one more kick out of a sensation jaded soul. The management of the theatre cannot be made the scapegoat on this count. They do their job when they give the populace what they want. The fault lies with an unspeakably stupid public which cannot see the imminent tragedy in a pale six-year-old who should have been aged long since, walling at the top of a shrill nasal falsetto that he "wants to go home."

TIVOLI

The British war picture, "Somme," is running for the second week at the Tivoli, where it is being shown under the auspices of "The Evening Telegram" in conjunction with a patriotic programme. There is a war comedy and a special news reel illustrating the recent visit of the Prince of Wales. The Romanelli troupe appear in khaki to complete the background.

If you like war pictures, you will have noticed the difference between the British and American brand. The former are inferior in their continuity and subtleties and tend to rely on official pictures of battles by which they achieve a grimly realistic effect. The Americans will sugarcoat heavily with humour and romance until the reality is distorted. The British pictures are good journalism. The American productions are poor literature. The late war dealt a heavy blow in favour of realism in literature and drama, and as yet we have not seen the composite of imagination and fact which the old boys would call an artistic treatment of the business. And as yet we are too close to the horrors of the struggle and the sufferings.

These sufferings are presented in "Somme" as being equally borne by the allied soldier and the German. The sight is a grave rebuke to jingo journalism and the flag-waving press.

L.J.R.

LOEW'S—"THE THIRTEENTH HOUR"

Lionel Barrymore is really in his element in "The Thirteenth Hour" at Loew's this week. His characterization work as Professor Leroy is thorough in its execution, and at times it approaches the supreme hideousness of some of Lon Chaney's roles. He holds the audience in the palm of his hand throughout, and were the plot a trifle more original the picture might be his best to date. Some, indeed, would claim that distinction for it. Barrymore's only rival in point of interest is Rex, a magnificent police dog, which finally proves his undoing. Jacqueline Godson is strong support, though her emotional acting does not receive very great scope.

On the stage, Lillian Shaw, an old favourite with Toronto audiences, leads the bill. There certainly was no fall of gloom over the crowd when she had finished her second encore.

Her act might be of interest to those concerned with "that certain question" Diogenes put some time ago, and which has caused considerable smoke of late. Jim and Betty Morgan render several very fine vocal selections. The lady in the company is especially clever in a few peppy bits of wit and rhetoric. The Pausan Trio combines skill and strength in a strong-man, equilibrist turn which was very well received. A dancing number and an Annapolis Take-off rounded out the programme.

The feature presentation is a gasping melodrama that is rendered distinctive in its tone by Barrymore's acting. The plot is something after the fashion of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Professor Leroy is ostensibly an innocence old senile, but in reality a finished criminal, who cloaks his identity in his apparent impeccability. A series of midnight crimes has aroused the police to feverish activity. Matt Gray, a detective, is assigned to the case, aided by Rex, the invaluable police dog. Another murder, a half-throttled dog, a helpless girl—and finally rescue. Nemesis overtakes the murderer. By all means see the picture; it will amuse and satisfy you.

The programme is well balanced and compares favourably with recent presentations of this theatre. A touch of opera is furnished by the orchestra's rendering of a well-known chorus from "William Tell." z

STANZAS

Love, like the sea, no limit knows,
'Tis boundless as the tide—
And loves uncouthed as the snows
Have wandered by my side.

And what remains but one of ease
And living flames that die?
What brief and barren glory these Clouds fallen from the sky!

I never see a pavement wet
With rivers of the rain
That ever lets my heart forget
Beauty is brief and vain.

For all the labours on the land,
The sorrows of the sea,
The quiver in the questing hand
Were once an ecstasy.

And so I mused on dreamings dead,
On ghosts of gone delight
While far away to westward fled
The legions of the night.

DREAM-SHIP

I sat by the sea at sunset,
A-watching the ships come in,
And a-wondering what their cargoes were,
And where they might have been.

For the sun was a flaming ball of gold,
Slipping into a molten sea,
While purple clouds with gleams of gulls
Stretched royal canopy.

Then swift upon the gilded rim
A scudding schooner flies,
Her sails set taut, white wake behind,
And black against the skies.

ANNESLEY HALL INCIDENT

nesley Hall which had been created through reports in the downtown papers. The account had been largely a figment of the imagination. The truth of the matter was that the man put his hand upon her mouth, but she tore herself away and screamed. The would-be marauder became scared and took to flight. The girl told her story in the residence, and the police were called, but the man was not apprehended.

Miss Addison remarked that such occurrences were all too common throughout the city, and cited cases in Annesley, Queen's Hall and elsewhere. The outrage was by no means unique in University or residence annals. Miss Addison expressed the hope that justice would be meted out to the offender.

It is thought that the culprit had been loitering around Annesley Saturday morning, but little or no attention was paid to him. He was still there in the afternoon, and that night evidently carried out a pre-conceived plan.

A somewhat similar scare was thrown into those residing in Annesley two years ago. As reported by "The Varsity" of that time: "Late last Tuesday one of the girls at Annesley Hall awoke to find a man on the fire escape, peering in at her window. She gave the alarm; the police were summoned, and all Annesley Hall awakened to hear the tidings that there was a man skulking about and possibly in the building."

"Victoria girls, to the number of twelve, were accosted on a street near the residence, at different times early one evening. The girls at 94 St. George Street were awakened upon another occasion, to the sound of piercing screams on St. George Street late one night." The Dean of Women at that time issued an official admonition that no women were to venture forth unaccompanied after dark.

Montreal, Dec. 12.—Rev. George Laughton declared here last night in St. James' United Church that the advocates of companionate marriages "believe though they have come from monkeys they should go back to monkeys," and that such marriage signifies a return to barnyard manners and barnyard morals.

There has been an increase of one-third in women's registration in the law school at the University of Wisconsin.

Students at the University of Oklahoma, by purchasing student activity tickets, may attend 53 events, including all athletic contests, musical programmes, plays and lectures, for only $10. This is an average cost of only about 19 cents for each event.

And in place of the solid gleam
She spatters the waves with flecks of

And sews a green-white seam.

Away and away in the darkening light
As the wind the wild waves nursed,
That scudding schooner sailed afar,
When lo!—The bubble burst!

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
DEBATER GIVES IMPRESSIONS

many buildings of which it is very justly proud. Several of them resemble our Forestry and Public Health buildings in architecture. That night the Varsity men were guests at the great annual "M Banquet," where they were cheered heartily with a "Yea! Toronto! Rah, Rah, Rah!" and responded with a "Toronto!" which was greatly appreciated. Minnesota was celebrating the defeat, after several years, of the Michigan rugby team, and many quotations from expert, impartial sport writers were read in praise of their team. Finally the captain of the 1927 team handed a flaming torch to the captain of the 1928 team.

Next night there was the debate, "Resolved that the principle of legal censorship should be condemned by this House." The Toronto men, upholding the affirmative, won the decision of the House, 244 to 127, but lost the judge's decision. Mr. Smith of Toronto opened the debate by recounting the dangers and trials of the journey, and thereby got the House in an excellent humour. Mr. "Fatso" Palmer personally illustrated the breadth of the subject he was discussing. Mr. Plumtree asserted that censorship against experimental marriage propaganda was useless—marriage was a trial in any case. Mr. Kaplan of Minnesota had discovered the "listerine" of censorship. Mr. Kenny in his usual genial and attractive manner attracted the co-eds to his side of the House on "this censorship business." Mr. Adams was certain that no sausage is stronger than its weakest link. If legal censorship were to-day withdrawn there would be "60 beautiful girls appearing in a Minneapolis theatre to-night with no more clothes on than would make a light luncheon for a sick moth; there would come, from Hollywood in the golden west, films so hot that ice packs would have to be distributed at the door." He asserted that the luncheon he had had with the men from Toronto was "the best he had ever drunk." Mr. Smith in his rebuttal remarked that although they had been advertised as "Three Free-Thinkers from Toronto," Mr. Adams seemed to have mis-read this as "Three Free-Drinkers."

At University of Marquette in Milwaukee the experiences and impressions of the Toronto debaters were limited, since they arrived in at 7.00 p.m., debated at 7.30, and left the city the following 6.00 a.m. Here, also, the Toronto men lost the judge's decision, but gained the substantial majority of 66-44 in the audience vote, upholding the negative of the same motion that they had debated the previous night.

STUDENTS SLOVENLY IN MODE OF DRESS

Clothes Make the Man Decides U.C. Parliamentary Club at Open Meeting

SALESMEN MORE SNAPPY

The last meeting of the U.C. Parliamentary Club for the current year was held yesterday in the Common Room. Owing to a misunderstanding as to the starting there was a slightly smaller attendance. However, there were a goodly number of casual visitors who dropped in later on. After the reading of the minutes, Mr. Gilbert rose to speak in support of the motion, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House we would rather be recognized as bond salesmen than students." Mr. Gilbert stressed the natty appearance of the bond salesman in contrast to the slovenly appearance of the average student. Clothes made the man, or words to that effect, was the theme of his remarks. He was followed by Mr. Plumtre, the newly elected leader of the opposition, who in the course of a rambling address endeavoured to uphold the student. Mr. Plumtre was eloquence personified, but hardly convincing. As the other two speakers were not present, the Speaker, Mr. Baker, called a vote on the question. The government was defeated by a narrow majority and must now relinquish their seats to the opposition. The discussion which followed centred principally on the contrasting dress of the student and bond salesman. In fact, all some of the members seemed to know of the bond salesman was that he was reputed to be a snappy dresser. Mr. Catto took exception to the statement that college students are not well dressed. In his opinion they set the style, and even if poorly clad have the gift of wearing their clothes correctly. Among the other speakers were Messrs. MacGregor, Piper, Gilbert, Burton and Bell. Mr. Thompson, the final speaker, complimented the society on its keenness and enthusiasm and wished it every success in the future. Mr. Plumtre proposed that the next debate discuss the subject "Manners make the man." It has often been remarked that many of the student body regard the U.C. Parliamentary Club as a clique of a select few in which outsiders are not welcome. The officers of the society would like to correct this impression and say that the club is open to all members of U.C., that anyone may speak from the floor and incidentally gain much valuable experience both in parliamentary procedure and in public speaking.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Graft and Gratuity Govern Gifts

Do you believe in the giving and receiving of Christmas presents?

C. H. Jennings, II Trinity: "I certainly do not believe in Christmas presents when they tend to commercialize the Christmas spirit. Too often, due to ulterior motives, the giving of a present is regarded as an investment."

W. K. Allan, Conservatory of Music: "No. Chiefly because you usually have to give away more than you receive. When we came into the world we had nothing; if we give away more than we get, we shall soon be in a sorry fix."

Miss T. T. M., II St. Hilda's: "Don't be impertinently foolish! Of course all girls love Christmas presents. They like giving them because of the pleasure of buying them, and receiving them because of the pleasure of showing them to others."

Mary Miller, IV Yr. Household Economics, U.C.: "Gee, yes—especially the receiving part!"

M. J. D. Carson, II Victoria: "I do not. It is all damned foolishness. But I don't mind receiving them."

D. W. Gray, II Forestry: "Certainly I do. But they must be given just through joy of giving and without any ulterior motive."

Former Editor Surprised By University Police

An interested visitor to the office of "The Varsity" was Mr. Frank L. Barber, who was editor of the paper twenty years ago. Mr. Barber graduated with the class of 1906 from S.P.S., and is now a prominent local bridge engineer. He made many interesting comparisons between the University of that day and that of to-day.

Mr. Barber seemed particularly surprised at the presence of University police on the campus. He did not think that this would have been tolerated by the students of a few years ago. He recalled that in his time "The Varsity" was printed downtown, and expressed himself as being very pleased with the present state of the paper.

A NEW COURSE PROFFERED FOR GRADUATE NURSES

Important Basic Sciences
Likely to be Included
Among Subjects

In the past it has been the custom throughout Ontario, as in other localities, for nurses in training at the hospitals to get their instruction from graduate nurses who have covered the same work. For some time there has been a feeling among hospital authorities that this method of training does not tend to increase the general knowledge of nurses, except with regard to routine matters. A suggestion was made that a special university course might be arranged, which would be open to graduate nurses, and covering subjects of importance in the nursing profession, especially to those nurses who are likely to be teaching student nurses. Professor Allan of the department of Organic Chemistry intimated that while this new one-year course had not been definitely approved of, it was likely to include such subjects as physiology, hygiene and chemistry when completed.

Any member may upon presentation of his membership card at the door introduce guests, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Tea will be served in the Graduate Dining Room between 3 p.m. and 4.30 p.m. at 25c per person.

SIX O'CLOCK MATINEE POPULAR IN SPAIN

Dr. Craigie Discusses Typical Moorish Architecture

SPANISH SONGS ENJOYED

Spain as it appears to a visitor was most vividly portrayed by Dr. Craigie in his illustrated lecture to the Spanish-Italian Club at Wymilwood last evening.

Dr. Craigie has recently returned from a European tour and several months of research work in Spain under one of the greatest scientists of the day, Signor Dajal, who, contrary to custom, is recognized in his own country not only by men engaged in scientific pursuits but by the people as a whole, and streets, buildings and statues bear his name.

Dr. Craigie, starting in the south, showed pictures of magnificent cathedrals, patios and recently unearthed types of Moorish architecture with colours impossible to reproduce. He spoke of the Giralda tower of Seville, of the Alcazar Palace inhabited by the Duke of Alba, and many typical Spanish homes.

An interesting feature was Dr. Craigie's account of working hours in Spain, where a siesta is enjoyed in the afternoon, a matinee commences at six in the evening, and the theatre after a nine o'clock dinner.

Mrs. Craigie, accompanied by Miss Grace Clough, sang most charmingly several Spanish songs by Falla and D'Alvarez. Signor Cano in his closing comments said that seldom had he heard such a fine conception of the Spanish spirit expressed in song, especially in La Partida, the Farewell Song.

The Club is deeply indebted to both Dr. and Mrs. Craigie for a most instructive and entertaining evening.

ST. MIKE'S DRAMATIC CLUB INAUGURATED YESTERDAY

Organization Will Promote Interest in Wholesome
Drama

The latest organization to be formed at St. Michael's College is the Dramatic Club, which held its inaugural meeting yesterday. The purpose of the new organization is to foster an interest in the wholesome drama, and it is intended to present one play each month for the remainder of the year. "Hamlet" will be the most ambitious undertaking of the season. The officers elected at yesterday's meeting are:

President: Ed. Sammons.
Secretary: Jack Davey.
Treasurer: Richard Steves.

The chief reason for forming the new organization was the success of the First Arts' presentation of "A Regiment of Two" on Monday night. This farce centres about the domestic difficulties of the Wilton family. The portrayal of the various feminine characters was particularly good, though the actors were feminine for the night only.

The cast:
Arthur Sewell played by Jack Austin
Ira Wilton Jack Davey
Harry Brentworth R. Steves
Reginald Dudley Pat O'Connor
John Buckner Ed. Sammons
Conrad Melzer Ray McCabe
Eliza Wilton Frank Walters
Grace Sewall W. Knapp
Laura Wilton Mike Dougherty
Lena, a German maid R. Heil

Saturday nights from 7 to 11 are reserved for student roller skating and the teaching of new steps in dancing at the University of Wisconsin.

ANNESLEY NOT UNDER UNIVERSITY POLICE

Escapes Civic Beat and University Jurisdiction

FORCES UNDERMANNED

Stating that the occurrence of Saturday night, when a woman student in residence at Annesley Hall was attacked by an unknown woman, Col. A. D. LePan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, said that this event was evidently a part of an epidemic of crimes of that sort which were sweeping the city. As the Annesley Hall is not in the University grounds and consequently out of the jurisdiction of the University police, it would then receive the same civic police protection as any private residence. But as the chief of the civic police has already stated that the force is undermanned, Annesley Hall will have to suffer the same proportionate decrease in police protection as any private residence. Authorities at Wymilwood and Annesley Hall have said that so far no knowledge of any action on the part of the University has come to their notice. Also that the occurrence is the first which has occurred this fall, and is also the first of its nature which has occurred for a number of years.

PLAYERS' GUILD PRESENTS ALL-CANADIAN PLAY

Splendid Comparison Made Between England and Canada

The Players' Guild should be very interested in Miss Jean Dow's production of "Crows" by Betti Primrose Sandford, since it is an all-Canadian play. It won the Canadian Women's Club prize of one hundred dollars for the best Canadian one-act play in 1922. It is the story of an old blind man who has made his home in our new country and whose daughter-in-law wants to take his little grandson back to England. A wonderful comparison between the two countries is worked out, and a great hope reflected in the old man's speeches.

This is to be the last meeting of the Guild this term, and its members are sure to find this production worthwhile.

'Varsity' Party Postponed

"The Varsity" Staff party which was to have been held next Thursday night has been postponed until after Christmas. Owing to the stress and strain of Christmas presents and exams, the committee feels that this arrangement will meet with unanimous approval from the scribes.

Cracking Coconuts Causes Cacophony Frolicking Females Fiendish Furore

It was a rainy muggy afternoon night. The pavements gleamed like a Valsparred table, while the street lights shone with the constancy of ever-ready flashlights. The cars splattered along the street; the trees dripped drops; the sidewalks walked, and the mist—well—mist.

When suddenly out of the dark, uncarolled (it was near Christmas too), and unsung, there hurried an oblong object. A crack like the shot of a gun, a cacophonous cadence of fiendish laughter, two stealthy figures bending over the broken fruit of an aristocratic genealogical tree.

Those intending to turn in copy for the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" are reminded that stories must be in the hands of the Editor in Hart House by Friday, December 16. SCHOLARSHIP MEN SOMETIMES FAIL

Sixty Per Cent. Get First Class
Honours in Their First Year

SOME STAGE COMEBACK

Sixty per cent. of all Matriculation Scholarship men get first class honours in their first year. About eighty per cent. repeat this achievement in their second year. The average who maintain this academic record for the junior and senior years runs over ninety per cent. Several first year men are practically always B.L'd and an occasional one is ploughed. About one each year stages a comeback in his sophomore year and gains first class honours after having missed out in his first year. Sometimes a man will gain them in his freshman year, miss in his second and win again in his third. The following are the figures:

	First Class Honours
Year.	Entrants	1st Yr.	2nd Yr.
1922	26	20	13
1923	21	9	6
1924	23	14	15
1925	25	15	12
1926	25	15	—

These scholarships are awarded by the University on the applicant's matriculation records. The scholarships, consisting of free tuition for the first year and for all succeeding years, providing the student continues to take first class honours, and a cash bonus of around $100, is provided by interest from funds given by different philanthropists, most prominent of these being Sir Edward Blake.

An investigation of the results of undergraduate sports by the Carnegie foundation is expected to influence the status of sports, especially football. Since the foundation finances many American schools, the results will be far reaching.

Commissioner of Finance Speaks
At Open Meeting of Commerce Club

CITY REVENUE EXPLAINED

The open meeting of the Commerce Club was held in the Women's Union last night. Professor H. A. Innis, honorary president of the club, was in the chair, and called on Professor H. R. Kemp to introduce the principal speaker of the evening, Mr. George H. Ross, Commissioner of Finance for the City of Toronto. In the course of his introduction, Professor Kemp remarked that in view of the decline of the apprenticeship system in commerce and finance, which rather lessened the amount of practical experience a student obtained, the club was very fortunate in being addressed by Mr. Ross, who could give them first hand knowledge on the subject.

"Canada is on the verge of the greatest era of prosperity she has ever known," said Mr. Ross in beginning his address. He invited his listeners who would have the opportunity of beginning their commercial life in this era. This country would be successful if she did not become drunk with her prosperity. The speaker then traced community life from its origin to its present involved condition. He described the various departments and commissions which exist within the municipality of Toronto. Mr. Ross explained the sources of city revenue and how it is spent and also the borrowing of money. This latter was illustrated with several concrete examples of lucrative deals Mr. Ross had made for the city, for as they say in Chicago, "He who tooteth not his own horn tooteth not." Success in financial operations is a result of being able to hide one's time and choose the market. Careful study of market conditions, intuition, and imagination are also important factors.

In the speaker's opinion graduates in commerce and finance would render invaluable aid to municipalities and corporations in working out the probable result of commercial deals. The Commissioner then presented the case for and against straight term (Continued on page 4)

THE COLLEGE MAN DOES NOT IGNORE THE CO-ED

A correspondent has raised the question as to whether or not the college man likes the co-ed sufficiently to escort her to University functions, and then goes on to chance her query to "Does the co-ed accept the escort of the college men?" By inference she answers her own questions, the first in the negative and the second in the affirmative, thus pointing out that the escort of the male undergraduate is not always proffered in the larger institutions such as the University of Toronto, although it is forthcoming in smaller colleges.

We believe our correspondent to be mistaken on one side of the question at least. The average college man is not so easily nonplussed that he fears the wit of his brilliant female class-mate, nor is the clever woman student so common that, what may be an exception, should hold good as a general rule,—all of which may be realized by a glance over the strenuous social campaign that graced our preparatory school days. While it is pleasing to believe that the woman student accepts the escort of the college man and is cut at his aloofness, it should be pointed out, in all fairness to the men, that the size alone of an institution such as this prohibits social activities between the sexes. In the smaller colleges opportunities to make and acquire friendships are provided by the very smallness in numbers, but in the large class where, after four years, a man's acquaintance among his fellow men may be but slight, it is difficult to imagine how he could become acquainted with many women students.

We dare say that there are any number of fair co-eds whom, he believes, would make most acceptable partners at a college function, but, being a gentleman and they acceptable, he could hardly dare to make overtures. Another fact which must be recognized is that with a large number of the male undergraduate body permanent residents of Toronto, it is not surprising if their friendships be made or initiated from among or by those people with whom they have come in daily contact in years previous to their registration at the University, nor is it surprising that the friendless freshman male be guided in his selection of "dates" by those who are permanent residents.

That the activities of the University in general, and Hart House in particular, are misinterpreted would seem apparent. In every sense of a man's club it is essential that its activities be regulated by and for the members. The Masquerade is strictly a social function for the benefit of those who have paid their membership fees, and as such may the Athletic At-Home also be considered, although here the fact that the latter is a party purely in honour of the male "T" holders in the University should be recognized.

That initiative by the women in the realms of sport, theatricals and social activities would be welcomed, and that they would receive the hearty co-operation of the men, we have no doubt. We do believe that women cheer leaders would be a pleasing innovation at our rugby games just as we believe that whatever parties they might care to hold could be made attractive to the undergraduate body. Are the women forthcoming to take the initiative in these directions? Surely the opportunity is there.

The 60-40 basis of co-education is not a fault of the men but of the girls. Provided that the co-ed is either good looking, has an attractive personality, is a good mixer, or that she is all three combined, we should say that the male undergraduate would be only too delighted to take advantage of her company, and that she would find little room for bitterness over his lack of wit, appreciation or "fair-mindedness." While the number of women students in this

CHAPTER ONE
The Reward of Virtue

It was night. It was very night, in fact, and the beautiful young damsel walked rapidly and furtively across Queen's Park, casting furtive glances at the dark shadows of the shrubbery. Her volume of Wordsworth was not good company, and she felt lonely, frightened and fearful. Would she ever reach Wymilwood and its conventional serenity. She wondered.

Suddenly I—a dark bewhiskered figure arose from a clump of beewax-berries—Was it Leon Trotsky? Was it Rip Van Winkle—or was it worse? She screamed. "Stop," he cried, "gimme a dime! I wanta cupacawfee." "I have no dime," she said, "I have just been down to the University Press—oh, kind sir, release me!" "Gimme a dime! I'm starvin'."

"I cannot."

"Then gimme me that book—Wordsworth? Gimme!"

"Oh, spare me!"

Suddenly I—a stalwart hand-some figure leapt out of a man-hole! Was it Captain Christie! You can bet that it wasn't.

"Oh, sir, save me from this miscreant! He wants my Oxford Wordsworth!" cried the fair young maiden.

"I do not! I want a dime for a cupacawfee."

"Avaunt, you rascal!" cried the young stalwart. "Stay! Here is a quarter—buy yourself a sandwich too."

"God bless you, sir," said the mendicant, biting the quarter.

"No more of that," commanded our hero, as the fellow crawled away on his hands and knees.

When he had disappeared in the direction of Wycliffe, the fair young maiden turned toward her protector.

"Oh, sir, you have saved me from worse than death—the loss of my Wordsworth. Who are you? How can I ever repay you?"

"I am Dick Dare of Knox College," he said simply.

"Are you one of the vigilantes?"

"No, I am one of the theologs," he said even more simply.

"How can I repay you?"

"Invite me somewhere for tea. That was my last quarter."

"I am penniless. And they would not let you dine at Wymilwood with me."

"Ah, then I must starve."

"No, no." Just then a La-Salle-Cadillac drove up, and out stepped a radiant fraternity-president.

"Amaryllis," said he to our hero—

DOES THE COLLEGE MAN LIKE THE CO-ED?

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In many colleges on this continent there is much discussion as to whether or not the college man likes the co-ed, and whether he escorts her to the various college functions.

It has been found that in the majority of smaller colleges he does, while in the larger institutions he is rather inclined "not to."

In view of the increasing independence of women, I think in the case of Varsity the question should be changed. Does the co-ed accept the escort of college men? Here she unquestionably does, but is that escort always proffered?

At more and more Hart House affairs, boys from out of town are bringing girls from "home," while those from Toronto are bringing "town" girls. At the class parties alone, does a purely Varsity crowd gather, especially at the first year ones, where all years and all faculties are well represented.

Why should this be? Does the man find more attractive girls off the campus than on it, or does it flatter his ego to be with some sweet young thing rather than a class mate who got an "A" to his "C" in last week's test?

Now let us consider the case of the co-ed. Perhaps she may not measure up to the high standards set by the college man, but as every Jill has her Jack, she may be quite satisfactory to someone else. Then think of it, men, she may even prefer the society of some non-college man. Have you ever considered that the more collegiate of the sex are on Yonge Street rather than Queens Park?

Should she be debarrd from all college social activities, or even the more desirable of them, because the men have monopolized the tickets to take "outsiders"? Why should she not have a right to line up for Masquerade tickets, and take her own pet "outsider"? Why should her registration card not be good for a ticket to the "Follies"? And why should she not have a chance for a ticket to the Athletic At-Home?

After all, Varsity is operating as much for the benefit of the women students as the men, or it should be, and they should have equal privileges.

University is nearly commensurate with that of the men, the fact must not be overlooked that the male student in any of the professional faculties has little, if any, opportunity of meeting his fairer sisters in Arts, and that, while she might dazzle him in a conversation on the literature of the Middle Ages, he could, on the other hand, raise her to lofty heights on Steel or gratify her with Ailments.

We appreciate "Co-ed's" viewpoint but not her poignancy. We should like to see evidences of friendship between University men and women, and we should be delighted if both of them could, together, attend our College functions. The year 1928 is "Leap Year," and "Co-ed" has broken the ice. It is now up to the rest of the women to show their initiative. We pledge support.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Lest the tenor of a news article on the National Federation of Canadian University Students appearing in yesterday's issue of "The Varsity" be misinterpreted, it might be well to point out that telegraphic news contact has been established between Queen's, McGill and Varsity for some two years now, and not only as a sporting service between Varsity and McGill one year ago, as reported. While the service never did function particularly well between Queen's and ourselves, copy has very often been exchanged between McGill and Varsity to the mutual benefit of the undergraduate newspapers of both universities. While the daily despatch that at one time featured this exchange has been dropped, the service is still available if any big story should "break," such as the Centenary celebrations which were covered at length from this end. The further development of this scheme into an all-Canadian service is a matter that appears open to advisement.

JUNIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS ON THURSDAY AND FRIDAY NIGHTS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The basketball squad leaves for the first half of its holiday tour on Friday of this week. The boys have several games scheduled for Buffalo and the vicinity which will take them well into the middle of next week. Perhaps the stiffest will be with the University of Buffalo, which is one of the fastest outfits in that part of the country. After the holiday season the team leaves on the second half of its trip, which will take the boys to New York, where they are scheduled to play six games. In all there are nine games on this second jaunt, and the teams to be met are among the best in the game.

Perhaps it would not be amiss to mention the fact that the Senior hockey outfit will give its regular demonstration of the "popular winter pastime" in Madison Square Gardens this year. This annual demonstration of the superiority of Canadian hockey is an annual fixture with the Varsity squad, and this year should prove no exception to the general rule. It is really one of the most beneficial things in the pre-season training period, though not for any hockey that the boys learn on the trip. True, they may acquire some team play and all that while opposing the American teams, but the main advantage that the trip has is that it serves as probably nothing else would to get the boys out to practice and make them work. The promise of a trip to the City of the Bright Lights is enough to make anyone put pep into practice.

Whether that is the only reason or not is hard to say, and while we are inclined to think that the boys would be practicing just as seriously if they were going to Weston there is no denying the fact that they certainly are getting in some hardicks. The American exponents of the game will have to be at the top of their form to stop the Blue and White, and even then it is more than doubtful that they will be able to hold them in check. The team looks better now than it has for some time, and the play improves at every practice.

Few sports hold the same appeal for the average spectator as boxing and wrestling, which is due perhaps to the personal element in the B. and W. contests. There is nothing impersonal about these sports; it is every man for himself, with a case of the survival of the fittest or the fightest if you like. The point is, however, that the annual Junior Assault-at-Arms will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week, and according to the reports from those in close touch with the realm of fistiana it promises to be one of the best in history. None of the boys competing have won an assault, and there should be no lopsided contests. Of one thing you may be sure—there will be no "set-ups"—everyone will be in there to win.

ASSAULT-AT-ARMS REVISED AT U.C.

Freshmen Take the Lead by Slight Margin Over Sophs

BOXING PREDOMINATES

The first U.C. Assault in several years was held last night in the upper gym, Hart House. Some thirty enthusiasts turned out to watch what proved to be an unusually good inter-collegiate assault. There were few bouts, but nearly every contestant showed a good degree of skill.

Boxing predominated and one or two of the winners showed great promise. P. H. Sprott, 135 lbs., met a plucky fighter in Reid, but was too clever for him. In the finals, Sprott showed ability to land blows of every description. His shorter opponent, Clarkson, was forced to take the count of nine twice by rights to the body, but came back pluckily until the middle of the third round.

F. A. Fell, 125 lbs., was matched against a lighter man in Allen, but showed signs of real speed and skill. At the outset, Allen was forced down for nine by a body blow. He fought hard, but had to be withdrawn from the ring in the third round.

D. B. Deeks, 145 lbs., won a decision from Beare, hitting rather straighter and more quickly than his opponent. In the same weight, Cook and Thomson provided the fireworks

BASKETBALL FINALS PLAYED TO-NIGHT

Vic. and U.C. Women Contend for Championship in Hart House Gym

INTERFACULTY SERIES

In Hart House gym to-night the U.C. women's Senior basketball team will meet the Vic. Senior team in the first of two final games to decide the Interfaculty championship.

The following are the probable line-ups and numbers of the players:—

- VIC.
1. Ede Buchanan (captain), forward—A steady shot, who gets surer the more she is guarded.
 2. Jean Bateman, forward—Gets some splendid long shots and plays a steady all-round game.
 3. Marian Forward, side centre—The quickest player in last year's Intercollegiate turn-out.
 4. Dot Ker, jumping centre—Plays any position and plays it well. Brilliant floor work, offensive and defensive.
 5. Grace Keffer, guard—Plays a heady and brilliant game.
 6. Al Muckle, guard—The steady-state player in the Vic. line-up, guards like the Rock of Gibraltar.
- U.C.
2. Mildred Wilkins (captain), guard—Of Intercollegiate fame.
 3. Phil Howard, guard—A steady all-round player.
 4. Emma Weir, side centre—One of the fastest players on the floor.
 6. Constance Williams, jumping centre—An undergraduate from Vassar. Although unaccustomed to our rules, plays a splendid game.
 7. Constance Smith, forward—A good shot, sure and steady, plays a good all-round game.
 8. Willene Wallace, forward—Another Intercollegiate star who is absolutely dependable.

Unfortunately Mildred Wilkins, Phil Howard and Jean Bateman have been unable to play for the last few days owing to illness. Both teams are hoping that they will be on the floor for part of the game anyhow. Although both of U.C.'s defence players have been ill and are uncertain quantities for the game, U.C. has made no move to postpone the game and rearrange the plans in any way. Both teams have representatives from the Intercollegiate squad of last year, Ede Buchanan, Dot Ker and Marian Forward from Vic, and Willene Wallace and Emma Weir from U.C.

Interfaculty Hockey

There will be a meeting of the managers or other representatives of all Interfaculty hockey teams in the Board Room of the Athletic Association, Hart House, tomorrow afternoon (Thursday) at five o'clock, for the purpose of appointing a committee of management for the Jennings Cup series. All faculties are asked to see that their representatives are present.

Two Hockey Teams In Series from Victoria

The Women's Athletic Directorate has granted permission to Victoria to enter both a first and a second hockey team in the Interfaculty series. The permit is for one year only, and has been made with the following conditions: That only ten players may be signed for the first team, and that no interchange of players of any kind may be made between the two teams after the first game has been played. This is the first time any college has entered more than one team in the hockey tournaments.

CO-ED GYM JOTS

The first game in the final round of the basketball Interfaculty tournament is to be played to-night in Hart House gym at 8 o'clock. The contending teams are from Victoria and University College. Both teams are composed of experienced players, and both have representatives of the Intercollegiate team of last year. The game promises excitement and thrills aplenty and well merits the support of many students not only from Vic and U.C. but from the other faculties.

"Oh, so I did," she remembered. "Good-night, Mr. Dare," and with a purr the La-Salle-Cadillac was off.

Dick Dare sat down under a tree to weep. He looked about him eagerly. The beggar was gone—and so was Amariylla. No hope of catching the beggar and getting back his two bits. No supper at all. He sat down and began to eat acorns and twigs.

A policeman appeared, too late as usual. "Now," he shouted, "move along! What are you hangin' around here for anyway—be on your way or I'll lock you up!" Dick Dare arose and looked at the sombre December moon. "So," he said, "thus are heroes rewarded." He thought a moment, then suddenly smote the policeman in the midriff, and ran at top speed for Knox College.

CORRESPONDENCE

called "University College Men's Follies," or else have some skits put on by the women. Why is there not a visitors' gallery, open to women, that they may benefit when Hart House Union has some prominent speaker?

If we had an equal number of men and women cheer leaders at the rugby games, I'll warrant the teams would not complain of lack of support. Why should all the rooting be confined to men? Are the co-eds too frail to be allowed to cheer for their own teams?

Diogenes' question relevant to smoking rooms was well taken. It is not the fact that smoking rooms for women are necessary, but the fact that if they want them they should be able to have them, that counts. Surely if a girl wants to smoke that is a question between herself and her family, and if when she is away from her family she disregards their feelings in the matter, as most boys do, it remains her own problem and hers alone. Why the faculty should intercede for a girl's parents, and leave the men to go their own way, is incomprehensible to me.

How about it men? Do these arguments not appeal to your much vaunted "fair-mindedness"? How about it girls? Are we always to have co-education on a 60-40 basis, with the girls on the short end?

Co-ed.

WITH THE THEATRES

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

Once more the Hippodrome bill is distinctly good. In fact we are inclined to place it as the best yet. All advertisements to the contrary, nevertheless the feature presentation on the screen is Bert Lytell and Lois Wilson in "The Lone Wolf." The story has an Atlantic liner for a background, a gang of jewel thieves, the heroine in distress, and the maligned hero. It spots, especially towards the end; it drags horribly, but the photography is of such excellent quality as to hold your attention. There is the usual News Review and the comedy, thank heaven not "the Collegians!"

The Keith-Albee vaudeville opens with Chapelle and Carleton in an acrobatic act that is entitled "A few things you haven't seen." They certainly were good. Hope Vernon has a really good voice and her imitation of a violin was unique.

Skelly and Heit and Co. undoubtedly featured the bill. It is one of the best bits of comedy ever done on a Toronto stage. And Hal Neiman ran them a close second. His presentation was another unique one and one well done. Keith-Albee vaudeville seems to be featuring unique acts this year.

The Brown Derby Band is one of those rare combinations of jazz and classic music. Their imitations of famous musicians and conductors are nothing short of phenomenal. But their act is rather spoiled by the introduction of a dancing act that is ordinary.

The feature is of special interest to students, as Bert Lytell was educated in this city.

of the evening, Thomson winning by a slight margin with the aid of a strong right. Thomson took the finals from Deeks by a knock-out after himself having been in a very wobbly condition in the second round. Deeks showed considerable skill against a strong opponent, but Thomson's right was invincible.

Bell and Smily gave an aggressive exhibition in the light-heavy class. Smily's blows were very inaccurate until the third round, when he gained a good margin and the decision.

The only wrestling bout of the evening was taken quickly by G. Wilson, who secured two falls from Mueller in about three minutes.

The fencing (refereed by J. T. Dymond) was taken by Hap. Gilbert; Bell was runner-up.

The freshmen led with 19 points; sophomores came second with 16 points, and juniors and seniors scored 8 and 3 points respectively.

play after that hour. All teams must provide each player with a number on the back of his jersey.

Managers are reminded that they are required to submit the name of a man who has indicated his willingness to serve as a referee for two or three games during the series.

Prospects are particularly bright for Interfaculty basketball this year. There are nineteen teams entered, which is more than ever before, and it is estimated that some two hundred and more players will participate. This is certainly the largest interfaculty series in Canada, and will compare very favourably with many of the large American University series.

It is from the interfaculty teams that many of our present intermediate and senior stars have graduated, and the growing popularity of the game among the athletes of the colleges bodes well for future Varsity teams.

LARGE ENTRY LISTS FOR JUNIOR ASSAULT ASSURE FINE BOUTS

Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Contests Set for To-day and To-morrow

PRELIMS THIS AFTERNOON

More Entries in Almost Every Event Shows the Greater Interest This Year

For the Junior Assault-at-Arms this year the largest entry list in years has been made, and that in itself means the best assault in years. Interest in the assault has been the highest for some time, and those who attend as spectators are assured of some real neat exhibitions, not excluding one or two "grudge" bouts. Last year but one evening was necessary to run off the assault, but this time it is necessary to use this afternoon and possibly one or two bouts to-morrow afternoon too. In the gym this afternoon all entrants for the 135 boxing are warned to be on the floor in good time and ready to go. Likewise the wrestlers of the 145 class are warned to be ready to do their stuff in the afternoon.

In the 112 boxing only one entry was received, and therefore no bout in that class, but Brownlee has stepped up to the 118 weight. In the wrestling there was a dearth of entrants for both 112 and 117, Golden being the only one signing the lists for the latter weight. Therefore no bouts in either of these weights. The other weights are more than well represented, and as high as ten are clamouring for the 135 boxing title.

The following is the draw:—

- BOXING
- 112 Brownlee (S.P.S.).
- 118 Shields (S.P.S.) vs Rolston (Dents).
- Woodhouse (Meds) vs Brownlee (S.P.S.).
- 125 Dixon (Meds) vs Fell (U.C.).
- Mooney (S.P.S.) bye.
- 135 Preliminary—fights in afternoon.
- Harwitz (Dents) vs Clarkson (U.C.).
- Sprout (U.C.) vs Morgan (S.M.C.).
- Steele (Meds) vs Rapsey (Trin.).
- Boynton (Vic.) vs Wolstoff (S.P.S.).
- Slater (Vic.) vs Lochhead (S.P.S.).
- Semi-finals—1 vs 5; 3 vs 2; 4 bye.
- 145 Toll (Vic.) vs Cool (U.C.).
- Whitaker (Dents) vs Deeks (U.C.).

Jennings' Cup Managers

VICTORIA CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION MEETS

Mr. J. H. Iliffe, of Museum, Speaks on Relation Between Archaeology and Classics

SPARTA DEVOID OF ART?

"Archaeology is an occupation for a man of strong physique," said Mr. J. H. Iliffe, Keeper of the Classical Section of the Royal Ontario Museum, reading a paper at the Victoria College Classical Association last night. The speaker's topic was the relation between archaeology and classics and kindred subjects.

"Archaeology is the handmaiden of the Classics," remarked Mr. Iliffe. He qualified this statement, however, by saying that archaeology should complement the Classics, and be neither inferior nor superior to them. Archaeology led the way in human thought, which followed some distance behind the newest developments in historical research. Archaeology had thrown by the board all chronological systems which had been computed by guesswork or tradition. The discovery of Cretan objects in Egyptian tombs set definitely the date of the Minvan Epoch—the Egyptians having a definite system of dates.

"The making of pottery was a woman's job," explained Mr. Iliffe. The most definite archaeological remains were always pottery, which was imperishable. By examining the potsherds in an excavation, it was possible to set the dates of the actual habitation on the spot. If new designs crept into the pottery, it was an indication that the men had brought in new wives.

"Was Sparta devoid of art?" asked the speaker, mentioning the fact that he had unearthed the bust of an artistically perfect statue of a warrior of the period 500-480 B.C. in the Temple of the Bronze House at Sparta.

Two violin solos were rendered during the evening, and another paper was read about the Country Life of the Roman.

Singing Stalwarts Suppress Sighs Some Sing Sweet Songs in Showers

Snatches from Brahms mingled with the chorus of "Mississippi Mud" to the mutual detriment. Chopin's Prelude formed a working background for "Miss Annabelle Lee," while the "Minuet in G" fought a losing battle with "I'm Gonna Dance Wit de Guy wot bring me"—A musician's nightmare? or perhaps a radio fan's conception of Valhalla? Neither. Merely a daily meeting of the Hart House Locker Room Concert Chorus. "Lives there the man . . ." who has never heard of this organization? Then let him descend to the Hart House Locker Room any afternoon at about forty-three. If he is musical he will be carried out. If he is not musical he will run out of his own accord.

Surprising what an impetus to vocalization showers are. Even the most timid character will give voice to his soul's innermost emotions under its invigorating caress. Only yesterday, while indulging in our daily slosh, we suddenly heard a drawn-out bellow, which slowly took the form of "Invictus" issuing from a neighbouring shower. Peering around the partition we beheld a little inconsequential man writhing under a cold shower and announcing to an awestruck world that he was "the captain of his soul," etc. Obviously the dampening effect of the shower was purely confined to the physical.

The showers are bad enough, but the locker rooms—Sweet Artichokes of Jerusalem! If the spirits of songs linger around the place where they met their death, the Locker Room must be a veritable Brewery for spirits. They say that singing is good exercise. Then why the Gymnasium? With the Locker Rooms it is superfluous.

Some day perhaps the executive will take steps to have the basses to the left and tenors to the right. However, for the present we must be content with the marked improvement in repertoire and vocalization apparent since the inauguration of the noon sing-songs.

PLAYERS' GUILD J. W. JOHNSON WINS PRESENTS CAN. PLAY I.O.D.E. SCHOLARSHIP

"The Crows" by Mrs. Sandiford, Directed by Miss Godfrey, Scores Success

ROLES WELL PORTRAYED

The Players' Guild was entertained by a Canadian play, "The Crows," by Mrs. Sandiford, presented by Miss Godfrey. The roles, especially that of the old man, were portrayed remarkably well.

The plot was the antithesis between love and duty. Rose, the daughter-in-law, is disgusted with Canada, and wishes to return to England with her fatherless son, leaving the blind old man in a home. She reiterates that she has always tried to do her duty, but shows an utter lack of love, and even of sympathy. Martin, her son, must be kept away from his grandfather, whose imagination is taking him from his studies, and whose fiddling is disturbing the neighbours. Martin, on the other hand, is seized

DEAN SECOMBE AS HOST MEETS DENTAL FRESHMEN

Warden Bickersteth Speaks on Hart House at First Year Social

Dean Secombe of the Faculty of Dentistry was host to the Dental freshmen for an evening of music and bridge at his residence last night.

Mr. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, and principal guest of the evening, gave a short but very interesting and informative talk on the House. After a short review of its history, he stressed its advantages and general appeal, and he was most emphatic that the newer university man should not only use the House as much as possible but that he should do his utmost to become directly concerned in its activities.

Dean Secombe expressed himself well pleased with the year and recommended the suggestions of Mr. Bickersteth.

It is noteworthy that, owing to the small class this year, last night was the first time since Dr. Secombe became Dean that an entire year has been able to attend a function of this kind in total.

NO ADDED SHIELDS FOR THE GREAT HALL STATES THE WARDEN

Practical Difficulties Stop the Intention to Add to List

LATE HOSTILITY NOT CAUSE

Aesthetic Effect Would Suffer
if Further Additions
Were Made

That no additions to the arms of universities which are placed in the Great Hall of Hart House has been a source of much inquiry by members of this University and visitors to Hart House. Mr. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, explained the reasons for this in a statement given to "The Varsity" yesterday.

"It is not contemplated that any additional arms will be added to those already in the Great Hall. The reason for this is not any hostility to former enemy nations, which would be voted by most people to-day as ridiculous. There are other practical difficulties in the suggestion. In the first place, if the arms of the universities of former enemy nations were added it would be impossible not also to add those of the neutral nations, and indeed of all the nations of the world not already represented, as those of Norway, Sweden, Holland, South America, China and others. Secondly, the addition of many scores of such arms would spoil the present aesthetic effect in the Great Hall. The number there now are sufficient to add colour to the Hall, without any overpowering effect.

"Thirdly, the arms which are at present there are of historical significance, insofar as they were chosen in 1916, and represent the chief universities of the countries which at that time constituted the allied and associated nations. The arms themselves were procured by personal application to each university, the authorities of which were asked to send a full-sized coloured drawing, and then were reproduced in every detail.

"So much is it intended to keep the arms they were in 1916 that even where new universities have been established in the British Empire, these have not been added to the list. For instance, the University of Montreal

FELLOWSHIPS ANNOUNCED FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

All Applications Must Be Submitted Prior to Specified Dates

Three fellowships of great interest to graduate students are announced for 1928-1929—first, the Ellen Richards Research Prize, of the value of $2,000, to be awarded for study in Science; second, a fellowship offered by the International Federation of University Women, of the value of $250, for the study of Science; and, third, a fellowship, of the value of $1,500, offered by the American Association of University Women, for research.

Applications for these fellowships must be in by January 15th, March 15th and January 1st, 1928, respectively. In the case of the first and second fellowships, Canadian applications must be sent in well ahead of these dates to Professor Carrie M. Derrick, Convener of the Scholarships Application Committee, McGill University, Montreal, Que.

Full particulars of these awards may be learned at the office of the Graduate School, Room 220, Simecoe Hall.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Co-ed Courters Cause Contention

Do you think that University men are inclined to bring outside girls to Varsity dances to the exclusion of co-eds?

Miss E. I. Godfrey, IV Eng. and Hist., U.C.: "No, not the nice University men."

D. C. Hill, B.A., Knox: "I didn't, until after she graduated."

Miss I. R. E. Brown, I Moderns, U.C.: "Yes, I believe that some of the first and second year men are inclined to do so, but the majority of University men are not."

Miss E. C. Norton, IV Moderns, U.C.: "No. While there are undoubtedly some men, especially in the first year, who bring outsiders, I think that the majority prefer to bring women whose interests are more or less similar to their own."

Mr. H. E. Armstrong, III Dents: "I do. Freshmen generally meet co-eds in residence first, and take them out, but later are inclined to pass them up for outsiders whose homes are in the city and are therefore not hampered by residence rules as to late leaves, nights out, entertaining at home, etc."

C. G. H. Moffat, I Pass, U.C.: "Yes, but not enough to exclude the popular co-ed."

H. F. Davidson, II Pass, U.C.: "Yes. When co-eds, especially from residences, are taken to dances, they are too prone to gossip till the early hours on the merits and demerits of their male escorts."

W. R. Wright, I S.P.S.: "As I am a celebrated cynic, and do not believe in women at all, I am not directly concerned with the matter."

Xmas Fund Suggested For Members of Hart House Staff

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

It is the custom at Christmas time to give some tangible expression of goodwill towards those on whose services we rely throughout the year, and the House and Hall Committees considered that members of Hart House would be glad to have such an opportunity. The Board of Stewards fully agreed with the proposal, and members will find boxes placed at convenient places in Hart House where, if they so desire, they may make a contribution to a Fund which will be distributed among the Staff at Christmas.

J. H. Parkin, Chairman House Committee.
Kenneth E. Perfect, Secretary House Committee.
Horace B. Speakman, Chairman Hall Committee.
Frederick A. Wansbrough, Secretary Hall Committee.

Trinity is Continuing Appeal for a Larger Endowment Fund

In order to complete the financial campaign started last spring for an increased endowment, Trinity College will continue efforts this year throughout the province until the objectives of the campaign are reached. Some $300,000 has already been secured, and as much more is needed. Several large endowments have been made to the college lately, and have been the means of strengthening the staff.

Students Must Suffer Penalty When Registration Cards Lost

Those who have the misfortune to lose their registration card will have to suffer the penalty of going around all year with a typewritten note from the Registrar's office testifying to their identity. No duplicate cards are being issued this year in order to do away with the custom of trading cards. Statements of identity must be secured from the Registrar's office when necessary.

WILL YOU CONTRIBUTE TO THE HART HOUSE CHRISTMAS BOX

The House and Hall Committees are to-day making an appeal on behalf of their staff in Hart House that should not go unanswered by the male undergraduates of this University. Careless in many things, taking the privileges of the House with a free and easy grace, the average man cannot step within the doors of this institution without fully realizing the devotion of the staff, the care evident in providing for his comfort, or the premium that has been placed by the staff on the spic and span.

Tipping of help, for any manner of service, is distinctly taboo—and we would have it so. There have been times when many, no doubt, felt obligated for some service, but, conforming to the rules of the House, did not offer monetary reward but did show appreciation. An opportunity is now provided to show gratitude in a more material way,—that of donating some small sum which may be divided among the staff.

There need be but little sacrifice for any student. While the sum each may give may be small, with so many using the House the aggregate will be large. The majority realize this, and the greater number are quite willing to contribute. Unfortunately, forgetfulness or neglect has led many, in the past, to fall down more than badly, and in certain years the sum collected has scarcely been worth the labour involved.

If every male undergraduate should contribute but the small amount of ten cents, over three hundred dollars would be subscribed,—a sum that should materially show the staff that the devotion and labours of its members is appreciated by those using the House. And we venture to say that such an expression will be more than returned in future service.

It is the men's obligation, one which they may meet best to-day, and to-day at their earliest convenience they should aid in spreading a little of that Christmas cheer here which they might comfortably expect to find at home.

A LIFE LINE

With the decision of Trinity to withdraw from the Debating Union on account of lack of interest displayed, there arises the question—"Why will the students not support debates?"

There must be something wrong, something radically wrong, when an intellectual body of students, such as those attending the University of Toronto, cannot summon up enough interest in current affairs and the anything-but-effeminate art of being able to talk well, to make debates popular.

Is it that the subjects do not appeal to the majority?—the man who plods across the campus to his lectures every day, and who has never been at a debate in the University?—nor ever has the desire to do?

Suggestions are continually being made as to methods for making debating one of the University's popular pastimes. Debating and debates are by no means pink pills for pale students that must

CHAPTER TWO
The Heart of a Furnace

It was a week before Christmas and Dick Dare was free. He had received 99% in every examination, and his Christmas sermon had been accepted by The Canadian Student, The Telegram and Collier's Eye. All of these—only his brave pen stood between him and starvation, for editors never pay till after Christmas, since they have to buy presents for all their wives and all their politicians. So Dick Dare sat alone, staring as usual. No breakfast, no luncheon, no dinner—hungrily he tore a button off his coat and swallowed it. He felt as though someone had hit him on the belt buckle with a pebble. He arose—food! food! that was all that mattered. He walked up St. George Street rapidly. Snow was falling, and old gentlemen passed in spats and limousines. University College people never even looked at him. They are like that. In the window of the Women's Union was a hallow-wreath, and in Dick Dare's inwards there was a yelping void. On he went, on, past the fraternity houses loud with raucous laughter, past the St. George Apartments and their opulent mystery, past the Stork Club, where good Torontonians go when they retire on the proceeds, and now he was North of Bloor—in that land of mansions and magnificence!

Before an imposing edifice stood a gentleman. "Boy!" he cried. But Dick Dare ignored him. "Boy!"—and Dick Dare turned on him.

"I am not a boy—I am a man. I have suffered—I am from Knox College!"

"S tough, boy. Do you want to turn an honest penny?"

"No, I want to own one. They are so rare," answered our hero.

"Then," said the gentleman, "come and fix my furnace. My furnace-man found my stock. They took him away an hour ago. Wait, do you drink?" "Water," said Dick Dare simply. "Well, you can't go swimming in my house." They went inside, down into a gleaming cellar walled with porphyry. The gentleman handed Dick a shovel, and left. Viciously Dick worked, and then sat down on the coke to weep. Suddenly—he jumped up and threw a whole pail of cold water into the furnace. The furnace leapt for him, and he ducked as it hit the other wall. "Now," he said, "others will have a cold Christmas as well as I!" Readers, a radical was being born—a free-thinker—a socialist—Knox College was far away.

Suddenly a light patter of feet—a lovely girl came down the stairs—It was Amaryllis! She looked at him—he looked in amazement from a pile be sugar-coated, and coaxed down with the promise of something good to eat afterwards. There is "something to them"! They have some material good!

Dalhousie University in Halifax has realized that a change was needed in the old debating system, and they now hold debates on such popular subjects as "Should a woman continue her career after marriage?" with men and women debating together or against each other. These debates have large attendances and are interesting to the students, besides fostering that elusive spirit of good-hearted rivalry between the men and women.

There is no reason why debates of this kind should not prove successful here in Interfaculty debates, and provide a reviving life line for the slowly sinking interest in debates.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

HARVARD GLEE CLUB

Those whose fortune it is to remain in Toronto during the Christmas vacation will have the opportunity of attending one of the finest musical events of the year, namely, the concert by the Harvard Glee Club in Convocation Hall. The Harvard Glee Club is not the organization one might mentally conceive of upon seeing the name. In other words, it is not the usual college glee club whose social activities and opportunities are many and whose capacity for music is limited. One could perhaps judge the quality of the Harvard Glee Club from the fact that it has performed Beethoven's Choral Symphony with the Boston Symphony Orchestra—a work which the Mendelssohn Choir did last spring—and that it has been invited by the French government to sing at the universities of France. The conductor of the choir, Dr. Davidson, is a man of outstanding ability, a man whose ability approaches genius. Therefore everyone would be well advised to make arrangements to hear this organization even should it entail an earlier return to Toronto than would take place under ordinary conditions.

She screamed—"Wait," said Dick, "let me have that book you are reading." He looked at it. "You never got THAT from the University Library," he said sternly, and tossed it into the furnace that blazed furiously.

"You have saved me again," she said.

TO-NIGHT: JR. ASSAULT SEMI-FINALS; HOCKEY, JRS. vs. PARKDALE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Those who are not too busy preparing for Xmas Term exams are offered two interesting items for to-night. Relaxation may be had either in Hart House or at the Arena downtown. The semi-finals for the Junior Assault-at-Arms are being run off in the upper gym, while the Junior hockey squad opens the O.H.A. season by playing Parkdale Canoe Club in the first part of a double header.

Elsewhere in this issue is announced the draw for the preliminaries of the Assault, and often as not these prelims are as full of interest as the finals. As has been mentioned before, previous winners are ineligible, and that practically insures the absence of one-sided bouts in which one of the combatants is pummeled unmercifully. There are two kinds of fight fans—one thoroughly enjoys a slug fest and is disappointed if that appetite is not satisfied; the other type of fan realizes that the primary motive is boxing and not slugging, and that does not mean he disapproves of any tendency of the ring artists to mix it.

Wrestling is not as popular with the fans as is boxing. On the mat the action is slower, and at times when two are evenly matched, nothing more interesting than grunts emanating from the floor. And yet when two good wrestlers get together there is action enough with the rolls and throws.

Fencing is still less interesting to the uneducated, as here the case is reversed. In boxing you see a blow start and land. In wrestling it often takes a long time for the man under to get on top. But in fencing, the action is so swift that the average spectator knows little about what is happening. A movement of the wrist is hardly noticed on the sidelines, but it may mean a feint immediately followed by a thrust. Just hold an umbrella in your hand and move the wrist quickly from right to left and see if your eye can follow the arc described by the point.

Down at the Arena to-night Frank Sullivan will sit in the players' box and see the results of his coaching. He has had the Juniors out steadily for weeks past, and when they take the ice to-night the boys in blue should put on a smart performance. The whole team looks pretty strong, right from Hunnisett out to the last sub. The S.P.A. winners only disposed of the locals by a two-goal margin after Varsity had outplayed them for two full periods.

The silverware case on the front landing of Hart House threatens to become overcrowded pretty soon and an enlargement will be necessary.

VARSITY BABIES MEET PARKDALE C.C.

Team is Biggest Threat of Season to Frank Sullivan's Blue Boys

MUCH IMPROVED BY S.P.A.

Varsity Juniors begin the regular league schedule to-night when they go into action against Parkdale Canoe Club at the Mutual Street Arena. The game will be the opener of a double header, which also brings together T.C.C. and Marlboros.

Varsity will enter the game favourites in view of their superior showing in the S.P.A. games, but the Paddlers have improved rapidly since their early elimination in the warming-up series, and will likely prove stiff opposition for Frank Sullivan's Blue Boys. They will have to show everything they have to stop the Blue forward line of George Beal, Clute and Lister, which is going great guns right now. Behind this smooth trio the defensive work of Hunnisett, Bean and Mooney is expected to prove more than adequate.

The former St. Andrew's goalkeeper has caught the attention of the fans. On the defence Mooney is ready to repeat his performances of the past two years. He is getting all kinds of support from his partner Bean, who has the weight and knows how to use it. These boys should provide, offensively and defensively, one of the neatest combinations Varsity fans have seen in years.

All things considered, Varsity ought to begin the season right by wallowing Parkdale, while Toronto Canoe Club and the Dukes are cutting each other's throats.

"I admit it," he confessed. A heavy tread on the cellar steps—it was the big fraternity president aglow with seven pins and half-a-dozen keys.

"Mr. Dare," said Amariyllis, "let me present Monty McNasty. I have a heavy date with him to-night. I want you to meet him."

"No," cried Dick, "I would rather shake the furnace than his hand."

The old K.C. pride was rising superior to all else. So was the furnace with that book. There was a roar and oblivion!—(To be continued.)

SENIOR U.C. TROUNCED BY FASTER VIC. TEAM

First Game of Finals in Women's Interfaculty Basketball Won by Decisive Margin

BREAKS WENT TO VIC.

The first game in the finals of the women's interfaculty basketball series was won by the Senior Vic. team when they defeated Senior U.C. 42-14 in a remarkably clean game played at Hart House last night. At half-time the score 23-10 promised a more exciting game than was witnessed. The Vic. team had the edge throughout the first half, and in the second half Ede Buchanan and Grace Keffer piled up goals for the winners. These two shots were on their toes all evening, and played a brilliant game. Towards the end of the game Grace Keffer hurt her wrist slightly but did not go off. Fran. Service played an outstanding defence game for the winners.

The U.C. forwards had hard luck with their shots; many times the ball circled the basket and then did not go in. Emma Weir, U.C.'s fast side centre, was best for the losers.

The Vic. team's floorwork was nothing short of wonderful, getting the length of the floor and scoring almost every time. The next game of the finals is to be played at Hart House Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

U.C.: Forwards, Wilene Wallace, Constance Smith; defence, Kathleen Scholes, Mildred Wilkins; centres, Constance Williams, Emma Weir; subs, Arlene Alley, Jean Forrester.

Vic.: Forwards, Ede Buchanan, Grace Keffer; defence, Fran. Service, Alice Muckle; centres, Marion Forward, Dot Ker; subs, Jean Snider, Doris Doyle, Helen McKim.

VARSITY SENIORS LOSE EXHIBITION BASKETBALL

Central Y Seniors Win 27-25 Despite Good Work of Varsity Defence

Central Y Seniors got revenge for their defeat of last Thursday by nosing out the Varsity Senior basketball squad last night in an exhibition game in Hart House 27-25. The Blue and White forwards were not working as well as on the previous meeting, and the long shots of the Central sharpshooters offset the good work of the Varsity defence.

Mitchell was seen in the stellar role for Varsity, tying up the score three times in the last half, only to have the Y men take the lead right after.

Charboneau and Griffiths were the pick of the College Street team, though Trowern was not far behind. The first half was clean, but both teams began to mix it more or less freely in the second half, Varsity being the worst offenders.

Central: Charboneau (8), Trowern (7), Griffiths (7), Bland (2), Weyms, Phillips (1), Rice (1).

Varsity: Faber (4), Mitchell (9), Newman (4), Currie (3), McGillivray (2), Sakler, Hurwitz, Sharpe, Johnston (2), Putnam (2).

Rose's stories are untrue, and that the boy only wishes to visit England and return.

The old man tells him the story of the crows, how they had cheered him when he was discouraged, as a settler, how every spring they had seen the house grow a little bigger, and the farm a little better, and how he had promised them to stay until he could no longer hear them. Rose avows he is getting deaf and will not have them this year, so the old man promises that he will go to the home, so they can go to England, if he does not. He waits, straining to hear. Rose shuts the door, but Martin, coming in, opens it, and the old man hears.

AMERICAN CLUB HAS SUCCESSFUL DINNER AS INITIAL ACTIVITY

President Walters Reads Letter of Greeting from Governor Al. Smith

AMERICAN CONSUL PRESENT

Expressed Hope for Cordial Relations Between Students of Sister Nations

The feature items on the programme of the first dinner held by the American Club of St. Michael's College, in Hart House last night, were the reading of a letter from Governor Al. Smith of New York State and an address by Mr. M. O. Sauer, American Consul in Toronto. The American Club is an organization of thirty-three American students recently organized at St. Michael's College to maintain relations between the visiting Americans and their home country.

Frank Walters, President of the Club, was toastmaster of the evening and read the Governor's letter as a surprise for the members. John McCarthy, Club secretary, had written Governor Smith shortly after the organization was formed informing him of its existence and requesting a few words of encouragement for the students. The following reply was received:

BIOLOGICAL CLUB HEARS PROFESSOR J. R. DYMOND

Outlines the Valuable Work of the Royal Ontario Museum

"A dead circus is the way a small boy once described a museum," said Professor J. R. Dymond in his lecture on "The work of the Royal Ontario Museum," delivered at the meeting of the Biological Club in Wymilwood last evening.

The name museum was originally applied to a seat of learning, Alexandria with its famous library being a typical example. Before the Renaissance the name suffered an eclipse, only to be revived when the passion for collecting relics of classical antiquity and natural history became popular. The increasing trade of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries facilitated the gathering together of objects of natural history. Buildings were prepared to house the collections, better methods of classification were found. The museum had become the recognized repository for valuable scientific material. It was rapidly to become the centre for research and investigation.

By the nineteenth century when the idea of popularizing knowledge be-

UNIVERSITY TRAVEL CLUB ORGANIZING FOURTH TOUR

Extensions Are Planned to Rhine Valley, Switzerland and Riviera

The University Travel Club is now busy organizing its fourth annual travel-study tour to Europe. Members of the staff, who have had long experience in travel throughout the Continent, have carefully planned an itinerary which should be exceptionally interesting to Varsity men and women who wish to combine the utmost enjoyment with the largest amount of permanent intellectual benefit in their summer abroad.

Professor A. H. Young, M.A., D.C.L., professor of German at Trinity, and Professor Robins, M.A., Ph.D., associate professor of English at Victoria, who are educational directors of the Club, are already planning a series of informal talks to be given on board ship in order to provide an historical background for the places to be visited.

The most interesting spots in Europe will be visited by members who join the Club's tour next summer. They will land in "bonnie Scotland," and after several days' sightseeing there, combining the big cities, Edinburgh and Glasgow, with a trip through the unrivalled Trossachs by old-fashioned four-horse coach, motor and lake steamer, will leave for Keswick and Windermere in the English Lake District, through that charming countryside by motor, and on to the Shakespeare country. While at Stratford-on-Avon they will visit Kenil-

FINE IMPROVEMENTS HAVE BEEN REPORTED IN ONTARIO MUSEUM

Recent Annual Meeting of Board of Trustees Reveals Growth

IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

Two Dinosaur Specimens, New to Science, Have Been Mounted

At the recent annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Royal Ontario Museum reports were presented by the directors covering the work of the year.

Professor C. T. Currelly's report shows a mass of accessions to the Museum of Archaeology that in themselves would form no mean museum. In early stone and the earliest metal-work, numbers of very choice specimens have been obtained. The Chinese collection has received jades, bronzes, sculptures, potteries and frescoes that are among the finest in existence. The furniture collection obtained pieces of great importance. This is also true of the printing exhibit, and in the arms and armour exhibit some of the best specimens the Museum possesses were received during the year. For the coin collection an example of what is commonly considered the world's greatest coin was secured. The Greek and Roman department received outstanding additions, and throughout the entire Museum the accessions were of the highest quality.

Dr. E. S. Moore reported having received for the Museum of Geology 1,100 pounds of fine specimens of ore from the Imperial Institute, London, England. A valuable collection of

ARGYLL HOUSE IS SCENE OF GAY CHRISTMAS PARTY

Annual S.C.M. Entertainment Provides Medettes with Delightful Sing-song

Gay with Christmas decorations and evergreens, one of the rooms at Argyll House presented a pleasant scene on Wednesday evening when the medettes gathered about the fireplace to enjoy their annual S.C.M. Christmas party. When hungry appetites had been satisfied, all gave themselves up to the enjoyment of a sing-song of Christmas carols, after which Mr. Murray Brooks entertained the group with two solos. Mr. Brooks is secretary of the Canadian National Students' Christian Federation, has travelled a great deal and visited many colleges, and has lived for several years in India. He gave a talk in which he told the story of Mahatma Gandhi, the "Big Soul" of India, of whose life he has intimate knowledge. At the close of the talk a number stayed and again joined in singing carols.

University of Nebraska Builds $300,000 Structure

The new $300,000 building which is to be built soon on the campus at the University of Nebraska is to be named Andrews Hall in honour of Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, who served as chancellor of that university from 1900 to 1908 and who was very instrumental in advancing the University of Nebraska to its present position. The career of Doctor Andrews as chancellor of the university was a very successful one and he resigned after eight years of service because of ill-health.

EXTENSION COURSES SEEM VERY POPULAR WITH YOUNG PEOPLE

Unlike Columbia University Majority of Students Are of College Age

SOME SCHOOL TEACHERS

At Toronto Few Students of Evening Classes Are Over Fifty

A recent editorial in "The Varsity" referred to a statement issued by J. C. Egbert, director of extension courses at Columbia University, in which it was asserted that a much larger percentage of students in extension courses at that University were above the age of 30 than those under 20. Calculations from the figures quoted reveal the astounding fact that for every student under the age of 20 there are approximately a dozen over 30, and a large number above the age of 40.

Enquiries at the offices of the University of Toronto Extension Department elicited the information that this was hardly the case at the Toronto extension classes. "The large majority of students are those such as have just passed high school and university age, and have come to realize what they have missed," stated Mr. W. B. Sharpe, B.A., assistant director of University Extension, when interviewed by "The Varsity." They then join the University evening classes in an effort to gain that knowledge which in their youth they had so inadvertently overlooked. There are also a large number of school teachers who take the evening classes, while they teach in the daytime.

"While the Department does not ascertain the ages of the students entering the Extension classes, it can be stated fairly accurately that the great percentage are between the ages of 30 and 40, with a large number between 20 and 30."

There are comparatively few students over 50, possibly five per cent at the most, "The Varsity" was informed.

CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION HOLDS REGULAR MEETING

Professor Robertson of Victoria College Gives Interesting Paper

The Classical Association met Wednesday at Professor Milner's home on Grenville Street. Professor Robertson of Victoria College, and one time professor at University College, gave the paper of the evening, "An Apology for the Athenians." Professor Robertson first quoted Principal Hutton's saying that the Athenians had more brains than morals—the exact antithesis of the English race. He continued to state that he disagreed that the Athenians and the English resemble each other more than the English and the Romans—in their common love of liberty and love of voluntary effort, their trust in the average man, their spirit of adventure on land and sea, and finally the high seriousness of their literature. Taking Themistocles as the typical Athenian and Raleigh as the typical Englishman, along with Wilkes, Nelson and others, he found both types more conspicuous for courageousness and ability than morality. Both, he said, are a mixed people.

A most interesting discussion, led by Principal Hutton and Professor Norwood, followed, in which most of the members of the Classics staff took part to the delight of the audience.

HART HOUSE CALLED PARAGON OF UNIONS

Mr. W. R. Cowans Returns from Recent Convention of College Union

H. H. IS USED AS PATTERN

"Hart House is admitted to be the paragon of all university unions," Such is the opinion of Mr. W. R. Cowans, assistant comptroller of Hart House who recently attended a convention of representatives of college unions at the University of Iowa.

This conference is held annually to discuss matters pertaining to such organizations as Hart House in American universities. Here notes are compared on finance, administration and student activities. Although Hart House is admitted to be the finest university union, a representative has been sent to the conference each year in order to keep a pace or two ahead of all other similar organizations. At the same time a great deal of assistance has been given to universities planning or maintaining unions. When Cornell University decided to build a union they had their architects visit Hart House several times. Unfortunately they built a great hall and used it as a reading room.

Mr. Cowan visited the universities of Chicago, Perdue, Lafayette, Wisconsin and Pittsburg, where he had excellent opportunity of comparing Hart House with their unions. And still our men's club is unsurpassed.

At Pittsburg, the skyscraper university, the great problem is the handling of students going from one lecture to another. They must all be handled by elevators; so instead of labelling the floors as 1, 2, 3, etc., they will probably label them History, Surveying, Economics and Medicine, etc., and have all elevators at 9.09 a.m. run at express speeds. Here three floors out of fifty-three are devoted to non-academic activities.

Probably the most outstanding feature of Hart House is the interest taken by outsiders. The American seniors envy our ability to obtain talented musicians, the sketches of famous artists, and debates by politicians.

Twelve nations and 37 states are represented in the 3,916 students enrolled in the University of Missouri.

Night Fell—A Damsel in Distress and No Knight Errant to the Rescue

She sat on the gate post of 63 Queen's Park—her hat was lost, her hair disordered, a distracted gleam in her eye and one leg swaying a little stiffly over the railing. Patience Building clerks and students hurried by—but the wind was cold and no one offered to help her descend from her insecure position. Night fell—a damsel in distress and no knight errant came to her rescue! At any moment the Annesley Hall night prowler might slouch by—perhaps then her screams would move someone to action. By morning she was gone—quite gone—perhaps some child had removed the deserted dilapidated doll from the gate post of 63.

Has Gained Envious Reputation In Both United States and Abroad

UNDERGRADUATE TALENT

In Seven Years Have Developed Organization of High Artistic Calibre

The Harvard Glee Club, of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., which will appear in Convocation Hall on Tuesday evening, December 27, has built up for itself in the short space of seven years an enviable artistic reputation in both the United States and Europe, and is now recognized as one of the ablest choral organizations of this country, if not of the world.

The Glee Club programmes are devoted entirely to good music, ancient and modern, such as the church pieces of Palestrina Lotti, Vittoria, or Bach, followed by compositions of Gluck, Mendelssohn, Schumann and Brahms, as well as those of the modern French and Russians, then possibly a group of folk songs, and a chorus of Handel, Wagner or Beethoven for the final number.

In addition to an annual tour, including the larger musical centres of the East and Middle West, the Glee Club gives each year a series of concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston. It has sung with the Boston and Cleveland Symphony Orchestras at their regular concerts. Two seasons ago, with the assistance of the former orchestra, it presented the Brahms "Requiem" to two capacity houses. This season,

M. AND P. SOCIETY HEAR DISCUSSION ON RADIO

"Radio in 1927" is Topic Dealt With at Regular Meeting

"Radio in 1927" was discussed at the M. and P. Society's meeting last night by Mr. Holmes. We were shown a pair of spectacles contain in their rims a sensitive receiving set, the development of 1927. One of the boards of room 43 was covered with a simplified diagram of the very apparatus. We were fortunate in having with us a representative from Kalamazoo Correspondence School, who discussed the benefits and detriments of attending lectures. He pointed out that it was mentally stimulating to calculate the time constant of that descending hairpin which never quite falls out. We were then given an artistic treat when various professors in wily disguise were thrown on the screen. It proved no small feat to recognize the gentlemen, and a prize was offered for the best guess as to the line-up. The successful young lady stepped forward to receive the reward and was presented with a handsomely embossed red meal ticket to Great Hall. Several amusing snaps were put on the screen showing members of the Society in queer moods and postures. Tea was poured by some capable gentlemen jugglers.

A NEED FOR GREATER LOCKER ACCOMMODATION

A great deal is being said just now about how the safety of the women at the University may best be preserved, and many plans are being suggested for increasing the efficiency of the University and civic police; but even if the campus were patrolled by three times the present number of stalwarts of the law, another evil almost as pronounced as the one which gave rise to the discussion would still not be avoided. By this we mean the theft—for no milder term can be used—of the personal belongings of those same women whose safety is causing so much agitation.

For some time past a series of petty thefts has been continued, the articles stolen ranging in size and importance from more or less valuable books to car tickets. This series reached its culmination last week, when three fairly large sums of money were taken from the cloakroom of one of the women's unions. Such a situation unfortunately seems unavoidable in open buildings from which strangers cannot be excluded,—but there must be some remedy.

It is obvious that the student cannot carry all her books, papers and other belongings with her all the time. But where is she to leave them if none of the University buildings, with the exception of the cramped quarters at University College, are provided with locker accommodation? Perhaps the authorities have such faith in the honesty of the race that they feel it superfluous to provide means for the safe keeping of valuables, but, at the risk of being considered cynical, we are forced to state our opinion that that faith is unjustified.

It is our contention that lockers should be provided in all University buildings, and we are sure that should their installation necessitate a large financial outlay, some system of co-operation in the matter of expense could be arranged for between the authorities and the students.

EARLIER CLOSING AND TERM EXAMINATIONS AFTER CHRISTMAS A BENEFIT

The Christmas season fast approaches, and with it there comes these oft-recurring questions regarding the wisdom of examinations at this time of the year, and the necessity for closing the term only three days before Christmas. Last year we advocated an earlier commencement of the academic year and an equivalent earlier ending of the autumn term; and quite a number of correspondents, as well as some professors, when interviewed, supported us in this. We were informed, however, that the suggestion had been previously discussed by the Senate of the University and was found to be impracticable in so far as an earlier commencement of the year was concerned, but, despite this, we make no apology for returning to the subject, because we believe that a great hardship is being done to a number of very worthy students who are struggling to put themselves through University and to whom a fortnight's work at Christmas time would mean a great deal financially. Just yesterday we were approached by four students who desired us to "do something in the matter." In one case the young man had been offered a very lucrative post with a city firm for the rush period, provided he could start to work on Saturday morning, December 17th; he had, of course, to lose the position or miss those precious (sic) term examinations.

Some have contended that the Christmas vacation is a very necessary break into the regular grind of studies, a sort of seasonable gift of rest for the hard studying undergraduate, and that therefore it should not be used up in work. In the first place, we doubt very much whether many look upon the Christmas vacation in this manner, and certainly few indeed spend it in anything of a "rest-cure." To our mind the time is much too short before Christmas to be turned to any good account, and much too long after Christmas. If it is impracticable to commence the academic year earlier, would it not be possible to close it earlier, say about December 15th, and open the second term on December 27th, suspending lectures for the one day on January 1st? This would afford an opportunity to men who want to work and can get work, of doing something to help themselves, whilst those who desire a rest can surely rest as well from December 15th to 27th as from December 22nd to January 5th.

As to term examinations, we wonder whether they would not

Art, Music and Drama

Medical Players' Club

The first production of the newly-organized Medical Players' Club was given last evening in Hart House when an English version of Molière's "Médécin Malgré Lui," "Doctor in Spite of Himself," and John Masefield's "The Locked Chest" were presented. The plays were very well done for the initial offering of a dramatic guild, but there were some very rough spots en route which may be eliminated later on. No Viking chief should wear a wrist-watch, and even Sganarelle of Molière's comedy does not need such emphatic clowning to get it across properly.

There is no doubt whatever that Molière's comedy has lost in the course of centuries much of its old "coup de pied," but there were some very palpable hits in it. The Medicos demonstrated again that they are the most broad-minded and mature faculty in the University by presenting a satire of their own profession. As the woodcutter Sganarelle who is beaten into the medical profession, O. A. Kilpatrick gave a broad rollicking performance in prime Dafyddil style; as Martine, his wife, Dora McMillan was very good, and as the young lady who goes dumb (speechless) by choice, Miss Eleanor Barton was very attractive. The remainder of the cast was adequate.

The second play, "The Locked Chest," by John Masefield, was a dramatic criminal-search in early Iceland. It is true that the costumes of the men were a bit bizarre, if not amusing, but the best acting of the evening was done in this play by Desmond Preston as the craven Thord.

serve their purpose equally well (if indeed they serve any good purpose, which we very much doubt) if they were held after January 1st instead of before Christmas. It is our opinion, after some observation, that at present they are just wedged in somehow between numerous dances and other festive functions, together with numerous trips downtown on purchasing expeditions, and that as a result they are not indicative in any way of the knowledge (or lack of it) of the undergraduate. Then after the examination is rushed through before Christmas, what of the papers written? We can hardly conjure up a vision of professors and other examiners foregoing their festive joys for the doubtful pleasure of perusing a number of undergraduates' hurried attacks on British History, Philosophy, French, or anything else in that line. We sincerely hope that next year some plan may be worked out, and at least given a trial, whereby those who wish to do so may be enabled to turn the Christmas vacation to financial benefit.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Harvard Glee Club, which will appear in Convocation Hall on December 27th, is the only organization of its kind to be initiated and successfully established by a university association. The Club has acquired wide favour throughout the United States, playing to capacity houses in Boston, Cleveland and various musical centres in the East and Middle West. The two hundred and fifty odd members composing the Club represent every department of their university, and sing solely for the love and enjoyment of music.

As an example of the high esteem in which the Club is held in musical centres may be cited the trip to Europe at the invitation of the French Government in 1921, when France, Switzerland, Italy and parts of Germany were visited.

Goddie. As Vigdis Goddie, Agnes Muldrew gave a splendid performance, and T. H. Belt was very good as the Viking Ingiald.

VAUGHAN GLASER'S VICTORIA THEATRE

VARSITY JRS. INITIATE SEASON BY DEFEATING PARKDALE 3-2

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Senior hockey outfit is getting in some hard licks these days in preparation for their American tour as well as for the regular O.H.A. schedule, which opens on Wednesday of next week. There is every prospect of a thrilling series in the O.H.A. this year, as all the teams entered have a good chance. It was feared at one time that the inroads of the professionals would seriously affect the O.H.A. series, but it does not seem to be killing the game, and the amateurs are standing up fairly well. Many players who would not otherwise get a chance will have an opportunity to step up into Senior company.

We're no prophets, but we venture to predict that this boy Hunnisset is going to be right in the money with the Langtays and the Sullivans when his turn comes to be goalie for the big Blue team. He was the best man on the ice at the Junior game last night.

Frank Sullivan's Juniors have the makings of a real good team. A bit more combination and a bit more going in after the rebound and there'd be no stopping them.

Did you notice Lou Marsh's all-Canadian football team in last night's Star? They must have been the bunch that Sam Manson led out on the field at the recent Tiger-Balm Beach engagement.

The boys must certainly be taking their studies seriously this Xmas, or else the frails Christmas trinkets must have put a great crimp in the old roll, for the loyal fans in attendance at last night's Junior game were about as numerous as rich men in heaven or coloured gentlemen at a K.K.K. picnic. It was a smart game anyhow, and the rooters want to think twice before they pass up the next Junior game.

The Intermediate hockey practice will be held at the Arena to-day from 5 to 6 p.m. The following players will report: Tark, McKnight, Spence, Hewitt, Crosby, Evans, Graham, Crozier, McMillan, MacDonald, Algie, Irwin, Gilfillen, Cunningham.

The Interfaculty assaults showed that there will be plenty of competition for the places on the Intercollegiate B. W. and F. team this year. Fell, who defeated Dixon, should make a strong bid for a place. He not only packs the punch but knows when and where to use it.

Yesterday afternoon and evening the preliminaries of the Interfaculty Assault took place. There are plenty of good bouts in these affairs, and it is to be regretted that more do not turn out to see them. Some of the boxers did not seem to be particularly skilled, but they all had the bright idea of going out after your man counts for anything.

CORRESPONDENCE

TO KEEP ONE'S COAT

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

From time to time lately I have had the opportunity of reading your worthy paper and have noted with regret frequent advertisements for "lost" coats. This is deplorable, but in an open institution such as our University unprotected coats will always be in danger of being stolen.

In a Berlin hospital, while on a recent postgraduate study tour, I noticed a very simple and practical means of securing one's coat. Beside each coat peg two stout chains, just a little longer than the average coat sleeve, were suspended. One chain is put through one of the sleeves and its free end is padlocked to the free end of the other chain. Of course each one carries his own padlock.

Yours sincerely,
Recent Graduate.

VARSITY JUNIORS OFF TO EXCELLENT START

Defeat Parkdale by Concerted Attacks in Early Periods

MOONEY SCORES 2 GOALS

The Varsity kids stepped off on the right foot in their first O.H.A. game when they defeated Parkdale 3-2. The score just about indicates the difference between the two teams, Varsity having the better of the first two periods, while Parkdale had the advantage during the final session.

At times the Blue and White showed sparkling combination, and with a bit more practice they will be a hard team to beat.

All the youngsters played splendid hockey, with perhaps Hunnisset, Mooney and Cluett having a shade over the rest of the blues. Mephram and Hamilton stood out as Parkdale's best.

FIRST PERIOD

The game opened with the reporter arguing with the gatekeeper and endeavouring to persuade him that he was the official reporter for the Varsity. On arriving, however, your reporter noticed that both teams were shooting from outside the defence, but both goalies were good, so no damage resulted. Hamilton tested out Hunnisset when he made several individual rushes up the ice. Varsity were content to shoot from outside the defence and made no attempt to work in on the Parkdale until the last five minutes of the period, when Carrick and Smith combined, Carrick scoring on a nice corner shot from left wing. Parkdale made several dangerous rushes after Varsity had scored, but Hunnisset proved a stumbling block each time. Period ended with Varsity leading 1-0.

SECOND PERIOD

Parkdale started off with a rush, and Mephram lost a good opportunity to score when he elected to go through the Blue's defence rather than passing to either of his wings. Parkdale continued to press all during the first five minutes, and Hunnisset in the Varsity net made many good saves.

Seven minutes after the period started Mooney rushed down and let go a shot from the Blue line which caught the Parkdale goalie napping, and Varsity were put two up. One minute later Mooney again rushed, and after skating through the whole Parkdale team he passed to Clutte, who scored Varsity's third goal. Varsity's combination was much better with the work of Mooney both offensively and defensively. During the last five minutes Parkdale pressed hard, but were unable to score, the period ending with Varsity having a comfortable lead of three goals.

THIRD PERIOD

Varsity opened with the best bit of combination shown all evening, and scored no less than three times, only to be called back for being offside. Ayres scored Parkdale's first goal of the evening when he skated through the whole Varsity team. Hunnisset had no chance to save. Two minutes later Mephram and Ketson combined, and the latter slipped a soft one past Hunnisset. Parkdale continued to press, but Varsity stayed off their attack and held them scoreless during

WITH THE THEATRES

"TWIN BEDS"—VICTORIA

Take a series of three young married couples, each moving to the same new apartment house in the firm and secret belief that they are escaping from each other; put them in blissful ignorance on the third, fourth and fifth floors in flats that connect with the same fire escape through French windows. Add the fact that two of the bedrooms are furnished identically, and that while one husband is away, the other comes home hilariously happy and falls into the wrong (1) flat, (2) pyjamas, (3) bed, just because they happen to be there. Mix all this up with burglars, jealous wives, suspicious husbands, and a cast of players that dashes through the play with a pep and vigour that never pauses for an instant, and you have some idea of the melange of humour that kept the audience at Vaughan Glaser's Theatre last night in increasing gales of laughter.

"Twin Beds" is well known in Toronto, but the packed house that greeted the Malcolm Fasset players found an unflagging delight in the play. And it's undoubtedly a good show of its kind.

Martha McGraw, the new leading lady in the role of Blanche Hawkins which Madge Kennedy made famous, pleased her audience, although she seemed to this reviewer inclined to accent too much her sugary sweetness. Samuel Godfrey frolicked from bed to laundry basket as the temperamental Monti, and could hardly have been bettered. Helen Gilmore found new honours as his noisy wife. Viola Roche, Malcolm Fasset, Hal Thompson and Betty Brough played with their usual distinction.

But aren't two bedroom farces in three weeks stressing the point a little?

Why Indeed?

(Tied for Prose Prize)
Paul A. Gardner

The young man had just read an account of a horrible offence against a young girl. Turning to the old man, he exclaimed, "My God! Why is there so much cruelty among men?"

After a pause the old man replied: "My son, the God whom you invoke made men and moulded their minds and natures. He is responsible for His creations. Many boys at your age believe that they can lessen this cruelty by preaching, by example, even by force. But I was wiser than they! Never did I strive nor struggle against the cruelty of the world. I determined, of course, to love my fellow-men, for is not love the greatest thing in the world? Cruelty has no place in my nature, but how could I hope ever to root it out of those many souls in which it grows and flourishes like a carnivorous plant? Impossible, say I, and why attempt the impossible? And so I have lived, shunning cruelty, but never losing my wits so far as to fight against it. Cruelty is a monster, true, but it is a hydra-imperishable, growing more hideous and more vicious with each faint stroke which we poor weaklings level against it. Let be, my son! God has power to rid the world of this ever-widening and ever-deepening blot. He will not—how can we, who are but tiny helpless miniatures of God, vested to please us with some few worthless powers, but really having control not even over our own bodies? Let be! I say, and do not waste your strength and your glorious youth in trying to destroy this dragon which will always flourish great and strong!"

The young man gazed a little while on the older; then he spoke: "Sir, you are my elder by many years, and by much experience. I cannot dare to tilt against your words, brought forth as they are of knowledge deep and full of the world and of the men therein. But permit me to tell you a tale, brief and bald perhaps, yet it shall be my answer to you.

"A young boy one day beheld an ass being beaten savagely by its owner. The boy started forward, infuriated, and was about to attack the cruel wretch and stay his hand. But suddenly a flood of reason surged over his mind, and he said, 'What then if I do save this animal from cruelty? Thousands of other animals will be maltreated, despite my deed. I cannot prevent all, or even many, of these future acts of cruelty. Why should I trouble about this one?' And he passed on.

"The boy became a man, and one day as he was passing by a dark side street he heard a woman's screams. Something of his boyhood spirit rose within him, despite the many long years of suppression, and he started forward. Then once again surged over him that flood of reason, and he said, 'Well, if I should rescue this woman from cruelty? Thousands of other women will be, nay, are at this moment being maltreated, all over the world. Though in truth I love my fellow-men, yet it is not in my power to stop the one-millionth part of the world's cruelty to women. Why should I waste my time on such an infinitesimal portion of so great a whole?"

"On returning home, the man found an officer awaiting him, who informed him that his wife had been attacked and murdered in a certain dark side street. . . ."

Here the old man muttered angrily in his beard and turned away, pausing only to impale a stray caterpillar on the tip of his cane.

To the Editor of Varsity.

Sir:

I am glad to take the opportunity you have offered me to send to your readers my greetings for the coming holiday season. We think with pleasure of the opening of the term when we all participated in the successful celebration of our centenary—an occasion that will long be remembered. Those who are in closest touch with student life assure me that the work of the term has been carried on with less distraction than in recent years, and you may therefore look back upon these three months with satisfaction.

Now most of you are looking forward to family reunions at home. May you enjoy this happy season to the utmost. May those also who are unable to return to their own homes have pleasant memories revived at this time, and find new friends who will always remain among their closest and best.

With all good wishes I am

Yours sincerely,

Robert Falconer.
President.

Three Wise Men

Prize winning poem
A. F. R.

We followed and we followed,
Three wise men from afar,
The symbol of an utter peace
Within a lonely star.

We carried and we carried
Brave gifts all through the night,
To lay beneath the Monarch's feet
All in the morning light.

We follow and we follow,
Though night has wrapped us round,
The shadow of a flaming star
Upon the silent ground.

Music and Christmas

J. P. Cadwell

If Christmas is the happiest time of the year it is only because, in every home, in every hamlet—everywhere—there can be heard the co-ordination of sounds which give us music, whether they be played on a mighty organ or on a homely harmonica. Music is indeed the soul and essence of Christmas.

Ever since we can remember, we have associated Christmas with music. In our infancy it was the tinkle of Santa's bells; in our youth, the gay music of the theatre; in our declining years, the most stately of hymns, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Many years ago three wise men heard celestial music—the music of the stars—calling them to the rude manger in Bethlehem. To-day we feel the wonderfulness of that music; it is echoing around the world, vibrantly beautiful, filling us with the music of Christmas, the music of Christ.

May we all feel the blessedness of that music; may we feel a quickening of our heart as the music of Christmas is wafted to us midst mistletoe and holly, and may we re-sound with the rhythm that comes with Christmas, and music, music and Christmas.

Christmas Presents

T. A. C.

With a trampling of hoofs and a tinkling of bells, old St. Nicholas enters our midst. With a mighty heave of his massive shoulders he throws his pack upon the floor. The sporting reporters make a flying tackle to open it. The first package to come forth is for Jimmie. Jimmie's name is loudly boomed forth. A tall, white haired lad steps up to receive it. All press eagerly about, but, fusesoother, it seems Jimmie is excited, for he cries, "Back, Back! Or I'll close the door on you." Paternally we give him more room and watch as, trembling, he undoes his package. Two beautiful bound leather books meet our gaze. But lo! Jimmie's face is clouded with dissatisfaction and we are filled with wonder, and then the reason dawns upon us for the one book is labelled Memoranda, and the other Addresses.

The next parcel is for the Executive of the S.A.C. The Executive steps forth and unwraps the parcel. A huge toy like a slot machine is brought forth; across the front is written in large capital letters "Rail-roader." We hasten to read the directions. "First take one of accompanying cards and write on it the name of officer to be elected. Insert card in slot and press by opposite office to which you desire him to be elected. Take card from slot and we guarantee the election of the nominee will be recorded. Let us try this marvelous mechanical toy. Name on card. Mr. Percival Vanlyke St. Jerome. B.Q.A. We insert the card, press the key, and now let us see the

Romance

(Tied for Prose Prize)
Katharine E. Foster

Dear Tom:—

I take my pen in hand, hoping this finds you well as it leaves me at present.

Next Christmas, Tom sent his picture. It was a fine picture for Tom had taken care to patronize a photographer who offered the maximum of picture for the minimum amount of cost—but it brought dismay to Maggie "Heavens—it's the one-eyed one, what shall I do! What shall I do!"

At first she was for jilting him outright but on maturer consideration decided that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Consolation too, was at hand in the shape of a photographer's agent who persuaded her to have Tom's picture coloured and enlarged to life size and for the trifling cost of fifty cents he painted in the missing eye which was "that life-like" that Maggie openly preferred it to the real one.

For a year the portrait, gorgeous in its oval gilt frame with the convex glass front, dominated Maggie's infinitesimal bedroom.

Alas, however, "the course of true love never did run smooth." The following Christmas Tom decided to come out to Canada and in three months he became engaged to Maggie's best friend Agnes.

Maggie took Tom's defection very philosophically, the fact that there was another beau in the offing being largely responsible, especially since this beau was in possession of both eyes and was a fireman to boot.

Maggie cogitated at length on a suitable wedding present for Agnes and finally sent her that which she was sure would please her most and which really made a remarkably fine gift—the enlarged portrait of Tom.

Holy Night

N. A. Benson

The loud, tumultuous and troubled world
Is laid away this night, and wrapped in sleep;
Silently stand doubt's banners dumbly furled,
And in the sky one Star her watch does keep
With the eternal precious light of faith
Streaming all soundlessly from heaven's portal;
Hushed are my questionings, and that poor wraith
Of unbelieved reborn in faith immortal.

White is the moon, and diamonded the snow,
But whiter burns the truth in my heart's hearth
Rekindled with a strange tremendous glow—
For He has come again to bless His earth
As once He came, long centuries ago,
When man and star stood marvelled at His birth.

Song for a Cynic

D. K. Liveray

Wander on gayly
Ye who pass,
Though a rose has fallen
In the deep grass.

Drown with your laughter
And a light word
The cries of a pitiful
Broken-winged bird.

You have found ecstasy,
But have missed grief;
To you love is only
A wind-blown leaf.

Christmas Eve

A. F. R.

Snowflakes dancing with the stars,
Living flame across the white—
Angels playing in the dark
And waiting for the light.

Iron-shod hoofs without my door,
Silvered memories in the gloom—
And a voice from off the mountain
In the wraptness of the room.

Midnight calling on the dawn,
A child's glad cry upon the height—
Angel forms against the sky
Go singing up the night.

Autumn Wood Winds

Steve Robinson

Silently stood the woodlands,
All but the falling leaf,
As it fell from the long gray branches
To the forest floor beneath.

A whisper, I heard from the thicket,
The night wind rustling the leaves,
To me 'twas the ghost of summer
Moaning and loath to leave.

Growing and growing in volume,
From a moan it rose to a wail,
Till the woodland folk were shrieking
In the sombre firelight's pale.

Nature was torn by anguish,
Stripped of her glorious bloom,
Yielding her sylvan spirit
To the winter's night of gloom.

I have felt lonesome in places—
I have loved solitude—
That night 'twas the voice of the damned
I heard in the autumn wood.

A Christmas Eve on Lake Pinache

W. McRae

A ghostly silence hovers round the place.
The lake is calm and quiet, as the face
Of the saint on earth, his petty sins confessed,
Or, of some man, by peaceful dreams caressed.

The air bespeaks a mild October night,
Recalls a cheery, open fire's delight,
The pungent smell of undried burning pine,
The gentle voice, the countenance divine.

Who was there thought the sudden change would come?
Only last night, the air could chill and numb,
The roaring wind could sweep past from the north,
The huge subservient waves surge back and forth.

Only last night, beneath a starless sky,
The lofty tree, still brave in death, could sigh
And tell of scourge and stripping to the bone,
Of body mutilated and alone.

And yet—there is a Spell that comes and goes,
Whose penetrating power hourly grows.
Transcending Nature, who would fain deceive,
A Something whispers that it is Christmas Eve.

IN SEASON

For the hundredth time in the history of this institution, students attending the University carefully put away, or carelessly cast aside, their books and hurry, homeward bound, to meet the suddenly anticipated joys-and-favours of the Christmas season. Senior and freshman for once mingle common thought and impulse, though the former's departure may be tinged with regret that this is his last mid-term holiday as an undergraduate, while others may feel threats of impending after-term examinations. May the latter be few in number.

Too old now to feel the early, bounding, joyful trepidation of childhood, the Yuletide spirit is but now beginning to tingle in our veins, and a period of glorious restlessness is taking sway. No words are necessary, nor yet can any depict the thoughts that blossom in one's heart. According to temperament may one be glad or sorrowful, but, over all, the feeling of happiness possesses, and hence may friendships be re-adjusted, wounds healed, wonderful plans promoted and good fellowship prevail.

Memories of the fall of 1927, marking off one hundred years since the granting of the original charter of this institution to old King's College, were planted in one's mind by the memorable centenary celebrations, to whence came learned men from all the globe. Even more have these spread the good name of this institution throughout the Empire and the world. Academic standards are attested to advance while athletic activities fairly hold their own. At the same time, University men are, more and more, contributing to the thought, welfare and influence of the Dominion.

For ourselves, we desire to give expression to certain of those good wishes which by custom best portray the natural and logical expression of the happy Christmas spirit. To Sir Robert Falconer on the occasion of his twenty-first Christmas as President of the University of Toronto, we respectfully extend, on behalf of ourselves and student body, the most sincere good wishes of the season. To our readers generally may we offer hearty compliments of the season together with wishes for their success in the new year. Discussions there have been, and objection and dissension a little. And so we would have it, for without criticism progress would stagnate, fail. And so, again, to those who saw eye to eye with us and to those who would fight us nail to nail we extend greetings of the season together with the wish that in the coming year we better our agreement, come to a finer understanding, and, withal, sharpen our pens.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

In judging the contributions to the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" it was found that not only was the poetry more abundant than the prose, but that it also exceeded the latter in quality. In fact, the judges found the stories disappointing in character and substance. The tendency was to give the prizes to material of a Christmas nature, this being particularly the case in regard to the poetry.

"SOUTH OF BLOOR"

CHAPTER III

A Very Merry Christmas

It was some ten hours after the furnace exploded when Dick Dare awoke in the Sick Children's Hospital. A nurse bent over him and gave him a thermometer, which he swallowed immediately, and they rushed him to the operating-room. Next day he complained of a terrific pain near the elbow. "It's my liver, I think," he told the nurse. "It isn't your liver," said the nurse callously, "we removed that yesterday." She wheeled him into the playroom, and there he saw Amoryllis in a cot. He wondered how he had ever loved her. She looked different with a bandage over one eye. Most women do. "Hello," she said. He did not answer. "Where," he asked, "is your low friend, Monty McNasty? I hope he was killed." "No, but he was badly injured." "Goody, goody!" said Dick Dare enthusiastically.

Two weeks later Dick got back to Knox College just as the Xmas Xodus was beginning. He was called into the Prexy's office. "Mr. Dare, I believe?"

"Yes." "Well, Mr. Dare, you have been casting a lot of notoriety on our institution, and you are therefore to be cast into outer darkness or Unionism. Now I wish you a peaceful Xmas and a tranquil New Year." Dick bowed and went immediately to Hart House, where he joined the Faculty of Cutlery on the dining-room staff, and registered in First Year Culinary. It seemed a great comedown at first but Dick's flawless mind rose superior to his undemocratic inhibitions. Before long he could hold seventeen plates with one hand and four tureens of soup with the other. So dexterous did he prove himself that in two days more Mr. Campbell made him Chief Concocter of Hart House Stew, a position where solemn and mystic rites are a daily and secret duty. He was getting on in the world.

One of his co-culliners invited him on Christmas Eve to drop down to a friend's house and have a drop. They arrived at eight. "Ooo is it," said a voice through the panel. "Santa Claus," was the password. They were admitted. "Let's 'ave a drop," said the friend. It was poured, and looked like a sunset by the Group of Ten. Without a word they tossed it down. A voice spoke in Dick's ear. "Get up, stupid." "What time is it?" asked Dick. "It's New Year's Eve." Dick sat up. "Have I been cold for a week?" he asked. "Yes, you 'ave—we came down to Bert's for a drop—it was a long drop—we missed Christmas." "So we did," agreed Dick, "but I still have all my money left"—he felt for it—and felt nothing. "I might as well have indulged in the annual trade-off," he said feelingly.

VAUGHAN GLASER'S VICTORIA THEATRE

MANY CLOSE BOUTS IN JUNIOR ASSAULT

University College Proves Best Followed by Meds and Victoria

WRESTLING INTERESTING

A large crowd of fans turned out to the Upper Gym on Friday to see the finals of the Junior Assault which University College won by running up 37 points to Meds' 30, while Victoria trailed with 18 for third place. S.P.S. was a close fourth with 17, Dents 12, while St. Mike's and Trinity each secured 5.

The best event of the evening was the 158 lb. finals in boxing. Morin of St. Mike's started with a rush and floored Burnett of Meds twice in the first round. Both were pretty well used up, but Burnett turned the tables in the second phase and put the St. Mike's man down for the count of nine, and handed out the K.O. in the third round. It was a case of fighting versus boxing, and was to the liking of the fans.

In the 158 wrestling final, Jenner quickly disposed of Tyson in two falls at one minute and two minutes forty seconds. For a change, all the wrestling was interesting, and there were rolls and plenty of action. It was this feature which made the Assault no dull affair.

The semi-finals and finals, in which Sprott featured for the 135 boxing title, were a pleasure to watch, and it should not be long before he reaches the Senior calibre. He out-boxed Steele to enter the finals, and all but K.O.'s Walstoff, who put up a game battle all the way.

Lee of Meds won the fencing title from Gilbert, U.C., by receiving only two points in delivering five. The winner relied on his strong wrist largely in his foil work, and was able to parry his more aggressive opponent. Ford, the runner-up, did some nice work, but lacked confidence in his attacks.

The results—
BOXING SEMI-FINALS
 135 Sprott defeated Steele.
 160 Morin defeated Nash.
WRESTLING SEMI-FINALS
 158 Tyson defeated Henry by two falls in overtime.
BOXING FINALS
 118 Woodhouse defeated Shields.
 125 Fell defeated Mooney.

Varsity Seniors Defeated by Buffalo Basketball Team

On Friday night at Buffalo, the touring Varsity Senior basketball team met defeat at the hands of the Buffalo University in the first game of the tour by a score of 29-18. In the first half play was very even, and the score board read 14-14. In the second half the Americans opened up, and though the locals put up a stubborn but unlucky defence, were unable to hold the home team. For the winners, Birdie, Brownson and Bass were the best, while Sharp, Mitchell and Newman did most of the scoring for Varsity.

135 Sprott defeated Wolstoff.
 145 Deeks defaulted to Cook (broken wrist).
 160 Burnett defeated Morin (K.O.).
 175 Smiley defeated Cox.

WRESTLING FINALS

123 Bishop defeated Holden (1:15 time advantage).
 134 Rudd defeated McDonald (a fall at 5 min.).
 145 Scott defeated Casey (4 min. time advantage).
 158 Jenner defeated Tyson (two falls at 1 min and 2:40).
 174 Gilbert defaulted to Clough.

FENCING

Semi final: Gilbert defeated Ford 3-1.
 Finals: Lee defeated Gilbert 5-2.

U. OF T. SEXTETTE CHOICE OF LEAGUE

Varsity Team Plays Initial Game with Marlboros on Wednesday

TEAM TOURS STATES

When Varsity and Marlboros open the Senior O.H.A. series on Wednesday the fans will see two of the strongest contenders for the honours in action. The two squads are rated by many as the best in the O.H.A. this season. Consequently the game will mean much to the winner and will be a real battle.

Peterboro are not considered as serious contenders, and for a time it was doubtful if they would enter a team. Many of their players jumped to the pro ranks, and they are to be congratulated on sticking with the series. Preston and Kitchener are the dark horses in the group and may throw a monkey wrench into the machinery at any time. Still, taking it all in all, it is hard to see anything but a battle between Varsity and Marlboros for the title, and whoever wins this first game is going to be away to a flying start.

The Varsity outfit will be under a severe handicap in this game, for "Red" Whitehead, the star defence man, will be unable to take part. "Red" was sick all fall, but started to play again, and took part in the Varsity-Grad game. However, he has been forced to retire till after the New Year at least. With Whitehead off the line-up it looks as if the regular defence would be Kirkpatrick and Crosby, with Bob Graham and Don Carrick available for substitutes. Carrick has been turning out for the past week and may give some of the regulars a run for their money. Murray Snyder looks like a sure thing in goal and it is hard to see where any improvement could be made in this position.

The regular forward line looks like Richards and Harkey on the wings, with Mac King and Stewart alternating at the centre position. McMullen relieves Richards on left wing, while Devins subs for Harkey on the right hand position.

The team leaves for their annual trip to New York on December 27, and they play four games in New York and Boston. It is not certain yet just who will make the trip, but it is probable that about eleven men will be taken. This game should go a long way towards getting any of the rough edges worked off before the O.H.A. series starts in real earnest.

Great Hall Dates During Holidays

The Great Hall will be closed on Christmas Day, Sunday, 25th December, and on Monday, 26th December. It will also be closed on New Year's Day, Sunday, 1st January, and on Monday, 2nd January.

ELECTRICAL TIMING OF TRACK ATHLETES

Canadian Institute Hears Dr. Best Explain Physiology of Human Body

REACTION DURING EXERCISE

In his lecture at the Royal Canadian Institute meeting held in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening, Dr. C. H. Best, Research Associate in the Banting-Best Medical Research, gave some of the results of his work in the electrical timing of track athletes. "Physiology," Dr. Best stated, "is the study of the mechanism of the human body, information about which must be obtained from other sciences, such as physics, anatomy and chemistry."

The body obtained motion by the contraction of appropriate sets of combinations of muscles. The latter were composed of thousands of fibres, one-fifth hundredth part of an inch in diameter, and were covered with a transparent membrane, which joined the muscles with the body structure.

When a muscle or fibre received a stimulus along its nerve, it produced a twitch, setting in motion an electric current. Thus we could determine the frequency of these twitches estimating one current for each twitch, by correlating the frequency of a tuning fork of known frequency with the twitch. The muscles in any part of the human body were very strong, as even a frog's muscles could lift one thousand times its own weight.

Sugar existed in muscles as a complex substance, but during muscular contraction it became lactic acid. This acid accumulated until concentration was produced, when the muscles were no longer able to contract. If there were abundance of oxygen available for the muscles, they would be able to recover from the effects of the lactic acid.

During severe exercise the principal substance used was sugar, which formed into lactic acid, passing into the blood. If there was not sufficient oxygen available the isolated muscle went in debt for the oxygen and paid (Continued on page 4)

University College Team Loses Final Game by a 30-11 Score

EDE BUCHANAN STARS

With a score of 30-11 in the second of the final games, held in Hart House Saturday night, Victoria College carried off the women's inter-collegiate basketball championship. The game was unusually fast and well played, and was evenly contested throughout, despite the one-sidedness of the scoring.

The first basket for Victoria was made by Jean Bateman, again in the line-up, during the first few minutes of play. Edith Buchanan, the Vic captain, was the most outstanding player on the floor, making ten out of the fifteen baskets for the Scarlet and Gold, with one beautiful shot from the sideline. Marion Forward, for Vic, was the fastest player, and played consistently all through. Emma Weir played well for University College, and Willene Wallace scored the most baskets. Phil Howard, who was unable to play, was missed on the defence line, but Cay Scholes proved an able substitute.

The referees were Miss Norah Magnion and "Hee" Creighton. Great credit is due to Bob McDougall, who has coached the Vic team for four years, and Phyllis Griffiths, of last year's Intercollegiate, who this year coached University College.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT PERVADES UNIVERSITY

Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior All Welcome Season of Joy

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

E. V. M.

Christmas! What can mean more to the college student? With exams and essays finished, even the last lab experiment written up, he eagerly anticipates the season of festivity. He mentally resolves to work harder next term, thankful in his heart that the tests were no harder than they were. Perhaps there is the solitary student who has still that essay to write which the pressure of student activities has so far prevented completion. Holiday joys speed him on to greater zeal, and the midnight oil is burned to get the last word written in time to catch the early train.

The Christmas season will find the Freshman fully initiated into the many mysteries of college life. He has collected his impressions, and is going home for the first time. He will astound the family with his authority on a multitude of subjects, including manners, theatres and modernism. The Sophomore is now worldly wise. He leaves no stocking hung up for Santa. He looks on with disdain at the enthusiasm of the Freshman. As for the Junior, he is serious and does not think for a moment that he will do that extra little bit of study during the holiday. The Senior has come to the conclusion that he cannot redeem the world and intends to get all the (Continued on page 4) for it after the exercise. As a battery discharged energy rapidly in the starting process, but slowly recharged, so a man, winded at the beginning of the exercise, recovered when it was over. This recovery period lasted from twelve to twenty minutes, after a hundred yard dash and one hour after a quarter mile race. Thirteen point seven litres had been determined as the greatest debt of oxygen an athlete could incur.

The efficiency of the human organism during a definite exercise was calculated by measuring the oxygen requirement. It was found that there was a definite fixed ratio of muscular movement for most types of work. The actual mechanical efficiency of the human body was twenty-five per cent, the efficiency found to vary inversely as the oxygen requirement. This was illustrated by the stationary bicycle, a device invented by Dr. C. J. Martin of the Lister Institute.

It has been proved that the viscosity of the muscles was greater during stimulation and fatigue than in the rested muscle. Of great interest to athletes and coaches was the measurement of the lay of a runner from the firing of the pistol until he was off. This was accomplished by connecting the pistol by means of wires to an apparatus which the runner touched when he started and thence to a series of coils through which an electric current was passed, the jack being registered on a galvanometer. A similar experiment was performed to measure the lay of timers, from the time the pistol was fired till it was registered on the stop watches.

Some of us live too far to go home, or come from foreign lands. Still we cannot fail to get into the Christmas spirit. We may not be of the same faith, nor of the same race. With every tool to build its formless clay—

The consummation of a woman's love

'Twas thus, O gentle Babe of Bethlehem,
As wide-eyed shepherds tell the wondrous story—
A bed of straw within a cheerless hut
Thou'st crowned with unimaginable glory.

Thou who did'st build serene 'mid joy and sorrow
A life more happy than the wild birds' song;
When thy hands groped among the cruel fragments,
Was't love, that made Thee still go building on?

And here's a child of hope and love."

Christmas Thoughts

O. F. C.

I sit by my fireside in the silence of evening
And watch the bright flames soaring high,
While without in the cold the shadows are deepening,
As were the Angel of Death drawing nigh.

A contrast so sharp that it makes me tremble
As I draw even nearer the glow,
For—in youth we are zealous and nimble,
Yet in age so cold and slow.

Like a brook from its source we are joyfully fleeing,
Rippling o'er the pebbles in glee,
But soon the dark river we shall be meeting
And on we shall go to the turbulent sea.

Does time work such a number of changes,
Or is it a work of our own?
Are present evils unavoidable issues,
Or fruits of the seeds we have sown?

Is it because, through the long journey of life
We grow weary and fail at the last?
Or that old ideals then become obscure
In the twilight of the past?

The fire burns low and the glowing embers
Now give forth a fitful light,
And twilight is passing rapidly
To blend in the darkness of night.

O Thou Who wert born in Bethlehem's stable,
Who on Calvary gave forth that last cry,
Teach me the way to live in Thy friendship,
In Thy arms at the end let me die!

GAMES AT MUTUAL ARENA

The local Junior O.H.A. group is one that should provide plenty of action before there is a winner declared. The Marlboros, Varsity, Parkdale Canoe Club and Toronto Canoe Club are the sextettes that will show the fans the way real hockey is played without any of the "bar the door" style of play that is finding such firm supporters amongst the professional teams. The "kids" go at each game with the "do or die" determination that has made Junior hockey so popular wherever it is played. The opening of the section last Thursday provided plenty of exciting hockey that augurs well for the class of the pastime that will be shown in the coming months. The S.P.A. series fully demonstrated the undoubted ability of both Varsity

While the Toronto Canoe Club appeared to be the weak sisters in their battle against the strong Duke club, they are not in first-class shape, and when they come around will give all the rest a sweet battle, as they have the material for a fine outfit. To a Musician

A. M. Ross

Thy expert hands that wander o'er the keys,
The friction keys of gleaming black and white,
With certain touch, now heavy and now light,
In crashing chords or flowing harmonies,
Have toiled long hours to attain that ease
With which they move, and reach the utmost height
Of perfect skill which shows in every flight
Of joyous notes and woven melodies.
But now, how plenteously art thou repaid!
Of all the realm of music thou art free;
For every youthful effort thou hast made,
Thou hast some treasure now in memory;
With mighty masterpieces, truly played,
Thou canst delight the world, thyself, and me.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS (Continued from page 1)

result. Mr. Percival, etc., is elected to the position of scapegoat. He will begin his duties by sweeping out the office Monday.

The next is a small parcel for the Speaker of Hart House Parliament.
The Sergeant-at-Arms comes forth and unties the parcel. A pair of large dice fall to the floor. Let us read the directions which accompany these hellions of wickedness. "Put 'em natural and they'll roll natural." To the uninitiated this means that with these dice you can never lose or, in other words, "The decision is never left to fate."

The next present is for Mr. Winterburn. It is a small round package which, after being unwrapped, brings to view a beautiful lady's garter. On the garter is written, "This is hereby guaranteed to be the garter I wore when I swam the English Channel.
May you ever be worthy of it." Signed,
Mrs. Dr. Logan.

And next Santa hands a large document of sheepskin to Mr. Martin. It is opened, and this is what meets our eyes: "We, the parties of the first part, agree that if ever again combat is staged we, the said parties of the first part, will give the position of sub water boy to one known locally as One-Round Martin, physical director of the University of Toronto.
Signed on behalf of the said parties of the first part, Tex Rickards, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey.

The next lucky person is Mr. Mac-Cutcheon. He is given a large bulky parcel which unfolds a small dummy.
It is neither a doll nor a teddy bear, but somewhere between around its neck is a large collar, on which is emblazoned the words, "Molly Coddle."

And now a huge toy machine with a tube at one end, a handle at the other and a lot of dints in between it is addressed to Dr. Barton and Don Carrick. Let us read the directions.
"Put the tube in the Molly Coddle's mouth. Don Carrick will then press down the handle. Dr. Barton by the control of the dials will give the Molly Coddle whatever food he desires."

Next Santa gives Postumus a large shiny silver case. We are at a loss to know what it is for, until Postumus burst forth, "At last! At last! A flask!
A flask!"

A package of cards made out in blank are for the review reporters.
They are printed in three classes.

our opinion it will receive an exceptionally fine run, etc. No. 2: A most

The last present is for our great with "Printing Stereoscope" written in large letters on it. Let us read the directions. "Place picture in slot, turn

Well, we'll try it. Here's a picture of a man asking a girl for a cup of coffee. We put it in the slot, turn the crank, and here is what comes out in large headlines: "Girl Brutally

Ah God, is it thus that people live?
Without seeing rainbows or the sunset Nor hearing the swift clear call of birds—
Only to toil and to fret?

Yes, God, is it thus that people sleep?

Or to hear a heart singing in joy—
Only to slumber all night?

And God, is it thus that people die?
Forgetting a cross and hands all

Christmas

Dinaden

Christmas time has come again,
And shops along the street.
Are bright to tempt the sons of men
With luscious things to eat;
And laughing round the tinselled town
Surge folk on holiday,
Here and there and up an down
The whole of Christmas day.
So come and walk among the crowd,
And feel your step grow light,
And hear the whole world laugh out loud,
Infected with delight.
For Christmas time will come again,
And we will not be there,
And for kindly laughter then,
'Tis little we will care.

SIR BERTRAM WINDLE WILL AGAIN DELIVER SERIES OF LECTURES

Ethnological Background of Asiatic History is Subject

FIRST LECTURE JAN. 6

Series of Twelve Lectures Will Tell Continuous Story

This afternoon at four-thirty Sir Bertram Windle will open his eighth annual course of public lectures on ethnology, archaeology and kindred subjects. The lectures will be held in the Physics Building. This year a series of twelve lectures will be given on "The Ethnological Background of Asiatic History."

It is anticipated that this course will prove even more popular than its predecessors, which have drawn constant attendance from University people and even those not connected with the University.

The lectures will be illustrated by numerous lantern slides. They are intended to tell a continuous story—a point which should be remembered by those attending. The series will be opened by a general discussion of the geographical, geological and ethnological features of the continent of Asia.

The history of its earliest days will then be undertaken. Each country or group of countries will then be treated in turn, and their history, inhabitants and characteristics dealt with fully. The lectures will be given on successive Fridays at the same hour in the Physics Building.

Lecture I, January 6—Asia and its physical geography. The deserts and especially that of Gobi, with their early history and populations.

Lecture II, January 13—Arabia, the southern grasslands and the Semitic migrations. Mahomet and the Arabs, Mesopotamia and its history. Palestine.

Lecture III, January 20—The northern grasslands and the Indo-European peoples. Their migrations. Persia, its history and peoples.

Lecture IV, January 27—The western fringe of India. Turkestan; Baluchistan and Afghanistan.

Lecture V, February 3—India (i). Physical geography and racial history.

Lecture VI, February 10—India (ii). The races of the country. Ceylon; history and races.

Lecture VII, February 17—Assam; (Continued on page 4)

LOUD 'TORONTO' A FEATURE OF CHRISTMAS COMMERCE

Down-town Stores Employ Many Students During Holidays

College halls and residences may have been stilling during the holidays; but down-town stores and offices in many cases received a large quota of students as extra helpers during the seasonal rush. Book stores, perhaps, had the best representation of University undergraduates.

In one of the department stores it was the custom to unite in singing carols every morning of the week preceding Christmas. Arts men relate with glee how a spontaneous addition to the programme was made when a loud "Toronto" was delivered. Whereupon the Mads prepared for an emphatic "Epistaxis," but refrained out of courtesy to a speaker on the platform. Riverview Collegiate then stepped into the breach with their yell, thus discomfiting and anticipating their seniors in age, wisdom and experience.

TORONTO DELEGATES RETURN FROM S.V.M. DETROIT CONVENTION

Addresses Are Given By Many Prominent Speakers and Missionaries

NEARLY 4,000 ATTEND

Whether East Should Emulate West is the Primary Discussion

That Western civilization was no longer a thing worthy of emulation in all its parts, that the Westernizing of Jesus would not be any more acceptable to the East, and that racial prejudices could not be made to fit in with the programme of Christianity, were a few of the salient facts brought out during the five days of the Student Volunteer Movement Convention at Detroit, according to delegates who have returned to Toronto.

Nearly 4,000 students, representing every country in Europe, Asia and America, gathered on December 28th in the beautiful Masonic Temple for the opening session. Canada's contingent, collected from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts, numbered somewhere in the vicinity of three hundred, the University of Toronto and its federated colleges supplying 80 to the count. A special train carried the Canadian contingent to Detroit, and this offered the first opportunity of a real get together of the Canadian universities. Strange and varied were some of the yells heard on the train, and the smaller the number the greater the volume of the yell and the more often heard. Thus it is a safe bet that for every one "Toronto" heard there were six "Manitobas" and "Saskatchewanews."

Addresses at the conference were delivered by such well-known speakers and missionaries as Henry J. Hodgkin, Medical Missionary of West China; Roy H. Akagi, General Secretary of the Japanese Students' Christian Association; Francis Wei, President of Central China Christian University; Max Yergan, National Secretary of the South African Y.M.C.A. GRADUATES' NEW YEAR BALL LIVELY AFFAIR

French Canadian Atmosphere Pervades Hart House on Dec. 30

The gay influence of French Canada pervaded Hart House on Friday, Dec. 30, the occasion of the Graduates' New Year Ball. The spirit of the habitation dominated the event, while a romantic atmosphere entranced the 1,200 guests. The programmes had on them a picture of a Quebec habitation; the halls were adorned with evergreen; long pieces of homespun, and French tapestries, and even the musicians and attendants were in appropriate costumes.

For the amusement of the guests exhibitions of log-birling were given by the Letang brothers of Gaitneau Point, and a number of folk songs were sung by M. Charles Marchand, the former especially evoking warm applause. During the supper M. Marchand led in the singing of "Alouette," and the whole gathering joined in with untroubled enthusiasm.

The decorations were especially suggestive of the life of the Canadian and had been specially designed by Mr. Arthur Limer. The beautiful design on the platform in the big gym was especially commented on. The whole ball was as rollicking a social affair as has ever been put on in Hart House.

"Fowl" Burglary Enacted in Residence At Queen's Park Last Night

An enterprising second-story man attempted to burglarize the men's residence at 75 Queen's Park last night. The owner of a room on the second floor lost the contents of his club bag. Earlier in the evening he had put the bag and a particularly fine fowl, brought from home, on the portico outside his window.

About ten o'clock he heard a noise, and dashing to the window he saw the half-crouched figure of a man. The intruder, being alarmed, grabbed at the parcel and flung himself over the ledge, dropping some fifteen feet to the ground. By the time the alarm was raised the bold housebreaker had disappeared into the shadows of Victoria College. The student is bemoaning the loss of an excellent chicken, and no doubt the burglar is contemplating the value of a raw dinner.

Several cases of theft have been reported of late about the Victoria residences. But previously the sneak-thief has contented himself to the occasional overcoat and club-bag.

JOURNALISTS GATHER AT S.V.M. MEETING LIST OF AWARDS IS ANNOUNCED

College Press and Missionary Enterprise is Subject of Discussion

SCALPING CRITICIZED

The following account of journalistic activities within the Student Volunteer Movement was given to "The Varsity" by a Toronto delegate.

An interesting feature of the Student Volunteer Convention at Detroit was the gathering together at luncheon of all the representatives of University and College newspapers present at the Convention. Mr. Hungerford of the American Press Association presided and led in the discussion which followed on "How can the College paper best help such movements as the Missionary Enterprise and International Relationships."

The discussion disclosed the fact that few, if any, University newspapers are permitted (as it was put) to deal in matters even suggestive of theology. It was claimed that very few undergraduates in our colleges had any interest or desire to have any interest in the subject matters of the discussion, more especially the first named. Our friends from McGill, who unblushingly introduced themselves as the oldest University Daily in Canada, claimed to be an exception, and pointed rather hopelessly to the fact that their editor-in-chief was a theologian. Our own representative tried to make out a good case for Toronto, but this was rather spoilt by the girl from Manitoba who naively inquired about, "All that correspondence in your pocket-books." One man from Mississippi declared that his presence there was not to be mistaken as indicative of his newspaper's interest in the Student Volunteer Movement. His instructions were to get readable matter for his newspaper readers, and the only way he could turn that valuable convention to any account in so far as his newspaper was concerned would be to thoroughly criticize and make fun of all that had transpired.

One fair co-ed was asked what action she would take to guarantee that a fairly representative report got into her paper; she replied that she would (Continued on page 4)

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF UNIVERSITY STUDENTS HOLDS MEETING HERE

PUBLIC HEALTH MOVE UNDER WAY

Given Stimulus by Effort to Honour Dr. Hastings, City Health Officer

SUBSCRIPTIONS IN ORDER

There is a unique public health movement on foot in Toronto. Starting spontaneously at a gathering in Hygeia House, it originated as an effort on the part of private citizens to honour Toronto's veteran medical health officer, Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, by giving some concrete token of their gratitude to him for long years of service.

It was first suggested that a portrait of Dr. Hastings be painted and presented to the city, a proposal which met with the complete approval of the Mayor and City Council, and a committee of outstanding men, both medical men and laymen, undertook to take charge of the effort and the raising of funds to make it possible.

The original suggestion, however, has now broadened out until it has more than a merely local significance, and is a campaign which touches anyone interested in the promotion of public health. The committee has decided that, in addition to the portrait, several scholarships in public health will be endowed, by public subscription, at the University of Toronto, and that these awards will be named after Toronto's dean of health officers. There will be at least two of them and possibly more, but so far, it has not been decided whether they will be open to undergraduate medical students, graduates who desire to do further research in public health fields, public health nurses or to all three. Nor have details of the way in which the awards are to be made been settled.

The most important feature of the entire affair, however, is the fact that it indicates an ever-growing consciousness of the importance of public health measures on the part of the average citizen, and that an effort of this sort, moreover, serves to further impress (Continued on page 4)

TORONTO OFFERED GOOD WISHES FROM ALL SIDES

University Centenary Draws Congratulations From Fifty-six Sources

The messages of felicitation and congratulation sent to the University of Toronto for her hundredth birthday by sister institutions throughout the world are on view in the main hall of Simcoe Hall.

There are fifty-six illuminated and decorated messages from all over the world. Some of the messages are written by hand so precisely that it seems almost to have been done by machinery.

Many languages are represented, being, of course, Latin, then French, English, German, Polish, Swedish, Spanish and others. All the Universities in Canada send greetings.

Others come from such institutions as the University of Rome, the University of Poland; Stockholm, Sweden; the University of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; the Pasteur Institute and others.

There are altogether fifty-six, covering about four hundred feet of the wall. Some are obviously printed forms, with the proper name, time and date filled in, while others are written and decorated elaborately and laboriously by hand.

Prospect of Friendly Relations With Similar Organizations in Other Countries

DEBATING TOURS IN VIEW

Messrs. Donohue and Kenny, and Misses Parkes and Holden to Represent Toronto

Another convention was added to the long list of gatherings at this University in the meeting of the National Federation of Canadian University Students held during the Christmas holidays. Twenty-two Canadian delegates from sixteen universities were present.

The most important step taken was the outlining of a scheme of debating between the represented universities. The first debating tour will be conducted by a team of three Maritime students who will debate at university and non-university centres between Quebec and British Columbia.

It was also announced that a debating team from Central Canada, if negotiations under way were completed, would tour one of the districts of the National Federation of Students of America. An invitation from the National Union of England and Wales to send a debating team of two next fall had been accepted, it was announced.

A scheme of exchanging undergraduates between Canadian universities was also discussed. The exchanges were not to exceed one per cent of the attendance of the university represented. Free tuition would necessarily be a part of the scheme.

International relations were debated at length. It was recommended that the Confederation agitate for the admission of German students into the International body as a part of their attempt to be admitted to the International Confederation of University Students.

McGILL INTERESTED IN FOREIGN STUDENTS

Motive is Desire to Further Particular International Relations

McGill University at Montreal is making efforts to attract students from the countries of South America, according to a despatch from Montreal. It is understood that prominent men in those countries are being circularized with a view towards influencing young men of weight and influence to avail themselves of facilities which McGill offers in University training.

A number of South American students come annually to Canada, and McGill intends to attempt to further the relations of trade, culture and commerce between this Dominion and South America. It is realized that a great many foreigners of this type come to Canada to study conditions of trade and economics.

Floor of Victoria College Receives a Bright Polish

Among other startling renovations conducted during the holidays, the floor of Victoria College was once more given a facial massage and treatment. Whether comedones entered into the proposition or not is not known.

The upper hall, picture gallery of three generations of ecclesiastics, now has the aspects of a dance palace. Only a few palms and century plants are now needed to make the place look like a taperscholar resort.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 6, 1928

LOOKING FORWARD

The undergraduate is back again, at least temporarily possessed with new thoughts, new ideals and a recently acquired determination to study and otherwise make the most of his remaining session's work and life. Business interests look toward to a big year in 1928, and so might we, too, in so far as our academic work is concerned. It but remains to hold steadfast those New Year's resolutions, to make the most of the opportunity to acquire new knowledge and a fresh outlook on life, and, in general, be prepared,—as one easily might—so that the distress and worry of tests and final examinations will give way to peace and certainty.

We give exception in the latter statement to the budding graduate. There can be no actual peace or certainty for him. It is right now, to-day, that he is on the threshold of life, and, from to-day on, will he be called to face new problems, make fresh decisions and to taste the trials of life.

It takes the New Year to arouse such a realization. Previously graduation had seemed far away indeed—almost as far, in fact, as it did appear the short three, four or five years ago when first the expectant graduate now entered these halls as an expectant, hesitating youth who was yet, at the same time, secretly confident in his own ability with a self-appreciated knowledge of his worth.

Despite the laurels that he may have won, or the honours that have been thrust upon him, the youth of that day has lost much of his poise, his self-satisfaction and appreciation of his own wisdom. That he may prove to be a brilliant and successful banker, broker, lawyer or doctor he is not so certain. His experience has shown him many clever men in his own profession who are not actually successful, but he has, at the same time, found that contentment may come from other things. A change in attitude, expectation and demands has come with fresh discoveries from life just as, years ago, dreams of being a policeman, cowboy or other glorious hero of youth passed as a feverish dream.

One reads of successes from humble beginning, and of failures. Luck has appeared to play a part in both, but actually industry and perseverance has been honoured, and especially so when coupled with imagination, critical judgment and daring. That, at least, is just about how it appears to the coming graduate, and he can, on that score, feel satisfied that he has some measure of education that will fit him to an advantageous start, and that has, as well, removed much of the tinsel and glamour from the actually unreal.

As those successful men of to-day who are no longer in their youth must eventually pass away to be replaced by the youth of this generation, so is there a chance for one and all at the top in law, or science, or medicine or whatever it may be, and, equal in the opportunities of education, our path may generally be said to lie in the direction of our tendencies, and its length will be that of our ambitions.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Theatre

The Hart House Christmas presentation, "Alice in Wonderland," which is to be given for the remainder of the present week, was professionally inspected by us on its second performance, and is by this time probably a much smoother production than the one of early last week. A pantomime of such ambitious proportions is a very difficult undertaking and needs several days to attain that degree of smoothness necessary to appeal to the would-be critical mind, but we would advise any persons who have a predilection for Christmas plays not to miss "Alice in Wonderland," for of its kind it is a fairly satisfactory entertainment.

To be brutally frank we have lost that infantile delight in "Alice" so evident in the faces of children and lovable grown-ups, and we now regard "Alice" as we do "Gulliver's Travels," as the very bitter satires on human-kind which they are intended to be, yet on first inspection do not appear. The current performance of "Alice" adheres closely in its unconnected episodes to the book's better known passages, but, to be honest, it does lack sequence terribly for one who has read Diderot and Lessing, and even Shaw. Lest our judgment might be warped by Santa Claus' oversights we appealed to several enlightened people as to the merits of "Alice in Wonderland" when compared to "The Rose and the Ring" of last season, and the unanimity of decision in favour of the latter was highly gratifying to our trembling critical sense.

The silhouette pantomime of "Cinderella" which preceded "Alice" was a delightful and careful work of artistry; indeed, we enjoyed it far more than "Alice" proper. To the performers in the silhouette and to Mr. Aikins much praise is due for the creation of an artistic work of beauty.

Miss Margaret Wilson brought Alice to life in the pantomime, and was the identical figure enshrined in the imaginations of all who have read the book. As the King of Hearts, H. E. Hitchman made use of all of his natural gifts for comedy, and his recital of "Jabberwocky" was the outstanding event of the evening. Leslie Floyd as the Dormouse was adequately smug, and Miss Eleanor Norton as Cheshire Puss was delightfully sad. The rest of the dramatic lunaticae were very well portrayed, but as they were originally a band of irresponsible fantastic creatures walking round in mental circles with no visible purpose, we could not regard them with any degree of sympathy. Regard "Alice" as what Lewis Carroll intended it to be, a little girl's nightmare, and if you like those things, why then, keep on liking them, but as a jury of one, we are forced to bring in the verdict of "Guilty, with recommendations for mercy on the ground of mental incompetence."

The fault is not Mr. Aikins, for his direction is as capable as the performances given by the actors of the play—the real fault lies in the non-negotiable and non-dramatic nature of the literary material in question. But—if you like the book, you will like the Hart House presentation of some of its more comprehensible incidents.

"SOUTH OF BLOOR"

(Chapter 4)

New Year's was over and so was Christmas, and with a sort of Scotch fortitude Dick Dare began to look forward to St. Valentine's Day. He stood alone on the campus, an Ishmael, lonely as a University Police Force and as meaningless. "Well," he thought, "I am no longer Dick Dare of Knox College nor of the Department of Culinary. I could not master the technique of subtly blending Hart House tapica. What, alas, am I? I am a man without a faculty." And so he went to University College, that grand old edifice where the Bedouin is as welcome as the Nicaraguan, and they made him feel at home.

He stood one morning in the common room and no one spoke to him—they passed him by with a calm tolerant indifference. "Why," he thought, "I might as well be at Trinity." He was as lonely as the Unitarian at Knox. A pariah, an outcast and a complete cadaver—"and now," he mused, "since I have no friends, and no prospects, I shall join the other outcasts"—and he joined "The Varsity."

The Editor-in-Chief gurgled scornfully at him, the News Editor roared hoarsely at him for one so young, and the only one who welcomed him was the Detested Feline. Here at least was a kindred spirit, one whose hand was against every man, and who had every man's hand against him, to say nothing of the indifferent rancour of desirable co-eds and ladies of marked mentality.

"Come, Dick," said the Feline, "and we will drown our sorrows in a tankard of Stone Ginger"—not one, but three tankards did they surround, and then they felt effervescent. And now we reached the nadir—Dick Dare could sink no lower—he staggered home and ate a cube of yeast, prepared to rise in the morning and join the S.C.M. Hope springeth eternal.

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

The feature presentation at the Hippodrome this week is "Man Crazy," starring Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill. It is just fair, consisting mainly of close-ups, and whatever action there may be, is of a poor quality. However, if one has ever suffered the tyrannies of a mid-Victorian grandmother they will be amused at it.

The comedy consisted of "The Collegians." As usual it was rotten—in fact it was the worst we have ever seen. We strongly advise all prospective theatre-goers to go late and avoid it or to go early and hiss. We have seen poor affairs, but never one so terrible as this. Moreover, rumour hath it that a second and a third series are on their way.

The vaudeville bill was good. Shea's certainly are unique in presenting vaudeville that serves to atone for mediocre movies. The Bardolows open in an acrobatic act that is original and excellent. Medley and Dupree put the audience in an appreciative humour. Their demonstration of the new Ford is the first of its kind to hit Toronto. Lew, Welsh and Co. follow in a peculiar play. Personally, we considered it only fair but other reviewers seemed to like it.

Healey and Cross have some original song hits—sung in original verse. But they are good and really feature this part of the bill. Miss Shuron Devries' Revue is a riot of colour with splendid dancing. It is an act that is out of the ordinary vaudeville style and is well worth seeing.

Dear Champus:

Wuxtry! The Publicity Department of the University of Twankydillo begs to announce the appointment of Dr. Thegreat Iam, B.A. (Shlds), Been Lit. (Oxon), A.F.A.M. (Tor.), A.B.S. & C. (McM.), C.P.R. Professor Iam has had a Distinguished Career, having taken his Licentiate in Lying after a brilliant post-graduate course. He comes to Twankydillo after decade as Demonstrator in Deception at an eminent college of the old world. "Aren't lies splendid," said the professor when interviewed. "They are rich, fruitful and of good report."

Academe.

Once more may we repeat—go late and avoid "The Collegians," or go early and hiss loudly. How any self-respecting producer can consider that it is Collegian, or in fact anything, is beyond us.

Women students at the University of Omaha have decided to organize a girls' pep society, the purpose of which will be to organize cheering at the games. The plan for membership is that six "barb" girls be elected by the student body from each class and each sorority choose five of their number to be members of this organization.

JUNIORS vs DUKES TO-NIGHT; SENIORS vs PETERBORO TO-MORROW

SPEAKING OF SPORT

There are two hockey treats in store for the Varsity fans over the weekend. The first is to-night when the Juniors take on the group-leading Marlboros in one half of a Big Four double-header at the Varsity Arena. The second is the Varsity-Peterboro Senior game at the local Arena on Saturday.

It looks like a tough game for the Juniors, but there is no reason to be alarmed at the chances of Frank Sullivan's boys. They are a real team, and the Dukes are expecting a battle, and it is far from likely that they will be disappointed. The Blue boys are right in their stride and are all set to climb up to the top rung of the ladder along with the Dukes. An added attraction at this game is the fact that there will be two games for the price of one, the other struggle bringing together the two canoe clubs, Parkdale and Toronto.

The Seniors should start the new year off right in their game against Peterboro, as the Petes are looked upon as one of the weaker sisters in the Senior group. Still it is a long time since any team has been able to trifle with the Peterboro entry and get away with it. The locals are just back from their trip to the States, and are all set and ready to go. "All set" is used advisedly and means that they are willing and ready to take on anyone. The fact of the matter is that they will be far from top strength. Mac King is out of the game with a dislocated shoulder and will be unable to play for at least a month. This is a sore blow to the team and a further handicap is the fact that Wes Richards has a broken thumb. The dashing left winger will probably be in the game all right, but he will be playing under a severe handicap.

One good thing that came out of the holiday trip was the unearthing of a new star in Don Carrick. The big boy is well known as a golfer, rugby player and boxer, but was never reckoned a star hockey player. According to the report of the games with the American teams, Don was one of the best men on the ice. This comes as a pleasant surprise, and his performances will be watched with keen interest.

The Varsity Seniors swing into action at the Varsity Arena to-morrow afternoon when they take on the Peterboro entry in the O.H.A. race. The Varsity outfit got away on the right foot with a win in their first start and are all set to make it two straight wins. A victory will put them in a pretty position.

The locals will not be at full strength for the contest, as they suffered several injuries on their American trip. Mac King will not be able to play owing to a dislocated shoulder which will keep him out of the game for some time. Richards will be in uniform despite the fact that he has an injured thumb. Kirkpatrick is also suffering from a severe cold, but he will be out there despite this handicap.

Notwithstanding these injuries there is no reason why the Varsity outfit should not turn in a win. Peterboro was a long time deciding to enter the series this year due to loss of players to the pro ranks, and they are not reckoned on as serious contenders. The games during the holidays served as good practice for the locals, and they should be going at full steam when they step into the Petes.

Although Varsity only broke even on their four games in the States, they made a creditable showing, and there are several factors that must be considered in their two defeats. In the Harvard game the Americans used seventeen players, putting a new team on the ice every few minutes. As Varsity only had three substitutes they were at a decided disadvantage, and these games cannot be considered as serious defeats.

VARSITY JUNIORS PLAY MARLBOROS

Team Has a Chance to Share Top Place With Opponents

REAL FIGHT ASSURED

Varsity fans will have a chance to see their Junior entry in the O.H.A. series to-night when Frank Sullivan's boys take on the group-leading Marlboros at the Varsity Arena. This is the first of these popular double-headers to be held at the Varsity Arena and should attract a capacity crowd.

The Dukes are out in front of the group at present with three wins and one loss. Varsity and Parkdale Canoe Club are tied for second place with two wins each, and the other entry, Toronto Canoe Club, is trailing with a win and three losses. A win for the Blue and White over the Dukes would put them on even terms at the head of the standing.

The Varsity crew have a real team this year and bid fair to give the Dukes a run for the honours. The strength of the local entry is shown by the fact that Marlboros are strengthening their line-up for to-night's game. McPherson will be back at the centre position, and Harvey Jackson, who has been performing in the Mercantile League, will be in uniform in an attempt to stop the rush of the local entry.

However, despite all the changes in the Dukes' line-up, the Varsity boys will be in the fight, and the Dukes will be assured of a real battle. In the other game the two canoe clubs clash and this promises to be a real game.

VARSITY INTERMEDIATES TRIM BOLTON—SCORE 5-3

Score is Tied in the Second Period But Bolton -- Weakens

Varsity Intermediates won the opening game of the season at Bolton last night. The game provided a good brand of hockey, and only late in the second period was the battle decided in Varsity's favour, the final score being 5-3. Gilfillen and Crosby were the first to score, then Bolton got one, leaving the first period score 2-1 for Varsity. Bolton tied the score in the second period, only to have Crosby bulge the twine for Varsity. McKnight also got two in this period, making the score 5-2. In the third period Bolton got one, but could not overcome the lead.

Varsity: Goal, Little; defence, Graham and Algie; centre, McKnight; wings, Crosby and Evans; subs, Gilfillen and Irwin.

VALUABLE BIRD PAINTINGS
PRESENTED TO MUSEUM

Works of Major Allan Brooks
Have Premiere Showing at This Institution

Paintings of birds native to Eastern Canada have recently been received by the Ornithological Section of the Royal Ontario Museum. These paintings, it is announced, are the work of the famous artist, Major Allan Brooks, and have been presented to the Museum by Havelock Robb, the naturalist of Belleville.

A number of similar paintings were exhibited in the Museum a year ago. The Museum now has fifty-one of these paintings. The eighteen recently acquired have never been exhibited elsewhere before.

Included in the collection is one of the now extinct passenger pigeon, which was purchased through the generosity of Mr. Paul Hahn.

Riding a Log in H.H. Tank
Novel Event at Grads' Ball

Riding logs in water, technically known as "birling," was a feature of the Graduates' Ball held in Hart House during the holidays. A log about twelve feet long and two feet thick was used. Much difficulty was experienced in getting it in and out of the Hart House swimming pool. It was too long to be manipulated through the ordinary doors, so that one of the windows which are at the end of the corridor by the showers was removed, and the log hoisted through with much effort. All day Wednesday it lay on the sidewalk to the west of Hart House looking like a piece of misplaced artillery.

H. Goldhamer is Chess
Champion for Third Time

H. Goldhamer, president of the University of Toronto Chess Club, retains the chess championship of the University for his third consecutive year, by virtue of his defeat of W. P. Wallace, 3-1, in their four game match. The first two games were draws, Goldhamer winning the third and fourth encounters. This is the first time the chess championship has been won three years by the same player.

ANNUAL XMAS DINNER

Hart House was by no means idle during the Christmas vacation, in spite of the absence of most undergrads who were spending the holiday season in their homes. Social events, conventions, and visitors kept the place busy; while not a few students who were unable to go home for Christmas made appreciative use of its privileges.

Before Christmas two events of special interest took up the time of Warden Bickersteth and his corps of assistants. On Wednesday, December 21, two hundred and twenty boys and young men from the University Settlement were given a lively evening's entertainment. Members of the House and Hall committees were the hosts with the kind co-operation of the physical directors, Messrs. Martin, McCutcheon and Winterburn. The gymnasium, the track, and above all, the pool, provided means of pleasure in the early evening. Later there was a special supper in the Great Hall, at which Sir Robert Falconer cut the large Christmas cake. The Warden and Sir Robert addressed the guests around the fireplace in the Great Hall and later presented them with a box of candy or a package of cigarettes.

Representatives from each province and from the Yukon joined students from a dozen other countries at Warden Bickersteth's annual Christmas dinner held the next evening. This was a jovial affair, the Christmas atmosphere giving to each guest a glimpse of the holiday spirit. The Warden presented to each of his guests a coloured etching of the Memorial Tower by F. S. Haies.

Many members of the Harvard Glee Club made use of the House during their visit. Before their concert on Tuesday, December 27, they gave a special Christmas dinner in the Great Hall, at which Dr. Ernest Macmillan and the Warden were the only guests. During the dinner they honoured the University by singing three Harvard songs which it is not customary to sing away from Harvard University. They still further honoured Hart House by singing another song in which the name of the House was mentioned. While the attendance at their concert was disappointing, the Glee Club expressed itself as being well pleased with their Toronto visit, especially by their reception at Hart House.

Many students from the west and from the Maritimes visited Hart House during the vacation on their way to the Detroit Students' Convention. A party from Cornell University also paid a visit to the House and were immensely struck by what they saw.

and a negro of distinction; Albert Beaven, Minister of Rochester, just returned from an investigation of missions in China and Japan; Mildred Welch, of Chengtu, West China, 'who looks like 18 but has the wisdom of 36'; Dr. W. E. S. Holland of India; Frank Laubach of the Philippines; John A. Mackay, Professor of Metaphysics in the University of San Marcos, Peru; Mordecai Johnson, President of Howard University, Washington; Reinhold Niebuhr of Bethel Evangelical Church, Detroit; Sherwood Eddy, John R. Mott, Robert S. Speere, and Richard Roberts, none of whom need any introduction to Canadians; Mrs. Paul Appasamy of Presidency College, Madras, and W. Y. Chen, Professor in Fukein Christian University, China.

"Such questions as our relations with foreign students on the campus, our attitudes to the missionary enterprise, how University students can help produce a better international situation, our responsibilities in the future for carrying the spirit of Jesus into foreign countries whether we do so as theologians, scientists, or as business men, were discussed with a frankness that was very refreshing, if at some times rather distressing in their disclosure of hopeless failure in the past," stated a delegate.

The conference concluded on Sunday evening, January 1st, and the Canadian delegates returned the following day to their various university centres.

Another editor, editor-in-chief herself of an American weekly paper, expressed the fear that only through her editorials could she deal with the matter, and then later admitted that she doubted that those editorials were ever read. Mr. Hungerford inquired how much of the reports appearing in the Detroit newspapers would be utilised by college reporters. This brought some rather prompt replies, all tending to show that it was the city papers that scalped the college papers and not vice-versa; only one man declaring that he was carrying back all the Detroit papers with him as his notes. As a result of all the discussion it was decided to watch critically all the university exchanges to see which one was most generous to the S.V.M. The Varsity

The Undergraduate Newspaper

VOL. XLVII.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, MONDAY, JANUARY 9, 1928.

No. 60

CITY PRESS ERRS IN CALLING U. OF T. TORONTO UNIVERSITY

Official Name is "University of Toronto" as Used in All Documents

MAJORITY USE RIGHT TERM University No Longer Called "Varsity" As Often As It Used To Be

"The official name is the University of Toronto. There is no authority whatsoever for calling it 'Toronto University,'" declared A. B. Fennell, Assistant Registrar of the University of Toronto when questioned by "The Varsity" on Saturday as to the proper designation of that academic institution, which sections of the downtown press repeatedly call "Toronto University."

The "Toronto Star" is of the opinion that if the majority of the people call it "Toronto University" it is "Toronto University"—a supposedly quite proper method of determining English usage. But Mr. Fennell is inclined to believe that the majority of people do not at present call it "Toronto University."

"That might have been so twenty-five years ago," said Mr. Fennell. "At that time from the public platform and the press it was almost always termed Toronto University."

And the Assistant Registrar produced an old book of newspaper clippings of twenty-five years ago to prove his statement. At that time the conflicts and squabbles of the University seemed much in the public eye. There were news articles and letters to the editor galore, and invariably in them all the name "Toronto University" appeared. There was one notable exception. "University of Toronto" was used in an official letter from President Loudon.

"At present, however, public and press alike are more and more beginning to call it 'University of Toronto,'" continued Mr. Fennell. "A glance to-day over newspaper articles in general will quickly reveal that."

How the name "Toronto University" arose, Mr. Fennell did not know, unless just as a more simple abbreviated form, for never at any time was the official name other than "University of Toronto." From the earliest times that term has been used in documents relating to the University. As to the statement made by a few of its proponents that the phrase "Toronto University" could be found in some official documents, Mr. Fennell stated he knew of none, although, of course, there might be cases where the phrase was used through clerical error.

In connection with this it is of interest to note that the phrase "Toronto University" is still used in some official documents, Mr. Fennell stated he knew of none, although, of course, there might be cases where the phrase was used through clerical error.

Diogene's Daily Questionnaire May Males Wear Hat in Halls?

The question for to-day is: "Do you think that men should remove their hats upon entering University buildings?" To-day's answers indicate the opinions of the men towards the matter. To-morrow Diogenes will present the feminine viewpoint.

R. A. McEachern, II, Arts: "If we came to the University properly clothed, we would wear gowns. But since we don't, it matters little. We have too little in modern life maintaining scholastic traditions. The fact that men wear their hats in college halls merely indicates the attitude which some of the local undergraduates hold towards tradition."

A. E. Dymet, III, S.P.S.: "I don't think it is necessary in buildings frequented by men alone as in school buildings and Hart House."

C. P., IV, Arts: "Yes, I think they should, to maintain the proper attitude of respect and not violate the atmosphere of erudition which pervades the academic corridors."

W. S., II, Arts: "I think it depends largely on the type of hat worn. The Turkish fez, night caps, sombreros, bowler hats, and similar foreign perpetrations should, in my opinion, be discouraged. Mortar boards are the only fitting headgear for college halls."

PRESIDENT OF HAMLINE IS VISITING UNIVERSITY

Alfred F. Hughes, New President of Minnesota College, Admires Hart House

Alfred F. Hughes, the newly appointed president of Hamline University at St. Paul, Minnesota, was an interested visitor to the University of Toronto over the week-end. His particular point of interest was Hart House.

Immediately after his arrival President Hughes was shown through Hart House by Warden Bickersteth. He expressed himself as being much impressed with the House as a men's club, and mentioned in particular the Theatre, the Chapel and the Great Hall.

Dr. Hughes yesterday also visited certain other buildings in the University, including Burwash Hall and Wymulwood.

Saturday evening he spent some time with Sir Robert Falconer.

FATIGUE OF METALS IS ALMOST HUMAN

Progressive Fracture of Metal is More Just Term for Reaction

PROF. H. F. MOORE SPEAKS

"The Fatigue of Metals" was the subject of the Royal Canadian Institute lecture on Saturday, delivered by Prof. H. F. Moore, Research Professor of Engineering Materials at the University of Illinois. The fatigue of metals is so called from the resemblance to the breaking down of human muscles under strain, and might be termed, more aptly, the progressive fracture of metals. Demand for knowledge in this field arose through the extensive use of aeroplanes, and the National Research Council of the United States of America united with two other interested bodies, and appointed Dr. Moore to investigate.

This phenomenon of the fatigue of metals is demonstrated by the sudden breakage of axles, especially in locomotives, and is a very important part of the mechanics of materials.

Even pure metals are not homogeneous. They are composed of crystalline grains, inside which are seclusions of foreign material. It was formerly believed that, under repeated strain, metals cracked along the lines of the crystals. Now it is found that the crack is very irregular, seeking and reaching out toward the seclusions of impure matter.

Fatigue cracks give no warning, and the broken section reveals a surface partly smooth and partly rough, the latter seemingly crystalline in formation. It used to be thought that the

FAR-SEEING POLICY LEADS TO PURCHASE OF ST. GEORGE HOUSE

42 St. George Street is Bought With One Eye on Future of University

DEVELOPMENT OF SCHEME Changes Are Coming in Front of Parliament Buildings in Queen's Park

"It is just in the policy of the University to acquire, from time to time, property on St. George Street as it becomes available, and as the University has available funds," said Colonel LePan, B.A.Sc., Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, when interviewed by "The Varsity," regarding the University's purchase of the property at 42 St. George Street. "It is a long range view looking to the future. It is not that they are going to put any particular department in it, for they are not, at the moment."

The property in question is situated on the west side of St. George Street between the Boys' and Girls' House of the Public Library and the Council of Jewish Women Community House. It was purchased from Mrs. J. D. Hay for a sum reputed to be in excess of $30,000. The assessment is $24,500, of which $14,000 is on the land.

The property has a frontage of 100 feet, and is 198 feet deep. The house is a 2 1-2 storied structure finished in plain white stucco, and designed along colonial lines with three gothic windows in front. The roof is of slate. At the left-hand side of the house a concrete drive leads to a 1 1-2 storied double garage. The re-

Innumerable Ills Stop Students Getting Exercised in P.T. Classes

That ninety-two per cent. of all male students in the University are physically fit, is revealed by a study of data secured by the University Department of Health. Six per cent. of the student body can take corrective exercises, while only two per cent. are debarrd from any form of athletics by reason of their health. Last year there was very little serious disease around the University, which is evidenced by contrasting the hundreds of vaccinations that have been done this year with the fact that there were only two last year.

During the year 1926-1927 four hundred and eighty-two men were partially excused from physical training classes due to the condition of their health. By far the greatest number of these were afflicted with a common cold. Some one hundred and ninety odd had presented certificates showing that an ordinary cold proved strong enough to temporarily lay them up. The next most prevalent disease was influenza. Following these came a whole host of temporary ailments. Serious operations accounted for the laying up of eight men, while one hundred and nine were prevented from

ASIATIC GEOGRAPHY FEATURES LECTURE BY BERTRAM WINDLE

Dinosaurs, Camels, Rhinoceros and Ostriches Once Dwelt in Asiatic Lands

FIRST LECTURE OF SERIES In Further Addresses Countries Each to be Described in Detail

On Friday, January 6th, there was held in the Physics Building the first of a series of lectures to be delivered by Sir Bertram Windle, on the Ethnological Background of Asiatic History. Sir Bertram first explained that in this course he would treat Asia in the same manner as Europe was treated last year. After a general description of the physical geography of the continent and its earliest history, he will consider each group of countries in turn, describing their characters, history and inhabitants, with special attention to India and China. This course, like its predecessors, will be illustrated by numerous camera slides.

The first lecture dealt with the physical geography of Asia and the desert, especially the Gobi desert. The piling up of great mountain masses was shown by the slides, also the Tundra regions in the north, those undulating districts with small trees, rocks, pools and little vegetation. The Isthmus of Persia forms the parting of the ways between Europe and Asia, the true Asia lying east of Persia. The Gobi desert and the other great deserts are covered with yellow earth, partly grown and partly alluvial product of the last

CLASSES IN PROSPECTING HOUSE BURIED INTEREST

Extension Lecture Course is Soon to be Commenced for Engineers

Geologists and Mining engineers may be sneaking back to school again, when the Extension Department begins its classes in prospecting. Since the last course two years ago there have been a great many requests for training in prospecting. From the hardened backwoods prospector to im-maculate geologists, no one has been trained completely in methods of finding valuable minerals.

Increased development in mining resulted from similar classes given by the Ontario Government in northern towns. A few years ago the occurrence of copper deposits in Rouyn had not been realized, but since people have been shown what to look for, huge ore bodies have been opened up.

Students in the University's course will not have to try the excavating powers of dynamite and picks as this course will be held in the lecture rooms.

SKATING IS CHIEF SPORT IN WINTER

Snow Sports Less Popular and Appeal Only to Enthusiasts

RELATIVELY INEXPENSIVE

When winter comes over the campus a pair of skates slung across the shoulder seems to be the insignia of students of the University of Toronto as far as outdoor non-competitive sport is concerned. General interest seems to be in the rink, though there is considerable diversity of healthy outdoor recreation during the winter months. Only enthusiasts and class hikers pay much attention to tobogganing or snow-shoeing, while hilarious urchins sliding down the banks of the ancient Taddle north of the Library seem to be the chief exponents of the bob-sleigh. Skis are seldom seen, although not a few students come from districts where they are in popular demand. Even the evergreen popularity of the sleighing party, with its gay cries, freezing feet, blatting horns and merry songs, seems to be gradually fading.

Skating is as popular in some countries as skating is here, and students from these countries are still sometimes seen in High Park, which provides an excellent and convenient ski

Telegram Delivered Through "Varsity" In Spite of Lack of Full Address

Despite the fact that "The Varsity" has become accustomed, through experience, to answering queries on many and varied topics, ranging from the entrance fee of the Hong Kong University Glee Club, to whether Professor — is married or single, the staff was, for a moment, baffled on Saturday to receive a telegram addressed to "Mr. — c-o Varsity, Toronto."

As the addressee was unknown to members of the staff, the telegram was opened by a quorum, and found to contain the terse and ominous instructions, "Call me at the King Edward Hotel, Room —, signed Mr. —."

TEACHING ACTIVITIES ARE NOT CONFINED TO UNDERGRADUATES

Over Three Hundred Students Were Registered Last Year in Graduate School

NEW DEGREES ESTABLISHED

Dentistry and Agriculture Are Now Able to Confer Master's Degree

Two hundred and ninety students applying for higher degrees during the past year give striking evidence of the fact that the activities of the University are not confined to educating the undergraduate. There was also a total of three hundred and sixty-five students registered in the School of Graduate Studies. Eighty-nine of this total were occupants of teaching positions on the staff of the University.

"Two noteworthy events have occurred during the year," explains the annual report of the Graduate School. "The degree of Master of Science in Agriculture has been established and the courses of study leading thereto have been placed under the jurisdiction of a joint committee composed of members of the Council of the School of Graduate Studies and others chosen from the members of the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College. Arrangements have also been made with the Ontario Agricultural College whereby the admirable equipment and facilities of that institution may be utilized by students of the School of Graduate Studies, who may desire to pursue investigations of scientific problems pertaining to Agriculture, in connection with their studies leading to the degree of Ph.D. or M.A."

The report continues: "Furthermore there has been established a degree of Master of Science in Dentistry and the regulations governing the courses leading to this degree have been placed under the control of the School of Graduate Studies. It is hoped that the establishment of this degree and that of M.S.A. will have a beneficial effect in stimulating graduate studies in the sciences pertaining to Dentistry and Agriculture."

"During the session 1926-27 the number of students registered in the School of Graduate Studies was 365, an increase over the previous session of 35," is the explanation in regard to the distribution of the students. "Of these 286 were residents of the Province of Ontario, 12 of British Columbia, 11 of Manitoba, 10 of Alberta, 8 of Saskatchewan, 3 of Quebec, 3 of Nova Scotia, 2 of New Brunswick, and 1 of Newfoundland. The United States were represented by 8, and the remaining 21 came from the Overseas Dominions or from foreign countries. The University of Toronto was responsible for the undergraduate training of 255; 83 came from other Canadian universities; 12 from other universities."

THE HOCKEY TEAM MUST HAVE SUPPORT

Although Varsity showed on Saturday that the Blue and White are to be once more represented in the O.H.A. hockey race by a strong team that bids fair to follow precedent established by the Grads and make a valiant stand for the Allan Cup, it is evident that the undergraduates do not yet care to support their team. Even a casual between-period-stroll through the Arena on Saturday afternoon furnished sufficient evidence for this statement were it not backed up by advice given from the offices of the Athletic Association.

We put it mildly when we say that such a situation is to be deplored. The fact that graduate interest in the team is pronounced, while encouraging, cannot to any extent replace the interest of those from whose ranks the team is recruited,—the student body; and no encouragement that the team might receive will be so much appreciated as favour from the latter. Preston, Kitchener and Marlborough will all give the student team a strong fight for the O.H.A. laurels and some corking good games are to be expected. Whether the Blue can pull through to win the group or not will depend largely on what support the team receives from the University, for it is a well-known fact that support from the rooters' section has more than once turned the tide to victory when the situation appeared most black and defeat almost certain.

A year ago the Intercollegiate hockey team shared the attention of the fans with the Grads team, and fair support at the games was obtained. When both Blue teams fought their way into the Canadian semi-finals much enthusiasm was aroused over the fact that, for the first time in history, two teams from the same club would probably be battling it out together for the right to represent the East against the West. At that time the Collegians forced themselves to be recognized as a contending team, but examinations and too much time lost from studies forced the students out of the running, though undefeated and entitled to meet the Grads in a sudden death game for the right to go west.

That default probably won the title for the Grads. A finals game with the up and coming Intercollegiate team, while it might not have spelt defeat for the tired Olympics of to-day, would at least have further handicapped them for their strenuous series in Vancouver, and another team entirely might now be planning to leave for England on January 29th.

That same Intercollegiate team, profiting by experience, is back again this year, and, showing themselves most worthy of support, should be accorded every moral aid by the players' fellow students. The Athletic Directorate, wishing to gain the support of the undergraduates rather than to amass a large sum of money, has cut admission prices to the bone, and the season tickets at $2.00 for eight games, twenty-five cents a game, is less than enough to meet carrying charges on the Arena if every seat in the house was sold at that price.

The players least of all would beg the student for support. But one may readily believe that they feel keenly the fact that no or little recognition is given to their powers. Season tickets are within the reach of all, and the undergraduate will not only do the players a real service by purchasing one for himself, but will, as well, assure himself of many pleasant, thrilling and altogether enjoyable afternoons and evenings.

BARBARISM OR UTOPIA?

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Proof is not lacking that the present generation is no less blind to its prophets than that which served Socrates a cup of hemlock. I refer to the dastardly treatment served out last term to the brave Postumus. At this moment the cads who attacked him so furiously are strutting about the campus, smugly secure in the triumph of their bigotry and ignorance, while one may gather from the moron-like jibes and meows of the Champus Cat that Postumus himself is no more.

So then he is slain. In him lived the spirit of Socrates, Cicero, More, Raleigh, and the persecuted Keats—the spirit of the best in all the ages gone by; yet he has been maligned and sacrificed on the altar of campus conceit simply because he ventured to suggest that we are too busy with our so-called "education" to heed the call of nobler voices.

Mr. Editor, let me presume to add a few words to those immortal questions of Postumus.

How many seniors in this University are familiar with the names and achievements of Sam McBride, Lindbergh, Bishop Barnes, Fairbanks, N.A.B., and Hjekman? As for myself, I would answer, quite a few. Nay, I will go farther, I will even say that some of the freshmen may have heard those names. These are the pigmies glorified to giants in our day. Where are the men whom Postumus recalled to memory?

Allow me to utter a solemn warning. Mr. Editor: the spirit of Postumus must be revived, for if we are not roused from our lethargy at once, our University, our nation, our world is doomed. All you who countenance this thing called modern "education", choose: Barbarism or Utopia.

I have heard it said that Postumus is not really dead, that he is yet living in seclusion. Be that true or untrue, I must borrow from Wordsworth and say:

"Postumus, thou shouldst be living at this hour!"

Hoping that you will be fair enough to publish this letter, I am,

Yours,

Discipulus.

brow appears, there goes around a whisper, and a nudge,—"Home from college."

Perhaps he is more serious, and reserved, probably more sophisticated, to those who stayed at home. Certainly "it" has affected him in some way, and his attacks on the pump handle, even, are expected to produce amazing results by a simple incantation in Hebrew. Even the freshman has caught the College complex, and has been lifted high above the realm of the ordinary to a sublime region of intellectuality, and class pins.

At home, sub-selling during the seasonal rush, visiting, if far from home,—certainly the college student has a great effect on all with whom he comes in contact. He is the great sensation. His influence is incalculable, but intellectually—it is minus. He inspires a host of new ideas, from penant-hung ceilings, to Varsity drags, but never, oh never, does he suggest by word or deed the wearisome hours of Latin prose,—the glorious sunshiny afternoon, blighted in chemistry lab.

For the student on holiday, perhaps there are but the necessary and inevitable evils accompanying those mystical rites, which transform a being into a college man.

An increase of 13,164 was noted in the attendance at the Royal Ontario Museum during the past year. In 1927, 114,880 people visited the Museum. The great majority of these chose Sunday afternoon to visit the exhibits for on that day 60,179 found time to examine the Museum and its contents. Some 9,849 school children visited the Museum during the year in organized parties, while 539 other children from all over the province visited it as guests of the government. Since the Museum was first opened, 1,039,397 men and women have visited it.

VARSITY SENIORS DEFEAT PETERBORO 10-0 IN O.H.A. FIXTURE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Once again those in charge of athletic affairs at Varsity are confronted with the problem of lack of student support at athletic events. It was thought that the erection of an Arena would stimulate student interest in hockey, but such does not seem to be the case. On Friday night there was a double-header in the Big Four Junior series staged at the Arena, and a list of the students who took advantage of the opportunity to attend would not be much bigger than a list of the players who performed.

And on Saturday afternoon Varsity and Peterboro Seniors played a Senior O.H.A. game before an audience of graduates and outsiders. This is even less possibly of explanation than the lack of support at the Junior game.

One thing is certain—the claim cannot be advanced that the admission charges are exorbitant at the Varsity Arena. There are eight Senior games—six in the O.H.A. and two intercollegiate, and a student ticket for these eight games may be secured for the sum of two dollars. To date the sale of these tickets has met with very little response, due probably to the fact that the average undergraduate does not realize the value he can get for his money. Probably many refrain from buying tickets because they think that they will not be able to see all the contests. Even if they only attend half the games they are getting good value for their money. Where else can you see eight senior games for two dollars?

Varsity Seniors demonstrated that they are a team to be reckoned with when they defeated Peterboro by a score of 10 to 0. They showed a splendid attack and a defence that will keep most of the teams guessing. Tonight the Varsity team play Kitchener in the latter's home town, and if they pull out with a win they will be sitting pretty at the head of the league standing. To date Varsity has two victories to their credit, having defeated Marlboros and the Pets.

Marlboros beat Varsity Juniors on Friday night and lengthened their lead in the Big Four Junior group. On the night's play the Ducks were just too good for the Blue team and deserved their victory. The Marlboro entry right now look like a good thing in this group and are almost certain to be in the play-offs at least. However, if Varsity can finish in second place they stand a fair chance of taking the Ducks in the play-off series.

VARSITY AND BOLTON IN ARENA TONIGHT

Intermediate Hockey Team Is Expected to Repeat Last Victory

GOOD GAME ASSURED

The Varsity Intermediates take on the Bolton entry in the O.H.A. group at the Varsity Arena to-night, and a battle royal may be looked for. Varsity journeyed to Bolton on Thursday night and pulled out a 5-3 victory over the "Wanderers" after a hectic battle, and the boys from Bolton are all set to take Jim Robson's team's measure right in Toronto.

Bolton have a smart little team, but in the last game the Varsity outfit had too much condition and experience for them. There is a strong possibility that the visitors may throw a monkey wrench into the machinery, but the odds are that Varsity will repeat. Still and for all it will be a game worth watching, as they take their hockey seriously in Bolton, and will bring along the entire population, including the police force and several aspirants for Tunney's crown, to see that their favourites get a fair deal from the Studentons.

It is probable that Varsity will start the same team as in the previous game provided that Algie's lip is better. The big defence man got a cut in Bolton that required three stitches to close and may not be able to perform. Still there is no scarcity of material, and some one else may get a chance to step into the limelight.

Algie and Graham form a smart defence, while the forward line of McKnight, Crosby and Evans speaks for itself.

NEW DIVING CLASS TO BE ORGANIZED

Alex Duff, Dolphinettes Coach, to Teach Diving in Hart House

MEETING TONIGHT

Mr. Alex Duff, who spent much time with the Varsity swimmers and divers last year, is coming to Hart House to-night. He wants all the undergraduates interested in diving to meet him in the plunge room at 5.00 o'clock. If there is a sufficiently large turn-out, a diving class will be organized and a regular system of training adopted. It is a wonderful opportunity for both beginners and more experienced men to train under one of the most successful coaches in Canada.

Mr. Duff was formerly coach of the High Park Swimming Club, and has developed and trained no less than eleven Canadian diving champions. He is at present the coach of the Toronto Dolphinettes Ladies' Swimming Club, which holds nearly every Canadian ladies' swimming and diving championship.

It is not since 1922 that there has been a class in fancy diving at Varsity, due in part to the lack of enthusiasm shown by the swimmers. In that year a class of fifteen or more enthusiasts met once a week for practice and instruction. It is hoped this year to form a class to meet two or three times a week with Mr. Duff as instructor. When there is a man of such experience and ability willing to help the Varsity divers, it is certainly the duty of all who can to turn out and give him all the encouragement possible.

Diving has become somewhat of a lost art at Varsity. There is, however, much good material, and there are several men who with proper coaching will make excellent divers. This is the opportunity for the man who has yearned to dive, but has lacked the chance to learn. A good coach can make a really fine diver out of most unpromising material, and Alex Duff is one of the best.

HART HOUSE MAINTENANCE LARGE ITEM ON BUDGET

Care Needed to Prevent Too Fast Depreciation of Property

Members of Hart House are well known because of the care they usually take to preserve from damage the settings of the house. And it is well that such is the case for the maintenance of the furniture throughout the house is at best a very expensive item in the years budget. The House Committee who with the comptroller is responsible for keeping the furniture in good order, appreciates the reasonable manner in which the furniture in general is used. With the growing number of activities which take place within the Hart House, it can be readily understood that the depreciation of equipment tends to increase. During the Christmas holidays the whole house is thoroughly gone over and cleaned so that when the student returns everything may be in the best of condition.

UNIVERSITY SWAMPS PETERBORO SEXTET IN SENIOR STRUGGLE

In Spite of One-sided Score Game Provides Plenty of Interest

MURRAY SNYDER STARS

Harley Leads Scorers, Getting Three Goals, Two By Lone Efforts

Varsity Seniors left no doubt in the minds of the spectators as to their superiority over the Peterboro entry in the O.H.A. Senior group when the two outfits met Saturday afternoon at the Varsity Arena. They started right in from the face-off and did not stop scoring till they had exercised every number on the scoreboard, and then started in at the first again, the final result of the game being 10 to 0 in favour of the exponents of higher and broader education.

At that Peterboro might well have been credited with one goal, at least they earned it on the play, and besides that scored it, the only difficulty being that Rose scored in his own instead of Varsity's net. The play was in the second period on a rush by Richards and Harley, a pass went across the goal mouth, and in an attempt to bat it behind the net and out of danger the Peterboro defence man sent it into his own goal.

The game tended to lack interest because of the decided superiority of the Varsity sextet, but Peterboro never gave up trying and there were moments of real hockey. Several near fights added to the general interest, and most of the players were treated to a rest in the penalty box at one time or another. Kane as usual was travelling around with a chip on his shoulder, and Kirkpatrick seemed quick willing to knock it off.

Kane and Rose were two familiar faces on the Pets' line-up, but most of the rest were newcomers, and were hardly up to the class of the veterans.

Harley led the Varsity scorers with three tallies to his credit. He opened the scoring in the first period on a pass from Carrick and got one in both the second and third periods on brilliant individual efforts. Carrick got two, and Stewart, Devins, McMullen and Kirkpatrick each accounted for one, which with the gift of Rose brings the total up to the required 10.

Looking at it in another light, Varsity got four goals in the first period, eased off to two in the second, though they made up for any lack of goals by plenty of penalties, and came back to form in the final chucker to get four more.

Murray Snyder in the Varsity goal turned in a whale of a game, and it was due to his work more than anything else that Peterboro did not break into the scoring column. Kirkpatrick and Carrick on the defence broke up most of the Pets' attacks with their bumping tactics and accounted for three of the goals between them.

The regular forward line of Stewart, Richards and Harley showed up to good advantage. Richards is suffering from a broken thumb, and as a result was not up to top form. Harley was going great guns, and two of his goals were on brilliant individual efforts. McMullen and Devins, the subs, left nothing to be desired. Jimmie is going like a house afire this season, and despite his small stature is one of the best men on the team. Devins shot has improved wonderfully, and he should account for plenty of goals before the season is over.

Line-ups:

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Kirkpatrick and Carrick; centre, Stewart; wings, Richards and Harley; subs, Devins and McMullen.

Peterboro: Goal, Hall; defence, Rose and Clark; centre, Cripps; wings, Kane and McFee; subs, Williams and Foley.

This line is just for filler.

BABY PUCK CHASERS LOSE TO MARLBOROS DROP BACK IN RACE

Varsity Juniors Falter in Race for League Honours Despite Game Efforts

PARKDALE ALSO WINS

Heavy Play Results in Large Number of Penalties, Mostly for Ducks

Marlboros tightened their lead in the Big Four group at Varsity Arena on Friday evening by administering a 5-3 defeat to the Varsity Juniors. This sends the Blue and White back into third place. In the second tilt of the double-header Parkdale C.C. registered a win over their rival paddlers, Toronto C.C., to the tune of 4-2, thus securing second place and keeping T.C.C. in the cellar position.

Varsity Juniors were without the services of their big defence player, "Wally" Bean, who is out of the game with strained shoulder ligaments, but who expects to be back in harness this week. Carrick, who replaced him on the defence, played an effective game. He used his body to advantage, taking delight in frequently mixing things up with Irvine and Horner.

The first period saw the Ducks get a lead which kept them out of danger throughout the entire game, with the exception of the dying moments, when the Blue and White made exasperating attempts to even things up. After ten minutes of play Charlie Conacher took a pass from the diminutive but "heady" and effective player "Shrimp" McPherson for the Ducks' first counter. Five minutes later the same pair repeated the performance. "Rolly" Conacher aided in the piling up of goals by going clear through for the Ducks' third. Thirty seconds later Smith drilled one past Baxter on a pass from Clute with one of those effective shots which characterized his performance all evening.

In the second period careful playing ensued. Jackson, the Ducks' new recruit, drew Hunnisett out of the goal and shoved the puck in. Smith and Clute retaliated with Clute bulging the twine behind Baxter.

"Shrimp" McPherson from the draw-off in the third period lifted one from centre ice, and it dropped into the net past Hunnisett. Mooney in a nice solo effort stickhandled his way down the ice, and shot one into the upper corner of the Ducks' net for Varsity's last goal. A series of penalties followed for spiteful bodily checking, which affected Marlboros most. "Shrimp," the only forward of the Ducks on the ice, tried to fool around with the Varsity forwards, who were trying hard to even up the score with the opportunity they had, but to no avail.

Marlboros: Goal, Baxter; defence,

VICTORIA TO ENTER TWO WOMEN'S TEAMS

College Loses Some Players to University Hockey Team But Others Fill In

DAILY PRACTICE HOURS

This year the Vic women intend to enter a senior and a junior team in the inter-faculty hockey. The teams will be chosen according to merit, and not according to years as in basketball. Bill Brunt, who has given such excellent service in past years, has consented to coach the seniors, and Jack Houston, another seasoned player, will concentrate on the juniors.

It is probable that Helen Hilliard and several other players will graduate to Varsity hockey, but many of last year's players as Helen Richardson, Emma Wright, Marnie Reider, Kay West and Evelyn Crow in goal are turning out in fine style. There is some promising material in first year, and although it is early to make predictions, Daisy Quance and Norma Bateman are likely players. The problem of hockey enthusiasts who live at 135 St. Clair, as Molly Jerri and Maud Lindsay, is rather a difficulty, but Jean Bateman, the hockey curator, is doing her best to give all the girls who are interested in this sport a chance to play.

It is expected that there will be a good turn-out at the practices, and it is to be hoped that the girls will avail themselves of this opportunity, even if they do feel somewhat green in this best of winter sports. Practices are as follows: Every night except Friday, from 6-7 o'clock; Friday 5-6; Saturday 11-12.

Cambridge, Mass.—(IP)—The doing away with all initiation of freshmen at Harvard is being considered following the attack by the Harvard Crimson on the recent antics of the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770 when it initiated freshmen in Harvard Square. It is being argued that such initiations are too childish and out of keeping with the dignity of the institution.

On Tuesday evening at the Arena Gardens Varsity III met T.C.C. A defeat for T.C.C. practically eliminates them, so that they will be bound to fight to the finish. With Bean back on the defence, however, and a little more enthusiastic fighting spirit, the Blue and White hope to give the boys from Sunnyside their backwash.

NEW BUILDINGS PLANNED FOR MEDS SCHOOL

Definite Announcement Soon Soon to Come with Respect to New Plans

Quite a furore has been caused in real estate circles by the announcement that more property has been purchased in the vicinity of College Street and University Avenue in connection with Premier Ferguson's proposals for the improvement and beautification of that district. It is understood that there have been no definite new developments in this matter since those announced early last fall.

Botanical Gardens are planned to improve the approach to the Parliament buildings, and new University buildings are included in the negotiations now being carried on between the Ontario Government and the University authorities. A new medical arts building may be erected and a tunnel bored under College Street to the General Hospital.

It is understood that definite announcements as to the future of the corner of College Street and University Avenue will be forthcoming next week.

FIRE PREVENTION OBJECT OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Rev. Principal Walsh States That College Is Not Fire Trap

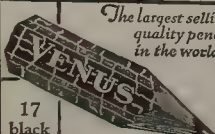

That St. Michael's College is not by any means a fire trap, is the gist of some evidence presented by the Rev. Father E. J. Walsh, principal of St. Michael's, to the arbitration board at present sitting in the City Hall to decide upon what compensation shall be paid to the College on account of the expropriation of land for the Bay Street development of 1922.

"Although the College building is not fireproof," stated Father Walsh, "I doubt if there is any school building in Toronto that is. There are two stair fire-escapes from every floor at each end of the building. The fact that the staircases are not enclosed might beget some sort of impression that they were dangerous. There are, however, external stairs from all dormitories.

In the boys' dormitories on the second, third and fourth floors, the night watchman makes his round every hour using the clock system. The students are instructed as to the general preparations in case of fire."

Believing that motion pictures represent part of the cultural development of the country, authorities at Harvard University are preparing a file to preserve pictures which are especially noted works of art.

USE OF THE LENS KNOWN TO GREEKS SAYS MR. LEPPARD

M. and P. Society Listens to Address on the Study of Optics

DR. BURTON'S LECTURE

The Effect of a Hundred Years of Physics on Thought of To-day

The use of glasses and lenses was known to the ancient Greeks, according to Mr. L. B. Leppard, who spoke before the Mathematics and Physics Society last week. An Arab scientist was the first to give an explanation of bi-focal vision and the apparent magnification of the moon at the horizon, stated the speaker. Not until the seventeenth century were the refracting telescope and the proportionality of sines in the laws of refraction; in this century mathematics were applied to the study of optics, explained Mr. Leppard.

"The effect of a hundred years of Physics on the thinking of to-day," was the main lecture given by Dr. E. F. Burton, Honorary President of the Society. Dr. Burton remarked that the last hundred years had seen the development of the first law of Thermodynamics, classification of the elements, atomic hypothesis, discovery of the planet Neptune, the connection between light, electricity and magnetism, and the discovery of the famous X-rays.

The idea of the elliptical orbit of a planet, considered the speaker, would have been inconceivable to the ancient Greek. Aristotle, the great Greek student of research, had argued that since the circle was a perfect figure, and the Creator, desiring, perfection, would have made the orbit a circle. In 1610 the scientist Descartes had the idea of applying mathematics to the study of the universe. Newton later developed his theory of the rules governing the motion of the planets.

"Perhaps the advance of physics in the last hundred years has in a way re-established man in his once exalted position in view of his conquests over the powers of nature," was the opinion of Dr. Burton.

glacial epoch, and it is a certainty that there were men there before the yellow earth was laid down. On the desert, surrounded by the Hwang-Ho river, two French priests traced the first inhabitants by a black line, a layer of charcoal, one-time hearth of man. The stone implements discovered were of the old stone period, but as yet no skull has been found. These early men had the rhinoceros, camel, gazelle, ostrich and wild sheep, all of which animals are not now found in these parts.

The Gobi desert was at an earlier age inhabited by great Dinosaurs, which fed on green fodder. The Mongolian plain has many basins of former rivers, and in these rivers the Dinosaurs bated. Sir Bertram showed pictures of the famous Dinosaurs eggs found there and explained how these eggs were so carefully preserved in the sand and sandstone. In the desert dunes there were cave dwellers, whose implements are more of the type found in the caves of France.

Sir Bertram next discussed the ever-interesting question—Where is the cradle of the human race—presenting the two views best supported, that is, that man originated in southern Asia or in south-western Europe, in Spain. The human race is divided into four groups—the men of Tasmania and Australia, the negro type, the Mongolian and the Caucasians. "Men of these four groups can be found in Central Asia, and whether or not mankind began here is a question of perpetual interest to us."

sidence was at one time occupied by Mr Justice Orde.

The announcement of this purchase is a new development in a general scheme which has been known to "The Varsity" for some time, and mentioned in its columns from time to time.

Col. LePan has little to say regarding new buildings to be erected on College Street and University Avenue, and Premier Ferguson's great plan to "dress up" these thoroughfares.

"We have nothing to do," he said, "with the Toronto General Hospital, which is under an entirely different board of trustees, excepting the Pathological Building, which is on the University grounds, although within the Hospital area. It is a University building."

Colonel LePan would add nothing to the statement of Dr. Cody that a new Pathological Building would have to be erected by the University in connection with the contemplated enlargement of the Toronto General Hospital, which would necessitate the use in the future of the present Pathological Building of the University for the X-ray department of the Hospital. To the new Pathological Building would probably be added clinical laboratories as a necessary part of the teaching equipment.

Regarding further changes on College Street, Colonel LePan remarked: "About two years ago, the Premier suggested that the buildings in Queen's Park between the Parliament Buildings and College Street be torn down and botanical gardens constructed on either side of Queen's Park Avenue. Nothing definite has been done since that time."

When asked if any changes had been made during the holidays, such as painting and redecorating, Colonel LePan replied: "Yes, but they were just minor things, nothing of an outstanding nature at all."

rough surface was the cause of the break, and that it showed evidence of a change in crystalline structure. Now he idea is that the cracks gradually work in from the outside, where the stress is greatest, making the smooth surface, while the remainder is the result of the sudden fracture which occurs when the sound metal is no longer sufficiently strong to bear the strain. Recently evidence has been accumulated which suggests that there may also be some local change in structure.

"Why is it that the rest of my walking cane folds," when I grasp and pull the handle?" asked Sir Oliver Lodge. The question of cohesion is a matter of speculation. Theoretically it is much greater than experiments prove it to be. Two theories are advanced; one is that this is due to the irregular surface, and that the work begins there; the other suggests that destruction starts from inside, owing to the lack of homogeneity—the "Swiss cheese" theory of the solidity of cheese."

The lecture was illustrated by slides and micro-motion pictures, which showed the fine "slip lines" which appear in the metals long before the crack is visible to the naked eye.

SKATING IS CHIEF SPORT IN WINTER

ground as a rule, although there has been but little snow in it so far this year. It may be that the more or less certainty of ice has caused those who might otherwise take up skiing to desert a sport which depends for its existence on a steady climate and plenty of snow in favour of skating.

Taking Victoria College as an example, an undergraduate official considered that organized winter open-air amusements were practically nonexistent outside of the well-known Skating Carnival and class skating parties.

Skating is indulged in somewhat extensively, but only by boys who felt the urge from time to time and not by clubs. Tobogganing and bob-sledding are also confined to a coterie of zealots and to class parties. Curling is not recognized as a sport, curling irons being invariably of the electric variety and confined to women's residences. Trinity College and University College seem to go in even less than Victoria for sports other than skating, though in both colleges enthusiasts are found who may occasionally be seen going through the city streets on a pair of polished skis.

This University is not so fortunate in winter time as some of its fellow institutions. McGill possesses a much steadier winter with twice as much snow as Toronto can boast of. Above Montreal towers, Mount Royal, whose slopes offer a paradise for sleighs, toboggans and skis. Cornell University across the lake at Ithaca, New York is situated in the midst of a most ideal country for winter sports.

In Toronto, as long as skating paraphernalia may be had for between five and ten dollars and brass bands play nightly, snow sports seem doomed to take second place before the sharp skate blade on hard smooth ice.

GENUINE TOTEM POLE ADORN THE OFFICE OF W. J. LITTLE, B.A.

The Work of Native Indian Commissioned to Carve It

HIGHLY SYMBOLICAL

Thunder Bird, Believed to Cause Electrical Storms,
Depicted on Pole

For the past month or so there has been a totem pole in the office of W. J. Little, B.A., accountant at Victoria College. It was sent to Victoria College by an alumnus, from Terrace, B.C., who had procured this from a native Indian who was commissioned to carve it for royalty during their visit to that city. This particular pole represents the crest of different tribes united to form a confederation called the Haidas of Skidegate. At the bottom of the pole is a black figure representing a whale. It is called a kwaia. Higher up is another figure, clutching the whale in its claws and feeding upon it. This figure is the well-known thunder-bird, called in the native language Hwellaonga. This bird was popularly believed to have control of thunder and lightning. When he winked his eye, it was supposed to cause lightning, and when he flapped his wings he thundered.

This ferocious looking bird has an enormous hooked beak and a terrific array of teeth. Immediately above these is a carving of a brown bear devouring a fish. This bear is called Huolfee. It is a gaunt and hungry-looking beast, sitting on his hind legs enjoying his meal. The face of this bear combines the more unpleasant features of a duck and bear and seems almost as dreadful as the thunder-bird himself.

There are three crests at the top of the pole. Of the three the lowest is the raven-crow, called a Hovyo, which is a very sad and mournful bird. Then comes a fish, which is called a Kachea. This fish has a bull-dog face and an array of teeth similar to that of the thunder-bird. "Oh fish, the bear, and the birds," says Mr. Aesop, "all have tremendous teeth which are displayed with an extensive smirk."

On top of all there is an eagle, called a Inooi. This totem pole stands about six feet high, and is carved of wood. It is yellow cedar, a wood much used by the Indians on the Pacific coast in the building of their canoes and lighter boats.

The pole has a remarkable colour scheme, although it uses but four

Diogene's Daily Questionnaire May Males Wear Hat in Halls?

To-day's question is—
"Do you think men should remove their hats on entering a University building?"

Yesterday the philosopher answered this query from the man's point of view; to-day he offers the results of his search for the co-ed's opinion.

Miss J. Evans, II Victoria: "If the inconvenience exceeds the desire to be really polite, I would suggest that they attach a baby ribbon or elastic to the article in question, so that it may be dangled from the arm or around the neck."

Mary McNamara, IV St. Joseph's: "Most certainly they should. Since co-education is a fact at the University, these civilities should be observed."

Miss E. Clarke, III St. Hilda's: "Of course. Just the same as they would upon entering any building or any one's home."

Miss F. Weston, IV U.C.: "No. I think they should upon entering a room but not a public building. It isn't considered disrespectful in the downtown hotels, or the Parliament buildings. Why here? Five

Miss H. Armstrong, III Household Economics: "Yes. Why? Five reasons with diagrams. Scientifically, the wearing of hats is bad for the hair; economically, it saves hats; individually, men, as a whole, are proud of their crowning glory; psychologically, it creates an atmosphere of chivalry; physiologically, it gives the brains room for expansion."

New Ruling

At a meeting of "The Varsity" women's staff yesterday a new ruling was announced by the Editorial staff to the effect that every member of the staff must turn in a record of thirty hours of study per week, including lectures. The stipulation was made compulsory, applicable to editors, reporters and probationers, and was to go into effect at once.

FEW BUILDINGS

That the campus of the year 1902 A.D. must have presented a very different sight to that of to-day is clearly shown when one considers the following facts. Neither Trinity College, Annesley Hall, Burwash Hall, the Victoria Library, Queen's Hall, the Lillian Massey Building, Argyle House, the Medical Building, Hart House, Convocation Hall, nor Knox College appeared on any print of the College grounds. You would be rather puzzled to recognize any familiar landmarks. McMaster College in 1902 could be found on the same site it now occupies. Victoria College also was familiar to the students of that date. Wycliffe occupied its same position with this one difference, that the gymnasium was found directly behind it. University College was standing alone in its glory, as were most of the buildings of that period, while the Library urged on hurrying students from U.C. to its learned steps.

The site of the present Medical Building was occupied by a quaint little house belonging to Professor Kingston, director of meteorological service. The Biological Building facing on the park contained in its east wing Biology, and in its west wing Medical students gathered. The Engineering Building, or S.P.S., as it is commonly called, still stood on its rising ground, but the former Insulin Building was at that period the flourishing Y.M.C.A. building. As you pass the Physics Building have you ever noticed a little tablet? On that site stood the observatory in 1902. In order to erect the Physics Building and the road, the Observatory was torn down, and stone by stone removed to be constructed in front of where Hart House now stands. The Chemical Building was there too in 1902, but much used by the Indians on the Pacific coast in the building of their canoes and lighter boats.

The pole has a remarkable colour scheme, although it uses but four

Prominent Don Confined to Hospital

It was announced yesterday morning that Professor Vincent Bladen, of the Department of Political Science, would be unable to deliver his lectures for some time to come, probably a month, owing to his having been attacked by a suspected case of mumps.

Professor Bladen, it is understood, is quarantined at the Isolation Hospital. It has not yet been decided by whom Professor Bladen's course will be given during his period of quarantine.

EVER MILD WEATHER NOT UNEXAMPLED THOUGH UNUSUAL

Five Years Ago, Season Was So Soft That Only 27 Nights

WILL THIS YEAR REPEAT?

Mr. Workman Divulges Some Interesting Facts About Ice and Its Treatment

"It's rotten weather for skating," seemed to be the wall arising on every hand from all lovers of winter sports. Really, weather conditions did seem rather desperate yesterday, so "The Varsity" decided to conduct an investigation of the situation, by questioning rink managers and weather bureau officials.

The result, we found that, although bad enough, the weather wasn't so terribly bad or exceptional after all. Incidentally we discovered much else of interest about ice and skating conditions in general.

First we interviewed the Meteorological Bureau at the Observatory on Bloor Street. The Forecaster, himself, was of the belief that at least it was not likely to get any warmer. The "probs" for Tuesday were stationary or lower temperatures, he informed us. He wasn't, however, so hopeful about the coming of a real cold spell.

"At least, not for the next three or four days," he said.

Next we got in touch with the Observer, to see how exceptional this warm spell was. Apparently it wasn't exceptional. So far this month four days have been above average and four below. He reminded us that a year ago, on January 29, it was just as warm as it is now.

When we went to see Ross Workman, manager of the Varsity opening rink and arena, we found that for a rink manager he wasn't so pessimistic as he might have been on the subject of the weather.

"So far, of course, this year has been poor for skating," he admitted, "but probably from now on there will be good weather."

He always expects some type of a warm spell during the skating season, for past experience has shown that in the average season between late in December and the first week in March there is usually a two week slump caused by mild weather. In past years out of a possible 75 or 80 there has been an average of 45 or 50 nights of skating.

Four or five years ago, however, there was skating on only 27 nights of the season.

"We have never had a year as bad as that since, unless it is going to be

COMMUNITY XMAS TREE Students Play Active Part in All Branches of Work

The past year has been a very busy and successful one at the University Settlement House, as the following statistics show. In 1927 the total attendance was sixty-five thousand two hundred and sixty-nine as compared with forty-six thousand five hundred and fifty-eight in 1926. These figures cover all branches of the work, including the various clubs for the men, women, boys and girls of all ages. During the last three years the total yearly attendance has more than trebled, for in 1924 it was thirty-one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

There were many Christmas activities at the Settlement, the most interesting and best attended of which was the Community Christmas Tree. There were about twelve hundred people present. The large tree was brilliantly lighted and stood on a platform just inside the gates of the Grange. The programme took place on another platform erected over the sidewalk.

Thirty of the Settlement children took part in a Christmas play entitled "Christmas Folk." The Weston Boys' Band and a ventriloquist with his dolls also added to the entertainment. The most interesting incident of the evening was the singing of Christmas carols. These were flashed on a screen, and under the successful leadership of Mr. Ross Workman people of many tongues joined in singing the old English carols.

The workers at the Settlement felt that the most important feature of the evening was the splendid spirit of good fellowship which dominated the large crowd representing many peoples.

The Weatherman Speaks

No records are being broken, states the Weatherman, in the warm weather now prevalent, which seems totally foreign to Toronto in January. The temperature has been hovering between 30 and 40 degrees. The record for January is 54.5 degrees.

It is not expected that there will be any sudden drop in the near future. The official synopsis is: "Pressure remains very high over the Western States and low over Western and Northern Canada. The weather continues mild throughout the Dominion."

Sunday Evening Concert

This Sunday evening, Jan. 15, those members of the undergraduate body who have been fortunate enough to secure tickets for the concert in Hart House will be privileged to hear a programme by Mr. Viggo Kihl. Mr. Kihl, one of Toronto's foremost pianists, has appeared in Hart House before, and is well known and much appreciated by music-lovers of the University.

GERMAN STUDY CLUB TO ENTER UPON FIELD OF DRAMA

Two Plays Will Be Presented on Jan. 24th: *Einer Muss
Huraten*; Die Meisterschaft

LANGUAGE WILL BE SIMPLE Selection Made Especially For Those in Lower Years

On Tuesday, January 24th, at 8 o'clock, the University of Toronto German Study Club will present two plays in the auditorium of the U.C. Women's Union. The presentation will take the place of the January open meeting, and everybody is urged to come. This club is one of the few that is open to all colleges, and the cast is representative, so its appeal is universal. The plays have been chosen with an eye especially to first year students in Scientific German, and for those who studied German at high school but are unable to continue it at University. This means that the comedies being acted are full of action and a very limited vocabulary is quite adequate for a real appreciation of them.

"Die Meisterschaft," by Mark Twain, is a side-splitting farce dealing with the difficulties of learning German. Two young couples are sent to Germany to learn the language before their parents will consent to their marriage. Once in "der Vaterland" they take up their studies by corres-

Chance Remark The Cause of Probe Into Life History of "The Varsity"

A representative of "The Varsity," in one of those pensive and reflective moods that come over one after a long day of lectures, found himself sandwiched between two very evident freshmen in a packed street car. Situated thus, he was forced to listen to opinions, good, bad and indifferent, about the University in general, which were aimed by the gentlemen in question. Soon "The Varsity" came in for its share of criticism, in the course of which one frosh exclaimed: "Who ever started the blessed thing anyway?" That instantly set the representative's thoughts going in two directions: firstly, Why should not the freshman's thirst for knowledge in that direction be satisfied, just as it is (sic) in other ways, and secondly, "The Varsity" is "blessed" (not "beastly," mark you); therefore those associated in its production must be twice blessed, on their own account and by association!

Thoughts led to action. A visit to the University Library to look up past copies of "The Varsity," and a talk with the Librarian, Mr. W. S. Wallace, produced the following story: "In 1879 a body of undergraduate and graduate students got together and formed a joint stock company for the purpose of producing a weekly newspaper which would be chiefly concerned with matters affecting the University of Toronto, and students thereof. Offices were established down town, through the courtesy of

INVITES DISCUSSION

Suggests Adoption of American Plan of Increasing Fees
Almost Indefinitely

"If we must export human beings to the United States, let us send them abroad in a less highly manufactured state," says Mr. A. R. Lower, a graduate of University College in 1914, in an open letter on the emigration problem, written to the University of Toronto Monthly, recently published. Mr. Lower goes on to deal with the situation of University of Toronto graduates trekking to the United States upon graduation.

"Our people will doubtless always emigrate," Mr. Lower goes on, "despite the hoary blandishment that this is an under-populated country—but let us try to arrange matters so that the institutions of that country which is to receive the benefit of their services will have the expense of the finishing process."

"Many of our colleges, now yearly impoverishing themselves and their country in the manufacture of products for the American market, might well take a leaf out of the book of their American cousins and, by doubling or trebling their fees, exclude some unprofitable student material and also put themselves into a position to pay something more than starvation wages to their staffs."

"They would decrease their attendance," but their graduates would tend to stay in the country, for it is lack of opportunity and not mere desire for greater opportunities that sends our youth abroad to-day.

"Whatever may have been the case in the past, before national feeling had developed to its present pitch, few certain graduates interested, who allowed the use of a part of their business premises. In due course the paper appeared under the name of "The White and Blue." Associated with the first producers were such well-known men as George Sandfield MacDonald, a son of Sir J. Sandfield MacDonald, G. G. S. Lindsay, cousin of the present Dominion Prime Minister, A. F. Lobbo, W. W. F. Creelman, and Douglas Armour, son of Judge Armour.

In 1880 "The White and Blue" gave place to "The Varsity," this being merely a change of name. Interest in the Joint Stock Company increased, and in the space of a few months some 7,500 graduates and undergraduates had shares in the concern. Those were the days when "The Varsity" was sold for cash! In 1881 editorial offices were assigned "The Varsity" in the Moss Building, which occupied the spot on which now stands the Biological Building. Thus "The Varsity" came to reside within the bounds of the University buildings, and was saved from being classed amongst "downtown papers!"

It is the pious hope of the representative that this information about the beginning of things "Varsity-wise" will be of material value to the freshmen in question. Some other day perhaps we may be able to trace the process whereby the undergraduates' paper became "blessed."

WHY THE ANNUAL CIVIC ELECTIONS?

The annual civic elections and their accompanying blare of trumpets have come and gone. And if we believe in pre-election promises and speeches, bigger and better administrations are to replace those which have grown worn and shabby in hundreds of cities, towns and villages throughout the Dominion.

In Toronto a mayor who had, in the short space of three years, "grown too old for the job" was swept out of office by a newspaper demand for more police protection while his policy of economy gave way to one of expenditure and fitting return. Ex-Mayor Foster claimed that it was "The fourth time that did it," and no doubt he knew whereof he spoke. The fact is that, justly or unjustly, the public demands a change,—not because any particular reason has been advanced for such, but rather because the public has found that its present government differs but little from its old one, and, always optimistic and expectant, there is the wish to find out what the new one can do.

It is stated that every vote cast for mayor cost the Corporation of the City of Toronto somewhere in the neighbourhood of sixty cents, which is no small sum when considered in the light of the value returned. The fact is that, with few exceptions, it makes but very little difference whether Tom, Dick or Harry has been elected to the office of chief magistrate, club, president, or what not; that is, in so far as the public body is concerned. Where the difference may arise is in a better spirit within the council or society itself, or in greater publicity for the city or organization.

Just why it should be necessary to elect a new council each year is a mystery. As far as one may judge, the same men, with but small exception, compose that body year after year for years. There may be a change here or there, but that is insignificant. And but seldom is a mayor disposed after but one year as an office holder. It takes longer than such a short time for the public to become educated to demand a change, and certainly longer for a strong opposition to become organized. Better administration certainly does not demand a yearly change, but rather the reverse. Plans, policies and advancements inaugurated under one mayor cannot be so satisfactorily handled by new hands.

If elections, as is evident, are not going to replace almost entirely the former executive—and there is no reason why they should—would it not be better to have but one election in, say, three or four years and give the council a genuine opportunity to see their policies through to fulfilment? That is, if we are to continue to have the large, ignorant and unwieldy councils with which we are sometimes blessed to-day.

"IN DUE SEASON YE SHALL EAT"

"The time has come . . . to talk of many things, of shoes and ships and sealing-wax, and cabbages and" . . . lunch-hours! We have noticed that there is a variation in the time allotted to lunch about the University. The official noon-hour is, we believe, from one to two, but in some faculties this official hour seems to be ignored and another substituted which may better suit the convenience of some one who is in authority in that faculty. This situation does not prevail in the Arts colleges, where it is considered a matter of course that everyone shall be free from one till two, but in the Science colleges it is different.

One wonders whether it is really necessary that labs should drag on later than one o'clock. Are the students so slow that they cannot complete their morning's work in less time, or is there some subtle reason which is hidden from our undiscerning eyes?

Perhaps it is felt that the conversation of those who have spent hours examining the anatomy of a guinea-pig would be a little too

CHAMPUS CAT

ON EATING A PRETZEL IN A BLAST FURNACE

I was born upon the Rio Grande
In a hog-scow going to sea,
And my mother and my father planned
What a great man I should be.

The captain of the cattle scow
Was the post they picked for me,
But I shook my head and shouted
"Wow!"
And laughed with infant glee.

At the early age of seventeen
I ran away from home,
And in my wanderings since I've been
From Hamilton to Nome.

Many are the jobs I've had
From many different sources,
From posing for a collar ad
To washing garbage horses.

And from the way I've worked and Toiled
In climates mild and rough,
I have become a bit hard-boiled,
And, to be candid,—tough.

I've swum in Arctic walrus hunts
Ten miles through solid ice,
And I bathed in a boiling crater once,
But that was not as nice.

I've opened safes with finger nails,
I've chewed through prison bars,
And I've been hanging in nineteen jails
But I only bear two scars.

My, how this jolly furnace heat
Keeps out the damp and cold,
(For I get rheumatics in my feet
As I grow weak and old).

Oh, I love to tell of my rugged past
And the life beyond the seas,
But I'll have comfort while I last,
So pass the pretzels, please.

startlingly realistic for gentle souls who have been merely wrestling with Greek verbs. Or maybe some lunch-hours are delayed as the result of an urgent appeal from the several University kitchens to lessen the crowd of would-be lunchers. Whatever it may be, the fact is there.

It is not for us to say whether the existing situation is good or bad, but we would like to point out that it has its defects. For many undergraduates the lunch-hour is the only time possible for committee meetings and other such engagements which seem indispensable to the active student. For many others, especially those whose homes are miles from the University, even a one o'clock lunch comes five long hours after breakfast.

Therefore it seems that if a fixed, general lunch-hour could be compatible with service in Varsity dining-rooms, its establishment would be welcomed by the whole student body.

With the Theatres

"TWO FLAMING YOUTHS"—LOEWS

Chester Conklin, the bushy be-moustached comedian, and his famous partner of stage fame, W. C. Fields, certainly scored a hit with their first Toronto audience at the Loew's Theatre last evening, when that inseparable pair appeared in "Two Flaming Youths."

We have but to add that, although the picture did not rate up to our previous expectations, nevertheless we must admit that it provided a few hours of wholesome amusement.

The story is that of the rivalry of two old gentlemen, one a defunct circus proprietor, and the other the sheriff of a small town, for the hand of the widow—owner of the native hostility. Many amusing situations are weaved in, in the quest for fifteen hundred dollars to pay off the mortgage on the inn. Both rivals finally succeed in obtaining the required sum, but when they arrive they find that the widow has already married the mortgagee.

As we remarked before, the production did not satisfy our anticipations. The vaudeville bill, however, filled the gap to perfection. Every act, with the possible exception of one, is worthy of headline rank. Seabury and Swor, along with Ken Wittmore's fine orchestra, are probably deserving of the extensive praise which they have gained elsewhere and which was augmented last evening.

To Mr. Burt of Burt and Rosedale we are inclined to attribute the achievement of having made us laugh till our very sides split. Burt is certainly proficient in his art. Joe Fantom and Company present a rather good acrobatic act, but they seem to be fully aware of the fact.

"THE BIG PARADE"—TIVOLI

To be showing at one of Toronto's foremost theatres, to packed houses ten years after the war, a war picture must have something vital and living in its make-up. This is proved in the case of "The Big Parade," showing at the Tivoli this week. Doubtless the splendid acting of John Gilbert and Renee Adoree contribute a lot to this vitality.

Taking into consideration the fact that the picture must now be five or six years old, and bearing in mind the unbelievable strides made in photoplay technique in this time, the picture is remarkably well filmed. The director has not laid his pathos or humour on with a trowel, as do so many directors of war films.

To our mind, the greatest hindrance to pictures of this type is the necessity for a love theme. We realize that there is the necessity, but nevertheless it seems to cramp the style of the plot, preventing it from running free. It necessitates in this picture that John Gilbert should be placed in an emergency hospital where nurses or attendants seemed absolutely lacking, thus enabling him to make his escape remarkably easy, despite the fact that he was deprived of the use of his left leg. With the directors it is evidently a case of "love finding a way."

However, this does not prevent "The Big Parade" from being one of the most gripping war pictures we have seen. Strange as it may seem, the fact that the Grand Old American Eagle plays a very minor part does not seem to detract from the film's effectiveness as a war picture!

W. S.

EMPIRE—"THE NOOSE"

On our return to our favourite critical bailliwick, the Empire Players must have decided to furnish us with something extraordinary in the way of thrills and poignancies. This week's presentation is Willard Mack's sometime Broadway success, "The Noose," and it is rather reminiscent of the "Within the Law" type of crook melodrama prevalent since Columbus first landed and the late Marcus Loew forsook the dime-museums.

As A1 drama, "The Noose" does not exist, but it is very effective "theatre," particularly if you like a large slice of underworld life served raw and with no dressing of subtlety. The play opens in the home of a State Governor, splendidly portrayed by Edmund Abbey; it is the evening before the execution of one Nickie Elkins for the murder of an underworld king, Buck Gordon. The young condemned man's lawyer is a friend of the Governor, and he makes a frantic appeal to the latter for a reprieve. Most important of all is the fact that there appears to be no motive for the crime, and when questioned by the Governor, the young man simply says of his victim: "He was no good." The Governor's wife leans in vain with her husband, and the young man is sent back to prison to await execution the next morning. The close of the first act is tremendously impressive as the dull blows of the hammer as the scaffold is erected are heard from the adjoining jail-yard. What is the motive of the crime? And why has the condemned man refused to speak?

Willard Mack opens his second act in the Box Stall Night Club, a shady cabaret on the East Side where life is portrayed in the rough. There are the gambler-owner, the cabaret girls (with Edith Taliaferro playing the good girl as usual); there are the song-writer and chorus-master, the inevitable crooked liquor inspector, and the most superlatively evil bad man that you can imagine. As Buck Gordon, the evil genius of the place and the misguider of his "son's" destiny, Frank E. Camp does a matchless piece of villainy, and in the end is murdered as he deserves to be. It was a treat to see the good old 100% Bad Man again, and we almost wanted to hiss him as they did in the honest 90's.

The playwright has evidently mixed with the denizens of the underworld, for his sketches of hi-jackers, hooch-runners and shady enforcement-officer is a very convincing one. It wouldn't be fair to give away the big secret of the play, but after commending the acting of Edith Taliaferro, Grace Webster, Robert Leslie, and Stanley King, we advise all theatre-goers desirous of seeing an old-fashioned hold-your-chair-arm melodrama to attend the Empire this week.

VARSITY SENIORS VANQUISH KITCHENER SEXTET BY SCORE OF 2-0

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The several Varsity hockey squads have a heavy week ahead of them. Last night the Seniors travelled to Kitchener for an O.H.A. fixture and then on Thursday the Pearsonites go after McGill. The Intermediates played Bolton last night at the Arena, and take a jaunt to Milton on Friday. As for Frank Sullivan's outfit to-night they play T.C.C. and then the Marlboros on Friday. A full week for the puck chasers!

The boxers and wrestlers have lined up a couple of training trips for this month, and the experience gained should stand them in good stead for the Intercollegiate assault which takes place in February. On Friday Les Black's leather pushers leave for West Point to take on the best that Army can produce. On the 26th the wrestlers and company go to O.A.C. and are expected to meet a lot of opposition. The Guelph College has been perennial winner of the Davidson Cup and it is up to the Toronto faculties to come across with some long entry lists in order to get the silverware back in the city. The Senior Assault is on the 7th and 8th of next month.

The Sifton Cup series is under way now with the first game being played last night in the upper gym. Basketball has secured a good hold on the University, and enthusiasm once aroused in that sport is a permanent fixture. There are forty-two games scheduled in this series alone, and that does not include playdowns and finals. Added to that are the various Varsity teams which have fairly heavy seasons ahead of them.

One sport without much publicity is out on the horses and mats at least the gym team. Don Barton has them twice a week going through their drills, and by the time the season is over they have usually reached a fairly high degree of efficiency, at least enough to cop the cup. Seeing them go through their work reminds one of the acrobatic performers of vaudeville.

VIC. SEXTET HOME FROM ANNUAL TOUR AMERICAN COLLEGES

Jennings Cup Holders Make Fine Showing Against More Practised Opponents

INVALUABLE EXPERIENCE

Champions Will Again Be Strong Contenders for Honours

The Victoria College hockey team returned from their annual Christmas tour of the United States colleges on Sunday evening. The Varsity Jennings Cup holders were defeated in all three games played, but only after a corresponding number of hard fought battles, one of which required an overtime period of ten minutes to decide the issue. Lack of ice before Christmas, with the result that the Scarlet and Gold puck chasers had but two practices before the tour, and soft ice in the American cities visited, played an important part in the outcome of all the games. On the whole, however, the tour was a decided success, giving the Vic team considerable well-gained experience and practice for the Jennings Cup series to follow.

On Thursday evening the first game was played in Rochester, N.Y., with the Rochester Hockey Club, which resulted in a 3 to 2 victory for the local team. The next night, the hardest fought game of the series took place with Potsdam Institute of Technology, with a 2 to 1 win for the latter in ten minutes' overtime. The final and closest game of the trip was played on Saturday in Clinton, N.Y., with Hamilton College, which team

VARSITY SENIORS TROUNCE KITCHENER ON FOREIGN ICE

Kitchener Fumbled Two Chances to Better Her Score

SNYDER STARS

Varsity Seniors Are Now Perched at Top of Group

Varsity Seniors made it three straight last night when they took Kitchener to the tune of 2-0 on the latter's home ice. The game was not spectacular, for the Blue and White were taking no unnecessary chances. Kitchener, on the other hand, had two golden opportunities to score, but did not quite rise to either occasion. It was not that they lost heart—no, they were dangerous until the final bell sounded; but against the smooth-working Varsity defensive machine their most determined attacks were shed right and left as a duck sheds water.

Snyder in goal for Varsity was the outstanding performer of the evening. His cool-headed net-tending had much to do with the blank end of the score. He was practically unbeatable. Berner for Kitchener also was having an "on" evening. The two goals that defeated Vic by the minimum score of 1 to 0.

The line-up of the Vic team was as follows:

Goal: Wallace; defence, McMillan and McDonald; centre, Allin; wings, Stanley and Plewman; subs, Lindsay, Hager and Sparring.

HOCKEY

What's the matter with amateur hockey? Is the public getting fed-up on it? Or is it that practically all the star players associated with the game have turned professional and thereby interest is lost? Star players don't make the game—it is two evenly matched teams, for hockey itself is a fast enough sport to provide thrills for everyone. Thrills are what the sport fan lives on—with the odd laugh put in for spice. You'll get that at most any game at the Arena, and still University of Toronto students shun the place. We still seem to revere the golden past and pray for players like those of yore. Five years from now the students will pray for the players we have now. Why not be satisfied with the present? Our players work for the honour of the Alma Mater, so why not support them, show them that you too think of the U. of T.

Perhaps the mob spirit still rules us. Many a fair co-ed goes to football games with Ed, but she doesn't know why. She doesn't understand the game, and sometime Ed is a bit hazy. They go because everybody goes,—the mob spirit. Hockey has fallen away here, and hence no mob—no spirit. The result is that many good games are played in a well-nigh empty house.

At least there is one thing we can learn from sister colleges across the line—they are loyal.

Hart House Pool Thoroughly Cleaned During Xmas Season

The Hart House pool during the holidays was drained, explained Mr. W. W. Winterburn to "The Varsity" yesterday. The tile was thoroughly treated with chemicals and soap, and then scrubbed. This is done as a sanitary precaution.

Intermediate hockey practice today at 4 p.m.

slipped by him gave him absolutely no opportunity whatever to score.

Carrick and Kirkpatrick on the defence had quite a definite margin over the faltering Kitchener back line. Stewart at centre was ubiquitous, and Richards and Harley gave him really noble support. Varsity deserved to win.

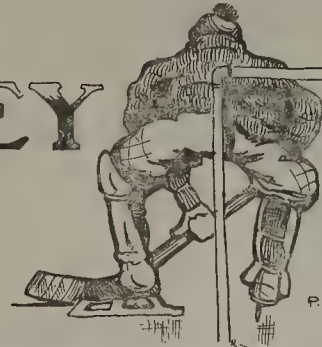

In the first period, at 13 minutes, Stewart and McMullen stick-handled their way inside the opposing defence. The latter was in possession of the puck at the blue line, when he passed to Stewart, who beat Berner with a nicely judged shot. A few minutes after the beginning of the second period Harley made it two on a pass from Richards. The remainder of the game was practically entirely defensive as far as Varsity was concerned.

The outcome of the game leaves Varsity's puck chasers sitting pretty. They are now at the head of their group, and bid fair to maintain the pace they have heretofore set themselves.

The line-up:

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Carrick, Kirkpatrick; centre, Stewart; wings, Richards, Harley; subs, Logan, McMullen.

Kitchener: Goal, Berner; defence, Schader, Kervey; centre, Seagram; wings, Heller, Molson; subs, Murrell, Rotch.

INTERMEDIATES WIN IN FINAL PERIOD

After Listless Playing in First Two Quarters Team Rallies

FINAL SCORE 7-3

Playing listless hockey for two periods, the Varsity Intermediate O.H.A. team came to life in the last stanza and shoved in four tallies to defeat Bolton 7-3. For two-thirds of the game Bolton pressed the play but went to pieces in the last frame, when in eight and a half minutes of exciting hockey the locals scored four times and the visitors twice.

About the middle of the second period Bob Graham left the ice with a penalty and a gash on his cheek which required six stitches to close. Apparently he was penalized for receiving a cross-check. Referee Walker was very liberal with his arm, and waved no less than twenty players to the bench—eight Varsity and twelve Bolton.

Two minutes after play started, Graham split the defence and McKnight scored on the rebound. This lead was held until the second period, despite a questioned decision of the goal umpire. Gould, who played a nice game on the defence, slipped one past Little to tie the score. Then the Boltonites skated their heads off trying to get a lead, and back-checked hard and turned many Varsity attacks into Bolton threats. McKnight again put the locals in the lead ten minutes later, while at the gong Bill Park added Varsity's third goal on a pass from Algie.

The last period saw the real fireworks, despite the fact that only five penalties were handed out. One minute after play started Bolton was awarded a goal, the umpire's decision being over-ruled. A minute and a half later Park scored on a solo effort, while Burns retaliated in short order. On the break off, a Crosby to Park to Crosby combination necessitated further business at centre ice, while again Crosby and Park combined for the sixth counter. Irwin was responsible for the last.

Early in the last frame Shaw, the Bolton goalie, injured his ankle, being replaced by V. Robertson. Varsity also made a change in goalies, Spence guarding the Blue nets for the last period.

Graham, Crosby and Evans stood out for Varsity, while the two Burns and Robertsons played hard for Bolton.

team this year experienced little difficulty in winning the Intercollegiate meet, and the stars who performed in Kingston are competing in this indoor meet.

Several of the track stars at Varsity look like sure things for the Canadian Olympic team, and as this indoor meet is their last appearance before the Olympic trials it should attract a great deal of attention.

The events scheduled for to-night are the 50 yard dash, high jump, and half mile. The meet will start promptly at 5 o'clock.

SALT WATER FISH NOW BREED IN GREAT LAKES

Summer Research Conducted by Department of Biology
Very Successful

OVER SEVENTY SPECIES

Humber, Credit, and Other Streams Used to Contain Salmon

More than seventy species of fish are found in Lake Ontario and in streams flowing into it, according to members of the party from the Department of Biology, University of Toronto, who investigated these waters during the past summer. Only a few of these seventy kinds are found in the waters of the open lake. They include lake trout, whitefish, four kinds of lake herrings, brook trout, alewife, and a few others. The great majority of special inhabit the shallower water near shore, especially well-protected bays and the streams.

A number of species which have become accustomed to the fresh waters of the lake and breed there belong really to the salty depths of the ocean. These include the alewife, which owes its economic importance to the fact that it forms a large part of the food of the lake trout; the sculpin, which lives throughout the year in Lake Ontario at depths of three and four hundred feet, where the water is always ice-cold; and the lamprey, which achieved distinction at the time of the C.N.E. swim, when numbers of them attached themselves to the swimmers.

The Humber, Credit, and other streams flowing into Lake Ontario used to abound in salmon at spawning time, but none of them have been seen in the lake for many years. Whether these salmon were permanent of the lake, or only migrated here from the sea for spawning purposes, it has been impossible to discover.

DALHOUSIE RUGGERS ENTERTAINED HERE

Team is En Route to Halifax
After Extended Trip in British Columbia

MET BY COL. ALEX FOSTER

The University of Toronto yesterday was host to an English rugby team from Dalhousie University. The party of twenty-three arrived in the morning at the Union Station, where they were met by Col. Alexander Fraser, representing the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. W. D. Ross.

They breakfasted at Hart House, which was made their headquarters during the visit. As guests of the Athletic Directorate the visitors made a tour of the grounds and buildings. Luncheon was served at the Government House at 1 o'clock, after which the team spent the afternoon seeing the city.

An informal dinner was tendered by a number of the alumni of Dalhousie University in this city, at which Professor Norman MacKenzie presided. Sir Robert Falconer was unfortunately unable to be present as an alumnus at the dinner. Good fellowship was the keynote of the evening. Short informal speeches by several guests were the features of the dinner. The dinner came successfully to a close in time to allow the visiting team to board their train for home at 11 o'clock.

The team, en route to their home in Halifax, stopped off in Toronto after an extended trip to British Columbia, which is said to be the longest ever made by any amateur team in Canada. At the Pacific Coast the team played four games of English rugby, three at Vancouver and one at Victoria. Of these games two were tied and the other two lost by the bluenose team. The resulting scores were both very close, however, and gave evidence of the skill and technique of the visiting players.

Unusual weather was encountered during the games at the coast. In some of the games, on account of the frozen and slippery condition of the ground, straw had to be placed on the field to protect the players.

VARSIY JUNIORS HOOK UP WITH T.C.C.

Must Win to Retain Reasonable Chance of Making
Play-offs

ROOTERS WANTED

At the Mutual Street Arena to-night the Varsity Juniors have their "do or die" game with the Toronto Canoe Club. A loss will make their chances entering the play-offs mighty slim, while a win for them and also for the Dukes over P.C.C. will place Varsity II and P.C.C. in second place together.

In the speedy McIntyre at centre, flanked by Brydson and Richardson, and aided by two such excellent subs as Lott and Lee, the T.C.C. are at this special stage of the game a mean threat. The West End boys are much stronger than they were at the beginning of the season, as evidenced by their recent defeat of the league leading Dukes, who, however, had their tricky centre player, "Shrimp" McPherson, absent. Varsity will have the same line-up as faced the Dukes last Friday evening, with the exception of the new recruit Arnold in a substitute role and Leak at left wing. The support of the student body with some lusty yells of their old Alma Mater is bound to go a long way in stirring up the Blue and White for a victory.

The first of this comedy is in English, and a great deal of the latter part as well, for when actors are at a loss for the required German they use their native tongue. The cast will be: Miss Madeline Lake, Miss Marion Noble, Miss Jean Hamilton, Mr. Kaspar and Mr. Davidovitz.

The second play, Wilhelm's "Einer Muss Heiraten" (One Must Marry), contains still more action and gestulation. According to the terms of an eccentric will, one of two brothers, who are so scholarly that they might be termed book worms, must marry to inherit. Many unlooked for twists surprise the audience, and even the end is unexpected. The different roles will be taken by Miss Elsie Masson, Miss K. Mundy, Mr. Jack Scott, Mr. Frank Mellon.

this year," added Mr. Workman, as he sadly looked out of the window towards the green grass that was beginning to appear on the back campus. "However, this year is not exceptional as yet; it might improve," continued Mr. Workman.

Eric Allan, Vic. 279, treasurer of the Little Vic rink, was not so optimistic. "Rotten weather, much worse than other years," he stated.

The season of the Little Vic rink is usually from December 20 to the first week in March. Although it varied with the year, there was often only six or seven days when the rink could not be used. This year, however, unless a change came, he considered that skating days would be only about 50 per cent. of the possible days in the season.

Some more general facts about ice and skating conditions were also obtained from Ross Workman.

"Water can be running down the streets in the business section and we can have fine ice on the open-air rink," stated the Varsity rink manager.

This was partly due to the absence of near-by buildings and cellars that tended to retain heat and warm the air up. Also, when ice is properly made and kept, the temperature can go over 32 degrees, and as long as the temperature does not remain warm for a very long period, the ice will not be greatly affected, for even with the ice at the melting point it still takes considerable heat energy to melt the ice. With a bright sun shining, however, conditions are changed. The sun penetrates to the bottom of the ice, melts it there, and later the water oozes through to the top, causing "blisters."

OSGOODE HALL WINS 2-1 DECISION ADVERTISING SUBJECT OF DEBATE

Feature of Literary and Athletic Society is I.C.D.U. Debate

STYLE BETTER THAN VALUE

Has More Appeal, Decide Judges At Crowded Lit. Meeting Tuesday Night

Osgoode Hall won a 2-1 decision over University College in last night's I.C.D.U. debate at the meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. The subject was, "Resolved that, in advertising appeals, style should be emphasized above value." The "Lit." meeting, which was held in the Junior Common Room, was the most successful one this season. The proceedings took place before an overflow audience, one in which standing room only was available, prior to the conclusion of the meeting.

The Society commenced with the customary sundry business, reports from committees, and the like, all of which exhibited the healthy condition of the various U.C. activities. The report of the executive for the past term outlined the policy pursued in the past and that planned for the future of the Society during the coming year.

Then came the feature of the evening, an I.C.D.U. debate between University College and Osgoode Hall. Messrs. Smith and Stark of Osgoode Hall upheld the affirmative against Messrs. Gilbert and Plumtree of University College.

"Pride vs. Purse" was the subject at issue, according to the leader of the affirmative. He went on to state that the "ayes" were going to establish that due to the stress laid upon style, "advertising brings increased profits to the advertiser and increased wealth to society." Style also created a greater demand for articles, and hence a greater volume of business. It was the creation of a permanent method of getting sales. Its appeal was directed to the middle and upper classes, who possess the wealth. The speaker concluded with the statement that "Business built on style rather than on value will weather the storms of competition."

Mr. Gilbert, the leader of the negative, stressed the fact that style was purely a subjective test and differed in its appeal to different people. Value, however, was the same for all. He showed by various illustrations that value was required in the making of style, and quoted from the advertisements of one of "The flavor lasts." This, he said, dwelt upon the value, not the style, of the article.

The second speaker of the affirmative (Continued on page 4)

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Lectures Involve Seating Problem

Do you think men and women should sit together in lectures?

Mr. Charlie Mitchell, IV Pol. Sci.: Yes, the closer the better.
Mr. R. Ramsay, II Vic.: Sure. It stimulates the intellect.
Miss A. A. Wilson, III U.C.: Sure. It relieves the monotony of the lecture.

Mr. C. A. Annis, Vic.: No, because too many attentions cause a lack of attention.
Miss K. Maxwell, II Trinity: Yes, if they will refrain from wearing their hats when we ask them.

Miss D. Balcheller, III Household Science: No, because a school teacher told me the boys never pay any attention.

Mr. D. N. Currie, III Arts: Sure. There may be a lack of attention in high schools, but may we not disregard this effect at the University?

Mr. G. L. D., III Vic.: No, because if they did we could no longer beguile the dreary hour with potent jokes.

Miss B. G. J., I U.C.: If the light in U.C. continues to grow dimmer it might in time become interesting.

The Staff picture will be taken at Parker Bros. Studio, 328 1/2 Yonge Street (below College) on Thursday at 1 p.m. Night editors and members of the upper mast-head only will be taken at this sitting. It is essential that all the above should be present on time.

SOCIAL SERVICE HAS COMPLETE LIBRARY

Broad Range of Books on Sociology and Allied Subjects for Shelves

QUIET RETREAT FOR STUDY

The holiday season has come and gone and the majority of students are beginning to settle down, with visions of May looming in the offing, possibly induced by the present spell of mild weather. Libraries are again the haunt of the prudent student, but too often he is disturbed by the ceaseless coming and going of his fellows. The library of the Social Service Department of the University of Toronto affords a quiet place to work, as its smallness prevents a crowd.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon, the Librarian stated that though comparatively few students had taken advantage of the library, yet it was becoming popular as a quiet retreat in which to work on particular subjects. The well-stocked shelves of the sociology section present a varied array of books on that subject, which indeed have been often consulted by habitués of the library.

For the social service student there are a large number of prescribed texts in child welfare work, ethics, economics and social case work. Anyone interested in economics would find many well-known books relating to that subject in the Social Service Library. There are also to be found there a number of books dealing with psychology, rural and industrial problems, crime and reformation, prisons, settlement and juvenile court work, and there are a few books of fiction, well worth reading in moments of relaxation.

CHRISTMAS ISSUE AWARDS

Those entitled to the prize awards for work in the Christmas issue of "The Varsity" may receive same by applying to the S.A.C. office, Hart House, immediately.

Prospect of Communistic Debate Does Not Alarm Authorities

Unlikely That Debate Will Be Cancelled According To Men Prominent in University Circles

Following are a few interesting quotations from the "Mail and Empire's" starting account of Communism at this University as compared with statements issued by University authorities:

MAIL AND EMPIRE

Invitation of leaders of the Communist movement in Canada to speak at the Hart House debate at the University of Toronto on January 18 has startled University officials and members of the teaching staff, and threatens to provoke efforts to cancel or at least tone down the debate.

Whether or not any action will be taken to suppress the sensational presentation of revolutionary doctrines by their skilled adherents within the staid precincts of the University will not be known for a few days. Members of the Board of Governors and of the teaching staff expressed surprise and disapproval of the project, one remarking that it was "shocking bad judgment."

There is some question as to the jurisdiction of University bodies and officials over the activities in Hart House, whose constitution grants to the student committees in charge considerable independence, autonomy and latitude of action.

Others invited, and who may speak informally, include Morris Spector, editor of the several Communist publications issued in this city, and Tim Buck, an outstanding figure in the radical Labor circles in Toronto.

MUMPS EPIDEMIC CAUSES NO ALARM

Authorities Not Disturbed by Outbreak, But Advocate Caution

NO NEW CASES REPORTED

Fashions in clothes change rapidly, but fashions in diseases seem to change more rapidly, at this University at any rate. Last fall smallpox was all the rage; now that Christmas is over, an entirely new and childish disease has been re-vamped, and mumps are with us now. Up to the present the new disease has not been received with the same hearty unanimity with which the smallpox was hailed. However, we have hopes.

A canvass of the residences has revealed that so far practically none of

SIR ROBERT FALCONER

No alarm, however, was expressed by Sir Robert Falconer when asked his opinion of the invitation.

"I will express no opinion," said Sir Robert. "Certainly the motion ought to carry. It expresses the feeling of the University towards Communism." "Is it a fact?" he was asked, "that University authorities may take steps to cancel this debate, or to change the motion?"

"Not so far as I know," was the reply. "These things are arranged by the Hart House people themselves." "You do not intend to take any action to prevent the debate from being held?"

"No, I don't see why such a fuss is being made about it. It appears that this is just going to be a debate."

CANON CODY

"The board has never interfered with the debates in the past, since we expect the committee in charge to exercise their own discretion," said Canon H. J. Cody, chairman of the Board of Governors.

DR. ANDERSON

Dr. H. B. Anderson, member of the Board of Governors, said: "When you get educated men and University students together, you must allow considerable leeway for discussion and all sorts of opinions."

WARDEN BICKERSTETH

When interviewed on the question, Warden Bickersteth explained that the members of the various committees are responsible to the Board of Stewards through their various secretaries. The Board of Stewards was represented by Mr. Bickersteth as head of Hart House, who in turn was responsible to the President of the University. The President was in turn responsible to the Board of Governors, in whom the final authority was vested.

J. H. GRINGORTEN

When interviewed, J. H. Gringorten, a member of the Debates Committee, explained that it was the custom to invite about twenty prominent men who might be interested to each debate. This policy had been followed in the present case, but neither Morris Spector nor Tim Buck had been invited.

NEW CLOCKS INSTALLED IN UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Holiday Additions of Time-pieces Made in Library Reading Rooms

The University Library has joined the conspiracy to get people to lectures on time by placing new clocks in the reading rooms. Formerly the men had a distinct advantage over the women, for by craning of necks it was possible to view the desk clock from some angles of the men's reading room with otherwise disturbing oneself. However, life is growing kinder and now a mere flick of the eyelash is the only price for the time.

It is hoped that as well as being a great convenience that the use of the clocks will help relieve congestion at the desk where formerly the only clock was placed.

O.C.E. RECOGNIZES DIPLOMA AWARDED PHYSICAL TRAINING

O.C.E. Course Affords Specialist Standing as Well as Diploma Course

DO NOT BEAR COMPARISON

Suggest Course Combining P.T. with Background of Arts and Science

It is of interest to the students of the Universities of Toronto and of its province at large to note that the Ontario College of Education is this year recognizing the diploma awarded to women completing the four year course in physical training provided by the University and is giving them specialist standing in physical training providing they obtain sixty per cent. in the examinations of the final year and are graduates in Arts. They will be granted an Interim Specialist's Certificate upon completing the regular course for an Interim High School Assistant's Certificate at the College of Education and a course in Methods and Practice Teaching in physical training. Those who are not graduates of the diploma course in physical training may obtain specialist's standing by taking a course provided at the College of Education supplemented by one session at summer school.

One can scarcely compare the merits of the two courses—the latter gives some three hundred and ninety hours of practical work, gymnastics, dancing, swimming and lectures during the year at the College of Education and five weeks at summer school, while the diploma course provided five hundred and eighty hours spread over a period of four years, with special instruction in physical training similar to that provided by honour courses in French, English or Mathematics. Besides this the diploma course student has to carry an Arts course.

This gives rise to the question that so many students are asking—why could there not be a course that would combine physical training with a broad background of science and some Eng- (Continued on page 4)

HART HOUSE DEBATE ON COMMUNIST PARTY IS NOT PROPAGANDA

Subject Planned by Committee on Suggestion of Member of Conservative Club

TO BE HELD JANUARY 18

"Social and Industrial Systems of Communists Not for Good of Canada"

The subject of the next Hart House debate has aroused a storm of comment in the down-town press. The topic is: "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, the social and industrial systems advocated by the Communist party of Canada are not in the best interests of the people of the Dominion."

The debate is to be held on January 18. The speakers are to be J. H. Gringorten, W. Finlayson, John L. Counsell, K.C., of Hamilton, G. T. McFarland of Toronto, the last two being graduate members of Hart House. Mr. Counsell is a prominent Communist.

Extracts from the story of the "Mail and Empire," which, by its allusions to Communism and Socialism, provoked a great deal of comment, may be seen elsewhere in these columns.

Professor Vincent Bladen, Chairman of the Debates Committee, could not be reached, as he is in the hospital with mumps.

Professor N. A. MacKenzie, who during the unfortunate absence of Professor Vincent Bladen is acting as Speaker of the debate and head of the sub-committee in charge of it, stated that there was nothing unusual, much less alarming, in the plans for next week's session. The question is, "That, in the opinion of this House, the social and industrial system advocated by the Communist party of Canada is not in the best interest of the people of the Dominion."

Two graduate visitors, Mr. G. T. McFarland of this city, and Mr. J. L. Counsell, K.C., of Hamilton, are to support the affirmative and negative. (Continued on page 4)

Tour Through Press Reveals Much, Midnight Visit To Journalists Lair

It was three o'clock in the morning . . . about . . . ? ? ? ? ? (Singing. No, this is not a story of burglaries committed in the dead of night or of blood-curdling crimes such as would inspire the pen of an Edgar Wallace or a "Sapper." Did stealthy figures crouch beside the wall and lurk in the shadows of the building until the menacing footsteps died away in the distance? Did they creep into the structure, sandbag the unwitting night watchman, and flee, laden with stolen booty? They did not. Let us repeat, no such epic themes are located in this simple narrative. To be quite frank, we ourselves have not quite decided yet what it is to be about.

Two galleries to fill; to the solitary figure in the little room they seemed like two vast oceans to be spanned. Outside the linotype machine roared relentlessly; inside his head the wheels buzzed round but to no purpose. The minutes ticked by. What was to be done? The awful thought of these vast empty spaces depressed and chilled him; they weighted him down and depressed him. He sought fresh air, calm, and solace in the outer world; news, too, he sought, but alas, all in vain. (Oh, well, we have taken up a little space.) However, to get down to brass tacks, we are going to write a feature about . . . about

Well, here's a little story about the University Press building. There's a door on the south side, on the sidewalk leading to (and from) Baldwin House. You can go in there; downstairs you will see piles and piles and piles and piles of paper—you know what I mean—quite a lot. And there are some huge machines in the rods and cranks and cylinders and armatures that turn over and back again. You can see them if you look in at the window. But let's go upstairs; it's far more interesting there. Besides, we know a little more about it. There's another huge machine there, with a man working it (if you go there at the right time); it has motor and belts and carriages and swivels, and looks like a typewriter in front (only a little more complicated). By the way, if it wasn't for it, and the other machines downstairs, this would still be in manuscript. Yes, we quite agree; it would be much better in that condition; but those who read it will be rewarded by—well—er—ah—by their diligence in wading through (Continued on page 4)

THE STATUS OF THE THEOLOGICAL COLLEGES?

Ever and anon there crops up in connection with some University activity the question of the status of the theological colleges federated with the University, and apparently opinion is greatly divided as to what position the students of these colleges hold in regard to University discipline, and participation in University functions and activities. It is a well known fact that last year when a certain theological college was alleged to have infringed the newly issued University rules with regard to initiation, certain members of the college declared that an infringement of University rules could not be committed by that college as the University had no authority over it. Again, at the open meeting of the Students' Administrative Council the other afternoon the representative of one of the theological colleges made the statement that the Board of Governors of the University had no power over the payment of S.A.C. fees by the theological colleges. It is known also that the Students' Administrative Council and the Warden of Hart House have not been able to decide whether theological students were to be treated as undergraduates or as graduates. In the case of Hart House the question is an important one. It is undoubtedly true that theological students who are paying no Hart House fees are making use of certain of the facilities of the House; and it would seem that if for no other reason than common justice to the male undergraduates of the other colleges and faculties who are compelled to pay the fee, the theological colleges should see to it that the fee is made compulsory for the students of their colleges, or the University should make the payment of this fee by the theological students a condition of federation. We do not believe that there is a single theological student in our colleges who would not be willing to pay the Hart House fee if it were made compulsory; but human nature being what it is, there will always be the one or two who will dodge the fee if he can get the benefits of the House without paying, and he will always excuse himself by saying, "I am not the only one." On the other hand, we are equally certain that the fee has not been made compulsory by the Boards of our theological colleges simply because it has never been asked for, and because in some few cases the students have become members of Hart House as graduates.

This raises another question. Is the theological student, having graduated in Arts, still an undergraduate? If he is not, has he a right to representation on the S.A.C., and should he be allowed to compete in undergraduate sports and activities? Again, what is the status of the theological student who has not graduated in Arts? It would seem to us as if this whole question needs very careful investigation, and at no distant date either. Perhaps the best solution would be a ruling from the governing bodies of all the federated theological colleges, that their students are to be regarded as undergraduates until they have completed not only their Arts course but their theological course as well, and that accordingly they shall pay all University fees for Hart House, S.A.C. and athletics, and similarly they shall enjoy by right, all privileges now afforded to the University undergraduate.

And while we have singled out the theological college in this instance, there are other colleges similarly situated, and to these our remarks apply equally as well.

This looks like some of Mr. Hanna's propaganda; but here goes -

Once more, it seems, our alma mater is being whacked by those who, with shrill screams and defiant bellows, are tearing around to save us, the rising generation, from the mental halitosis of Socialism and Communism.

From reading a report of the deafening screeches of a w.k. capitalist one would get the idea that the University yell is "Ca ira! ca ira! la lanterne," with "Proletarian, Arise" and "L'Internationale" as song hits.

This is the second fuss. Several years ago a certain financial paper got the idea that things which had not ought to be going on were going on, and forthwith hollered lustily. It subsided into poisonous mutterings, however.

Oh, well, did you ever hear of the jolly lunatic who said, "Now, boys, I must be off!"

SHEA'S HIPPODROME

The bill this week at Shea's Hippodrome seems in some measure to justify their slogan, "The best show in town." It is an excellent production throughout, although one or two of the acts tend to drag in spots but redeem themselves later on.

The picture is "The Dress Parade" and is a survey of the trials and tribulations surrounding the making of a West Pointer. Interspersed throughout are some excellent views of West Point and scenes showing the various maneuvers traditional of a military academy. The photography is well done, especially a moonlight scene during the June ball. The picture is much above the average.

Gone are the Collegians, and in their place is Big Boy and the Gang in one of their comedies. Big Boy proves himself an ardent Cupid—even in his own interests. We hope Big Boy's stay may be permanent.

The vaudeville bill is excellent. The O'Brien Sextette open in one of the best acts that we have yet seen in vaudeville circuits. They are primarily a jazz orchestra minus the usual vaudeville idea of jazz. Their background formed a beautiful colour scheme. Chain and Archer follow in a mind-reading act that is unique. Their act was good, but there was a tendency to drag. Madeline Patrice came next in a single act. She has an excellent voice of a quality seldom heard on the stage. Eddie Dale and Co. serve as a revue, a two-act play and wisecrackers all thrown in one bill. It is original, snappy and amusing.

Scott Sanders featured in a Scottish act. It is also unique and appealing and contains just the correct amount of spice.

The whole presentation is well worth seeing, and once more Shea's have redeemed themselves by following the rather poor show of last week by the excellent one this week.

THE PINE TREE

I raised myself on tiptoe
To gaze across the hill,
The snow was like a blanket,
And everything was still.

A black and tiny pine tree
Was all that I could find,
With miles and miles in front of it
And miles and miles behind.

I'd hoped to see a city
With little thrills of light,
Tho' day had not quite vanished
The promises of night.

I only saw the pine tree,
In the snow as white as sheep,
Like the last clear thought I think about
Before I fall asleep.

Famous Composers in Recital by Hart House Quartet

On Wednesday afternoon, January 11th, the Hart House Quartet will give the fourth of its recitals for students in Convocation Hall at five o'clock. The quartet will play compositions by Elgar, the famous British composer; John Beach, the American modern composer, and Maurice Ravel, the distinguished French pianist, who is visiting this continent for the first time this year. Particular attention centres on John Beach's "Poeme" which has been added to the repertoire of the world's outstanding string quartets. The Hart House Quartet will play the same programme in New York on January 15th, when Mr. Ravel will appear on the same programme.

Corpse Kills Calm

Screams and yells, punctuated by heavy thuds and the cracking of furniture, disturbed the customary calm of Baldwin House yesterday. Was it a real, old-time fight, or merely an announcement of exams? A quick investigation revealed a corpse flying through the upper air, causing terrific bursts of energy to evade the loathsome progress, and much merriment when some unlucky victim was hit. The corpse was that of a rat, a very dead rat; nevertheless it moved more rapidly than it had in life, propelled by the lusty arms of excited frosh. An innocent bystander was hit in the mouth. Shades of the last initiation! It was learned that the terrors were a class in accounting, all of which proves there is no accounting for tastes.

Principal Maurice Hutton to Speak at Players' Guild

The Guild has been extraordinarily fortunate in having Principal Maurice Hutton to speak to them on "Alice in Wonderland" at the first meeting of the New Year. This delightful book by Lewis Carroll has been of especial interest to us lately on account of the able production of a dramatized version of it at Hart House during the last two weeks.

In order to accommodate those who wish to hear the Hart House String Quartet the meeting will begin sharp at 4 o'clock and members are requested to be punctual.

Director of British Museum in Toronto on American Tour

Director McLagan, of the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, England, was a visitor yesterday to the Royal Ontario Museum and the Art Gallery of Toronto. He is making a tour of inspection of the art galleries of the United States and Canada, and is also giving a series of lectures at Harvard University. Last night he was the guest of honour at a dinner given in Hart House by Professor C. T. Currelly of the Royal Ontario Museum.

MABEE AND JERMYN BREAK RECORDS AT INDOOR TRACK MEET

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Three victories in three starts in the senior group of the O.H.A. is the record to date of the Varsity Seniors. They defeated Marlboro before the holidays, and since the new year have taken the measure of Peterboro and Kitchener. Their victory over the Petes was decisive and practically eliminates the Lift Lock boys from the running. The 2-0 defeat of Kitchener was not a very impressive victory, but it shows that any team that takes the Blue and White into camp will be hot favourites for the title. The only team that the Varsity entry has to beat now is Preston, and they meet the Prestonites next Monday night in the Riversides' home rink.

The Intermediates are also sitting pretty in their group with two wins in as many starts. However, both these victories were over the Bolton Wanderers, and they have yet to meet the other teams in the group. The next Intermediate fixture is on Friday of this week when Varsity plays in Milton.

The Interfaculty series are started and there should be plenty of sport to satisfy anyone. The basketball season got away the first of this week and the baseball series starts to-day. The present mild spell is holding up the Jennings Cup series, and unless cold weather comes soon the schedules will be in an almost hopeless tangle. The Interfaculty hockey series is run off in less than a month, and every postponement means that the teams have to play their games that much closer together. It is an unfortunate state of affairs, but there seems to be no solution.

Varsity opens the Intercollegiate hockey season on Thursday of this week when they play McGill in Montreal. The Red and White have a very strong team this year, having met with great success on their American trip. Several new stars are on the McGill line-up, and fans will watch with interest their progress in the Intercollegiate race.

HALF MILE, 50 YARD RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY U.C. ATHLETES

Cam Mabee and Gordon Jermyn Star at Keenly Contested Indoor Track Meet

12 POINT LEAD FOR U.C.

Russell Also Breaks Record While Finlayson Equals It, in 50-yard Dash

Cam Mabee of U.C. sprinted to a new interfaculty record in the 50 yards dash to feature the opening meet of the indoor track championships. The timers caught him in 5 2-5 secs., which decisively breaks the old record of 5 4-5 secs. Mabee got off to a perfect start, and made one of the best sprints of his college career. Harley Russell of S.P.S., three times intercollegiate sprint champion, recovered his old-time form, and recorded the fast time of 5 3-5 secs., which also smashed the old record. Finlayson of U.C. equalled the record to finish a close third in this event.

Gordon Jermyn of U.C., who made a brilliant run in the half-mile at the intercollegiate meet earlier in the season, definitely showed that he is one of the most promising runners developed at Varsity in recent years by decisively defeating a large field to win the half-mile in the remarkable time of 2:04 1-5. The old record was 2:05. Jermyn ran a heady race, keeping off the fast pace of the early leaders to come through in the final laps an easy winner. Graham of Dents captured second place in the event, which is a little too short for him. Judging by the form displayed in this race he should win the mile and the two mile runs. Duffy Wilson of Meds finished comfortably in third position to score the only point made by his faculty in the meet.

Jack Marshall of Dents, the president of the U. of T. Track Club, won the high jump with a leap of 5 ft. 4 in. He cleared the bar with ease, jumping in his ordinary clothes. Hopkins of Vic, a new man, upset the dope by securing second place, and Dennis of U.C. broke a five-man tie for third place to capture the position.

The standing by faculties to date: U.C. 12; Dents 8; S.P.S. 3; Vic 3; Meds 1.

PLACES ON POLO TEAM TO BE KEENLY CONTESTED

Faculty Men Asked to Report to Coach and Practice Hours Are Announced

Practices for the Varsity polo team started on Tuesday. From the large turnout a keen competition will take place for the vacant places. Only Sinclair and Hethrington of last year's team are back this year, thus leaving six places to be filled by new men. Paul Copeland, a star of other years, has consented to act as coach, and by his record should turn out a good team. Aspirants are reminded that full attendance at practices is essential, and any slackers will be dropped. The following men are requested to turn out to future practices till further notice. The official practice hours are:

Water Polo: Tuesdays and Thursdays, 5:15-6; Saturdays, 12-12:45.

Swimming: Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, 5-6.

Will these men kindly report to the coach on Thursday at 5:15 p.m.—Poyntz, Walker, Baker, Thompson, Curtis, Graham, Jennings, Latchford, from U.C.; Blackwell, Hutter, Pearce, from Meds; Thwaites, McCarty, Bullen, Howard, Alexander, Elliott, Fisher, from S.P.S.; Kirby, Sutton, Wansborough, from Vic; Broch and Sinclair, from Dents. Any others whose names have been missed and who wish to turn out are requested to see Mr. Copeland on Thursday at 5:15.

TRINITY SCIENCE CLUB HEARS PAPER ON DISEASES

Mr. Brown Reads Paper Dealing with Venereal Diseases and Their Treatment

The sixth general meeting of the Trinity College Science Club was held on Tuesday evening. After the business of the meeting, Mr. R. F. Brown read a very interesting and informative paper on "Some Aspects of the Venereal Diseases and Their Treatment."

Mr. Brown first pointed out that the adjective venereal was a misnomer, the diseases syphilis and gonorrhoea not being strictly venereal. The Great War gave an impetus to the gathering of statistics by the army medical exams. Since then, examinations of asylums and hospitals showed a surprisingly large percentage of infected cases.

The symptoms of the diseases and their treatment were then explained. Recent Ontario Government legislation is very significant of the importance now attached to this subject and shows the attempts of the government to obtain the co-operation of the medical profession in combating this menace to civilization. Some literature of the Department of Public Health was provided for the perusal of the members of the club. Discussion and refreshments followed and a hearty vote of thanks was made to the host, Prof. Proby, and the essayist, Mr. Brown.

BASKETBALL CONTEST IS CLOSE STRUGGLE U.C. ARE VICTORS

Victoria Juniors Sustain Loss as Local Basketball Season Opens

SCORE WAS 15 TO 10

Early Lead and Strong Finish Decisive Factors in Close Game

U.C. and Vic. Juniors opened their local seasons yesterday; the former just managed to defeat Vic. 15-10 in a close hard checking game. There was never more than a few points difference between the teams at any time, and it was only in the dying moments of the game that U.C. were able to notch a couple of baskets and pull in a win. Neither team seemed to have much condition, although allowance must be made for the holiday and consequent lack of practice. U.C. meet Meds next Wednesday in what should be one of the tid-bits of the series. Meds are highly rated, and U.C. have shown that they must be reckoned with also.

U.C. got the jump on Vic. and managed to score several baskets before Vic. finally settled down. When this occurred it was a different story and had the U.C. supporters gasping. The time score was 7-5, with the game still very much in doubt. Putnam and Riggs played smart ball in this half, while Young, who was elected captain just before the game, also turned in a fine game. Barr was the big works for Vic., and without him they would have been badly handicapped. Lautenslager and Davison tried hard, but were well watched by Goldenberg and Dobrindt on the U.C. defence.

The second period witnessed a much faster play, although no noticeable difference in the rate of scoring. U.C. again assumed the lead, and in spite of many dangerous attacks by Vic. held on to their narrow margin of superiority. Putnam continued to shine, while Wood and Goldenberg held the Vic. sharpshooters at bay. The final score was 15-10 for U.C.

Line-up:
Vic.: Forwards, Lautenslager, Davison; centre, Wilkinson; defence, Barrett, Shepley; subs, Bowles, Berry, Barr, Stockwell, Leash.

U.C.: Forwards, Young, Riggs; centre, Putnam; defence, Goldenberg, Wood, Dobrindt; subs, Sullivan, Hodgins, Mayor, Humphrey.

Items from "The Varsity" of Three Years Ago Reveal the Changes

SLIM SKIRTS, BLUE COATS

How quickly do fashions go out of date? These items, culled from issues of "The Varsity" for 1924-5, will help to throw some light on this subject. They are chosen from fairly recent files purposely, to afford interested undergraduates a chance to perceive just what changes have taken place since then.

"Just ask the man who wear one why he purchased it. It's the last word in style, smartness and good taste. What? Why, the blue overcoat, of course. Just a glimpse of white scarf at the neck, topped with a gray fedora, blending with spats below. Not only does the well-dressed man speak of loyalty to his college, but he is ready for anything—lecture hall, street, or the odd dance."

Here's a clipping from "Mood of the Mode," a column which flourished in the paper in those days, which provides much food for serious thought and reflection. "Our idea that men dressed in sombre black, or, at best, navy blue, with snow white collars, has been riddled to pieces this fall as never before. Fedoras used to be gray, but that gray has now been tightened so as to be almost white, and its whiteness is further emphasized by a gaudy red and blue band. And as if to counteract the deadness of the recently revived christie stiff, masculine ties are more variegated in hue and more brilliantly dazzling than the most barbaric tartans in Cates'. Even collars, which once had to be spotlessly white and stiff, may be worn in any of the new green and purple shades. Where will things end? But, in reality, we have no quarrel whatever with men's (Continued on page 4)

JEWISH LITERATURE AT MENORAH SOCIETY

Miss Abramovitz Delivers Paper at Inaugural Meeting of New Term

REPORT ON CONFERENCE

The first Menorah Group of the term was held on Saturday, Jan. 7, at 55 Hilton Avenue, the home of Miss Rose Abramovitz. The attendance was unusually large, and it was gratifying to note that more and more interest is being evinced for these charming bi-monthly meetings which afford members and friends an opportunity to meet on an informal social footing, and yet to further the aims of Menorah—"the advancement of Jewish culture and ideals." A very interesting paper was delivered by Miss Rose Elias of McMaster University. Her subject, "The Jew in Literature," was aptly chosen and ably treated. She discussed with brevity and yet lucidity the significance of the biblical literature, the Talmud and Kabala, and also the philosophical and poetical creations of the Jew. The active discussion that followed well displayed the interest which the subject created. The Jew in modern literature was talked about and also the very pertinent problem—whether the literary efforts of the Jewish race were a factor in the preservation of their religion.

A report of the Menorah Convention held November 25, 26 and 27 at Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island, was read by Mr. F. Catzman. As a result of this report the members decided that the ensuing groups of this year choose one subject, "Towards a Reconstruction of Judaism," and treat it from different aspects. This will be adopted in the future. Tea was served, with Mrs. Abramovitz presiding at the table.

EXHIBITION SHOWS GROWTH OF PRINTING

University Library Has Interesting Display of Pages from Early Volumes

DATE FROM 1548 TO 1762

Pages from several interesting old volumes are on exhibition in the University Library. Perhaps those of the most interest are those from the English Church Prayer Book printed in 1662 and 1762. The present controversy in the British Parliament has drawn attention to the Prayer Book. It is interesting to note that the one printed in 1662 was called the "Sealed Book" because it had been suppressed for fifteen years before Charles II submitted it to the Savoy conference for revision. No changes were officially sanctioned for two hundred years after this conference.

These pages were purchased by the Library to show the development of printing. The oldest is from the New Testament Paraphrases by Desiderius Erasmus printed in 1548-9, and the most recent from the Prayer Book printed in 1762.

In explaining how these pages were obtained, Mr. Wallace, the Librarian, said that rare volumes often come on the market in a depleted state, so their value as a complete book is much lessened and they can be purchased at a moderate price by people, who in turn sell them page by page for various purposes.

There will be a hockey practice for Varsity Juniors to-day from 1:30 to 2 p.m.

MUMPS EPIDEMIC CAUSES NO ALARM

the denizens have taken to it in spite of the fact that they are sure to have a swell time if they do.

Investigation into the health and hopes of the women students in residences disclosed no evidences of any indispositions beyond the unusual ones.

Though the medical authorities have said that there is no cause for alarm, students might be advised to use discretion during the next few days, especially at dances or elsewhere, even if no cases have been reported to date in the women's residences. After all, it means an eighteen-day siesta if one gets too careless. Who knows? They have been known to run in a froth for going around with his mouth full.

An evening newspaper points out that too many parents allow their children to go out and spread the disease before they are completely recovered. It is this pernicious habit which allows epidemics such as the present one to spread. The exercise of care and caution is in order, for, with May only four months off, any interruption in the course of University activities may be fatal when the final reckoning is made.

fads. In fact, we are rather pleased with them, for by reason of them, men are restrained from levelling any changes against the absurdity of feminine styles."

Here is a morsel for the co-eds. "There is certainly no note of depression in the range of colours for evening wear. Green, purple and flame in every imaginable, familiar and unpronounceable shade. Because last year gowns were full and long, this season, perforce, Fashion decries the straight or very low waisted silhouette, emphatically shorter, though where the ascent should stop is a matter of dispute. Paris says twelve inches, but conservative Toronto is content with eight. Bands of brightly coloured brocade, fur, ostrich feathers, and fringe are the distinctive trimmings, used so as to accentuate the straight, slim lines of the fashion. The most extravagant mood of the fickle mode is the introduction of silk wigs to match the gown. Will the Varsity co-ed, having perpetrated everything on her hair from a permanent wave to a close cut, try this new experiment? It offers possibilities at least.

Speakers on the paper will take ten minutes each, and those addressing the chair from the floor of the House will be limited to half that period, that as many as possible may be given an opportunity to be heard. Those intending to speak from the floor of the House are requested to advise the Speaker in writing, through the Warden's office, before the debate, though in the case of unexpected inspiration, the passing of a note to the Speaker during the debate, or even the catching of his attention will suffice if number of applicants is not too great.

The one inadequate foundation for the sensational rumours mentioned consists of the invitation of Mr. John MacDonald, Secretary of the Communist party in Canada, to attend the debate. To him, as to all members of the House, is extended the privilege of addressing the Speaker, though that he will avail himself of the opportunity is by no means assured.

Both the political clubs in the University welcome with enthusiasm the opportunity to formally debate the question. The suggestion for the whole programme came originally from the vice-president, W. T. Aiken of the MacDonald-Carter Club, the Conservative organization. This precludes the possibility of its being Communist propaganda.

"The first Hart House debate was on 'Labour Government' in 1924, and several members of the staff of the University were on the paper," commented B. J. Thompson, President of the Liberal Club and member of the Debates Committee.

"I see no reason why they should not have such a debate. The question is one with which we have to cope. While the Conservatives consider the University largely a Liberal element, at the same time I believe it is sufficiently Conservative that no difficulties are likely to arise from the debate in question," said Mr. Thompson.

"Any trouble that does occur in the press is a display of ignorance as to the true nature of the Hart House debates and an under-rating of the intelligence of the student body," he concluded.

Mr. J. H. Gringorten, II U.C., another member of the Committee, hooted the idea of there being any Communist propaganda. The matter, said Mr. Gringorten, was entirely in the hands of a sub-committee of the Debates Committee, consisting of himself, Prof. Bladen, Mr. W. T. Aiken and one other. The other members of the Debates Committee were not concerned in the matter.

"The Varsity" attempted to see the minutes of the Committee, but was informed that these were not on public view.

In connection with these reports, it is worth noticing that as soon as the true facts of the case became known, the storm of criticism subsided.

such a lot of dull stuff. But let's continue our investigation. There are all sorts of things yet to be seen; tables and tables covered with chunks of metal with funny little ridges all over it; drawers and shelves and cupboards; paper and wastepaper (ever so much wastepaper); and a lovely clock that people are supposed to punch, and all sorts of other delightful things. And then there is a door leading into an inside room; but you mustn't talk so loudly in there. Someone is trying to write a story, and you will disturb them. Oh, and there's a board with headlines pasted on it, and a telephone, and a few chairs with no backs; some paste, a pair of scissors, and newspapers galore. Altogether, it is a most fascinating place. But dear me! We had no idea it was so late. You should be going home now; it's almost half-past three. Do come again sometime and let us show you some more things here. Good-bye!

lish or History, and would lead to a degree. The recognition of the diploma course is a beginning at least. It fills a long felt want in the need of properly qualified physical training teachers in colleges and high schools in the province. Private schools employ graduates of courses in physical training not recognized in Ontario—for instance, McGill University provides a three year course that leads to a diploma, and for this reason their standard in physical education is often higher than that of the public schools.

The number of graduates of the diploma course is not large, but more will be added each year, and if the standard of the course is kept as high as it is at present, and it will be, the standards of physical education in the high schools and colleges of the province must of necessity be raised a great deal.

Did he base his choice here on style or on value? He submitted that it was the style in the advertisements appealing for Victory Loans and recruits which produced their admirable success.

The second speaker for the negative occupied a good deal of his time in refuting the remarks of the affirmative, while, in the remainder, he stressed the fact that style was a means used by deceptive advertisers to put inferior quality goods over the public. He further emphasized the inadvisability of appeals based on style on the ground that styles change too rapidly.

LECTURER COMPARES TWO EMPIRES -- ROME AND MODERN BRITAIN

Professor Fay Explains Differences to English Association

NO FEAR OF BRITISH FALL

Romans Had High Civic Consciousness and Engineering Skill

"Rome fell: the American colonies revolted: the British Empire survived. We do not fear another fall because conditions are fundamentally different," said Professor Fay, addressing the English Association at the Reference Library last evening. Professor Fay's topic, "Two Empires," was a comparison of the empires of Ancient Rome and Modern Britain.

In the Roman Empire, Professor Fay began by saying, the cheapness of slave labour discouraged labour-saving devices and tended to keep the standard of living low. As the empire decayed, the slaves were better treated, but what was needed was the total abolition of slavery, as in the United States. In Britain, on the other hand, slavery did not play an internal part; hence mechanical inventions were stimulated.

Rome made no approach, continued the speaker, to federation or representative government. Its culture bled itself out, its governors served their country with unparalleled devotion—but their efforts failed. The supposed federation of self-governing cities never existed, and although Rome's rulers knew the value of peace, they had to fight for it, because the capital city was not united with the rest of the empire. "What the fathers of confederation did for Canada, we of the Imperial Association, are spirited to do for the British Empire," said the speaker.

"The strifes of to-day are rather national and economic," continued Professor Fay. These Rome did not have. Her deep strife was between town and country, and in this the army played a decisive part. The trade added to the empire had a terrible cost in men and labour. "Waste of men is written on every page of ancient history."

Adam Smith advised Britain to make her colonies contribute to her support—or abandon them. For Rome there could be no such splendid isolation. She was forced to make them pay tribute, and this became increasingly difficult and expensive.

The speaker went on to compare public finance in the two empires. The

CARROLL'S SERMONS JUSTIFIED BY ALICE

Principal Hutton Addresses U.C. Guild on Famous Humourist

POEMS IN ALICE GREEK

"Lewis Carroll began by making fun of the Duchess, who was always searching for morals, and ended by searching for morals himself," and the morals of the Duchess were the best, according to Principal Hutton, speaking to the U.C. Players' Guild on "Alice in Wonderland" yesterday afternoon.

The "Alice" books were delightfully humorous, but when in later books Mr. Carroll began to sermonize, it was easily seen that his genius did not lie along serious lines. However, had he not taken this moralistic turn, he might have been overtaken by the pessimism which had seized Swift, Gilbert, Mark Twain and other humorists.

In private life, Lewis Carroll was the Reverend Charles Dodgson, lecturer in mathematics at Christ Church, Oxford. He disliked his two identities to be confused, and when Her Majesty the Queen wrote to Lewis Carroll at Oxford, asking for a copy of his works, the don sent her his complete mathematical works, as an academic rebuke.

At Oxford his health and gaiety failed him,—naturally because he was a don, doubly naturally because he was a clerical don, trebly naturally because he was a clerical mathematical don. Though unwilling to have the two sides of his life mixed, he himself was unable to keep them apart in his writing; his nonsense became polluted with sense, and his literary work degenerated.

The literary quality of the "Alice" books consisted largely in the use of words and puns. "Curiouser and curiouser" and the "tortoise" who "taught us" were immediately attractive. Puns were of mid-Victorian popularity, but there were still some Victorians who loved them for the sake of Lewis Carroll.

The Principal expressed his delight in small girls of Alice's age, and deplored the fact that young ladies of the present did not cease growing

FINE NEW TELESCOPE SECOND LARGEST IN DOMINION OF CANADA

Department of Astronomy to Benefit by the Energies of Its Professors

NINETEEN INCHES IN SIZE

Much of New Instrument Made by Professor Personally with Machinery

For the past years two small four-inch telescopes have had to satisfy students of astronomy at this University. These were the same instruments which are wheeled out on the campus in the summer months to allow the curious citizenry of this town to do a little observing of the planets and their orbits.

Now, however, it seems that two professors of the department of Astronomy have been working themselves on a telescope, which, when completed and mounted in a proper building with the necessary machinery, will be the second largest in the Dominion.

The iron base for the telescope and tube has been made by Professor R. K. Young personally, with lathes and machinery installed for the purpose. All these are in the basement of Baldwin House. For the mirror of the telescope a large thick piece of rough glass was taken, and ground down to the proper dimensions with steel and emery and fine powder.

This is intended to be a telescope of the refracting type. There are two others of this sort in the Dominion. One is at Ottawa and is smaller than the one here, which is to be 19 inches in diameter.

DISPOSAL OF WASTE IMPORTANT PROBLEM

Hart House Left-overs Sold to Various Toronto Firms at a Profit

CLEANLINESS CHIEF AIM

The disposal of waste material in Hart House is primarily a problem of cleanliness, but cleanliness turned to economic value. Herein it is more successful than many institutions, such as Hotel Stevens, Chicago, whose disposal costs more than returns.

Four hundred and fifty pounds of paper is the average weekly amount collected, baled, and sold to Pullans Company.

Down in the cooking department is shown a similar regard for cleanliness, the equation seeming reversible. Even soap is made from the unused meats, and can be utilized for cleaning utensils. Everything of economic value brings return. Swift's buy untouched bones; Canada Bread Company buys cartons; other companies buy empty barrels; and agriculturists ultimately buy waste food materials, such as peelings, rinds and smaller items as food for stock. About thirty barrels weekly leave Hart House for the stock raiser.

Various prices are received for these waste products. Waste paper may give a return of twenty cents per hundredweight, while empty cans and barrels return one dollar and fifty cents each. Even waste bread brings a return of half a cent per pound.

Other waste materials throughout Hart House are collected by the city department twice weekly. These bring only one return, the return of cleanliness and neatness, to Hart House.

OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THEOLOGICAL STATUS

Wycliffe College Students Required to Pay S.A.C. Fees

CLERICS ARE PROBLEM

Is a theological faculty on the same footing as Medicine or Arts provided that the theological college is properly affiliated with the University? This seems to be the bone of contention, the question which must be settled before the problem presented in yesterday's "Varsity" editorial can be satisfactorily solved.

Opinion seems to differ amongst both professors and students as to the relative importance of the problem and the correct method of looking after it.

Provost Cosgrave of Trinity College stated that he did not feel it to be a vital problem, and, considering that Trinity's theological registration was comparatively small, felt that it did not affect the students of Trinity College to any great degree. He said, however, that since most of the students at Trinity proceeding to the study of theology first took their Arts course they were considered as graduates in Arts at the end of that course and yet had the privileges of an undergraduate because of their theological standing.

In the absence of Principal Eakin the registrar at Knox College volunteered the information that practically the same condition of affairs existed at Knox. In very exceptional cases only, he said, are students allowed to take theology without taking either a full Arts course or at least two or three years. The students of Knox when graduates in Arts still hold their position as undergraduates of the University by virtue of their theological standing.

Rev. Dr. Taylor, Secretary of the Faculty for Wycliffe College, stated that he was heartily in sympathy with the main idea of the editorial, having already sent a letter to "The Varsity" before being interviewed.

Students at Wycliffe College, he went on to say, no matter in what course they were, were required by the college calendar to pay Hart House and S.A.C. fees. This ruling was made as it was felt that it would best follow up the will of the University in the matter.

The general opinion of students of the various colleges affected seems to be

COMMUNIST DEBATE DOES NOT ROUSE IRE OF THE UNIVERSITY AUTHORITIES

TORONTO DAILY AT FAULT
NO TRUTH IN STATEMENT

Premier Inaccessible — Staff Denies Knowledge of Grounds For This Report

In apparent contradiction to the report in yesterday morning's "Mail and Empire" regarding the contemplated action of Premier Ferguson concerning the debate in Hart House on Wednesday, Jan. 18th, it was found by "The Varsity" that the Premier's staff knew nothing of his alleged statement.

Premier Ferguson was unable to keep his appointment with "The Varsity's" representative, but on enquiry it was found that neither his secretary nor anyone in the office had heard of any proposed action on the part of the Premier, nor had he expressed any opinion on the matter to members of his staff.

NEW RESIDENCES ARE ABSOLUTE NECESSITY

An Adequate Women's Building Seems at Last About to be Realized

BRIDGE AT CASA LOMA

About six years ago there was an appeal made to the public apropos of new residences for women of University College. At that time there was no ready response, and so the question was left in abeyance until there should arise a more definite possibility of the present Queen's Hall being abandoned.

When it was lately learned that the Ontario Government had taken over Queen's Hall's properties and would require these properties within the next two years, the University purchased four lots south of Hoskin on St. George to be used for women's residences. There has been a far-reaching revival of the old appeal to which the graduates have answered by contributing to the extent of somewhere between thirty and thirty-five thousand dollars.

The plans for the residences show four units, each housing between forty and fifty students, and situated on that side of St. George Street which is nearest the campus. The present Hutton House and Argyle will be given over to the use of graduates and public health nurses.

In view of the fact that the University itself is not responsible for the housing of its students there has been organized among the undergraduates a campaign to raise the necessary funds. For this purpose a bridge, at which Lady Falconer has consented to be one of the patronesses, has been arranged for at Casa Loma on Saturday, Jan. 21. In this way attention will be drawn to the need for substitute residences.

It is hoped that by housing the women students in such a way the ideal will be realized of centralizing and unifying the activities of University College.

Occupational Therapy Tea at Home of Mr. Stansfield

The Occupational Therapy graduating class were entertained at a charming tea held at the home of Mr. Stansfield, their Arts and Crafts instructor, on Wednesday. They were delighted by the artists' paintings which were the outstanding attractions of his studio, and also by Mrs. Stansfield's clever weaving which she displayed as an illustration of their own work along that line.

Subject Thought Reasonable Especially in Country of Free Speech

MR. DUNLOP INTERVIEWED

Says That The Sooner Canada Rid of Communist Evil The Better

No comments were made by the authorities in regard to material published by a local morning paper in which it was intimated that Premier Ferguson might, in his capacity of Minister of Education, upset the arrangements for the Hart House debate.

Members of the faculty stated that individually they had no objection to the subject being brought up for debate, in that such an assemblage of intelligent and educated students should be permitted to put forth and defend any of their honest opinions before their fellows.

The subject for debate, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, the social and industrial systems advocated by the Communist party of Canada are not in the best interests of the people of the Dominion," is considered by all to be a reasonable subject for discussion, and especially in a country where free speech is the rule, should not be tabooed on account of its political nature.

According to a local paper, a well-known Toronto publisher has taken exception to the subject on the ground that it is the fulfilment of his prophecy of some years back in which he stated that attempts were being made to insinuate subversive communistic propaganda.

MUMPS TAKE TOLL OF U. OF T. FACULTY

Every Care is Being Taken to Avoid Spread of Disease Among Students

PROFESSOR BLADEN ILL

It is apparent that mumps are making the rounds of the University. Isolated cases have appeared here and there. Last December it is understood that there were five hundred cases in the city. The affliction of Professor Bladen has brought the matter forcibly to the attention of the public. It is reported that a member of one of his study groups before the holidays had the mumps, but owing to the comparative mildness of the case, did not suspect it until after several days. Subsequently another member of Professor Bladen's students was stricken during the holidays.

Yesterday it was learned that there was one suspected case at Wycliffe, another at Annesley Hall, and also several of the deaconesses at the St. Clair residence had the mumps.

According to the report of the University Health Service, there was not one case of mumps in the University last year among the men.

It is impossible to judge to what proportions the epidemic may spread, is the general opinion. The period of incubation, or the time from exposure to definite symptoms, is quite long, and there is no telling how many from now on may contract the mumps.

While the mumps in themselves are quite innocent, apart from a marked aversion to pickles and lemons on the part of the sufferer, the consequences and accompanying reactions, according to expert opinion, can be extremely serious.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Philosopher's Feature Finds Favour

That this column has the general and impartial approval of the student body is evinced by to-day's answers to the following question:

Do you approve of Diogenes as a daily feature in "The Varsity"?
G. Mallon, II St. Michael's: Yes. I think it is a very good idea.
Miss R. N., II U.C.: Yes. It is amusing to say the least.
R. Turnbull, IV Trinity: Yes. I think it is worth continuing. It is a good parallel to the Champus Cat. It is a stimulus to the discussion of worth-while topics.

W. P. Mann, I Trinity: Yes. I think it is a good idea in itself, but also I think that there are some silly questions in it.

E. Granger, II Forestry: I think it is a good feature, for it gives an idea of what people on the campus think of different subjects. It is one of the first things you look for in "The Varsity."

B. Marshall, III Meds: Yes. I think it's a very good idea, although some of the questions are unnecessary.

Miss D. D., I U.C.: I think it's the best ever.

Miss A. Worthington, III U.C.: I think it's a very good idea. It's a good way of obtaining student opinion.

Miss G. Reid, III U.C.: Yes. I think it's a good idea.

MUST WE BE GAGGED?

That the Hart House debates are not without interest may be readily recognized from the grave concern and fatherly attitude now being shown by certain members of the city press who are inclined to devote many absurd but colourful columns to making a mountain out of a mole-hill and to agitate the governing breast. Exponents of the freest of free speech, certain of our dailies, though careful to express no editorial opinion, express fear on our behalf, appear to seek to raise adverse opinion where there had been none, and, in all, vouch for their inconsistency by a hidden insistence for the withdrawal of those speakers from whom no assurance had been received that they would speak.

In other words, inaccuracies of reports, statements and information are clouding the issues involved. And the policy and the system of the Hart House debate has either been overlooked or ignored. The facts are that the debates committee has always endeavoured to seek pertinent matters of the day for discussion upon the floor of the house, with parliamentary procedure being followed. For the forthcoming debate four speakers have been selected, a student and a graduate member of Hart House representing each side of the question, while any other member may, upon meeting the eye of the Speaker, speak from the floor following the debate. That is, the meeting is entirely open in character, and many more other than the four selected speakers of the evening may contribute to the knowledge of the voters. That some information of a valid character may be obtained, the committee has, in the present instance, as always, endeavoured to secure graduates who knew whereof they spoke to represent both sides of the question. And, as usual, invitations to attend the debate have been or will be mailed to a small number of persons who might be considered as being vitally interested in the matter coming up before the House. Whether any of the latter speak or not is a matter entirely up to them and to the Speaker of the House. All of which is purely by way of explanation.

It may readily be believed that, but for certain of our contemporaries, the debate would have been arranged and carried through to completion without the feeling of animosity being aroused in a single breath. It would seem but a simple matter of reasoning that a group of men of average intelligence with a more than fair education be allowed to hear discussed, without prejudice and with open minds, a subject that is bound to confront them at various times throughout their lives and that has been strong enough to make or unmake nations. Where children, the unemployed, the illiterate or ignorant might readily be swayed by enthusiasm rather than logic, is it also necessary to suppose that the university man be similarly aroused? Or is it to be believed, if such strong opposition as is indicated would lead one to suppose, that facts might be presented and assimilated that would be far from tasty morsels for certain bodies of society.

Are we to believe, on the advice of others, that communism is good or bad, and are we expected to quietly accept their dictation without analysis of our own? Are we to suppose that our present governing system is the best that can be devised by man, and are we to be expected to lose all opportunity for further enlightenment in the realms of government—good, bad or indifferent? No! Rather should we seek information at its source rather than by advice, and more fortunate it be if we can add to our store of information now rather than after graduation.

It is not to be supposed that university students, by the very

GASCONY

The stars bring back to me to-night
 A saddened memory
 And fancy takes its mourning flight
 To far-off Gascony.

Ah, the night I spent in Gascony
 Where air stirs one like wine
 And far away the eye can see
 The mountains' moon-lit line.

All the glory of the moon-beam
 Glows on the ancient inn
 And slowly lifts to life my dream
 Alive with all its din.

The coach rolls in from out the west—
 It rolls out to the east,
 And every time there comes a guest,
 A soldier, lord or priest.

The road rolls up and on to Pau,
 From Pau up in to Spain,
 Yet never there am I to go
 Nor tread a Gascon lane.

For Gascony is far away,
 Where air once stirred like wine,
 And never more am I to see
 The joys that once were mine.

WHAT MATTERS IT?

What matters it that you have beat
 Against an iron bar?
 Out of the night comes dawn-time,
 Out of the dusk—a star.

What matters it that you have fought
 With pain your only dower?
 Out from the rain comes sunshine,
 Out of the dust—a flower.

What matters it that you have paid
 And have not gained your goal?
 Out of the fire comes freedom,
 Out of the pain—a soul.

SONNET TO CHILDHOOD

How innocent thy glance O maiden fair,
 Thy look of childish wonder and delight,
 As from beneath thy locks of auburn hair
 Thine eyes of clearest azure sparkle bright.
 What more appealing than thy gaze so pure
 O childhood sweet, unsullied and sublime?
 What innocent regard should more endure
 The painful ravage of relentless Time?

Endure? alas! too soon it disappears
 And, giving place to maidenhood's desires,
 Is found the root of many passionate tears,
 Of many bleeding hearts and bitter fires.

nature of their training and education, would be communist in inclination, and most certainly will they not lean toward such provided the argument in favour of the motion is as strong—and we are led to believe that it should be stronger—as that presented by the opposition. Far be it from us to advocate for one side or the other, but we do agitate for free speech, for it is only then that the broadest outlook on the matters and questions of life may be obtained. More and more with understanding does one come to realize that too much of vital interest to mankind has been ignored, hidden or suppressed through ignorance; and mankind owes many of its fortunes of to-day to the freedom of speech and the freedom of the press of the British peoples.

A SPLENDID ATTITUDE

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
 Apropos of your editorial in Wednesday's issue on the subject of theological students and Hart House fees, with the main purport of which I am entirely in agreement, may I point out that as far as Wycliffe College is concerned the thing for which you contend is already done. All students of the College, whether undergraduates in Arts or graduates in Arts, or those taking special courses, are required by the College authorities to pay the annual Hart House fee and also the S.A.C. fee. The physical training fee is also compulsory, during the first two years, in harmony with the requirement as laid down in the University Calendar. The College has endeavoured to live up to the spirit as well as the letter of its responsibilities as an integral and federated part of the University of Toronto. The College Council has taken the position that all its students should become members of Hart House, and to this end has definitely and explicitly laid down in its Calendar that all Hart House fees are required to be paid by all its enrolled students. I may add that in the matter of student discipline the College has always recognized the authority of the University of Toronto, and is endeavouring, as in the past, to carry out the due observance of its rules. So far as I am aware it has met each and every requirement of the new rules to which you particularly refer in your editorial.

I am, yours sincerely,
 W. E. Taylor,
 Secretary of the Faculty.

The speed limit on the campus of Leland Stanford University has been cut down from forty to twenty miles an hour. This ruling was announced recently when the men's council of the university took over campus traffic regulations.

BOXERS AND WRESTLERS LEAVE TO-MORROW FOR WESTPOINT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Have you bought your season ticket yet?

On Tuesday at the Mutual Street Arena the Juniors came through with a win and again took hold of second place. If they keep the pace they have set so far, it means a sure place in the play-offs. But Mariboros are the accepted team to beat, having lost only one game to date and that to the locals.

Frank Sullivan's team goes into action again to-morrow, and then the fans should be able to make a fairly sure guess as to the final outcome of the series. Mariboros are the opponents.

The Senior basketball team has not been very successful in their trips this year. In both the pre-Christmas and post-Christmas trips they have come out on the wrong side of the scoring sheet. But that is no criterion as to what they will do in the Intercollegiate series. It just means that they have worked out a lot of bad basketball that has been in their system and should be able to perform like a championship team in the home series which begins here on January 26th.

Ten games in the Jennings Cup series were scheduled for this week, but it looks as though ten games will have to be postponed until later on in the season. It is hard luck for the hockey fans, as when the teams finally do get into action they will lack the condition that never comes amiss. At that though all the teams are in a like boat.

The Sifton Cup series is in better luck, as the basketballers do not have to wait upon the favour of the weatherman; all they need worry about is someone deciding to paint the gym floors. The series just started this week and only six games were on the cards.

The other winter sport for Interfaculty sport is also under way, as the indoor baseball squads have three games this week. There are only three groups in this league and they finish their business on February 29.

The Intercollegiate water polo squad is splashing about in the tank most any day of the week, and though decidedly weakened through graduation, will present a strong opposition to the McGill entry. Mr. Winterburn developed a winning team last year and is out to have the trophy remain here again for another season. There are only two teams after the trophy, so the Blue cannot get worse than second place. McGill have been perennial winners—almost.

The fencers under Messrs. Walters and Moore are crossing foils very enthusiastically these nights. The assault is on the 7th and 8th of February, and hence the devotees of this ancient and royal sport are making hay while the sun shines. Much new material has been developed this season, and the old stand-bys will have to do some smart foil work if they expect to get on the team again this year. This sport is perhaps unique in so far that long after all competition is over, you will see the enthusiasts with sabre and epee just as though a competition were only a week off. Any fencer will tell you that more enjoyment is derived from this sport when not in competition than when practice. In the former you are more apt to fight than fence.

GYM MEET IMPORTANT EVENT NOT FAR AWAY

Mr. Barton Promises Special Coaching to Those Who Wish Extra Training

DR. PORTER PRAISES WORK

With the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Meet only six weeks away, Don Barton's boys are getting down to work in earnest. Every Tuesday and Thursday the Intercollegiate and Interfaculty prospects work out in the big gym from five to six. Practices have been held regularly since last October, and the men are beginning to show some real form on the apparatus.

Mr. Barton has announced that from now on he will give special coaching on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. These practices are to be held in the fencing room from 4.30 to 5.30 p.m., and are for the purpose of assisting individual members of the club to perfect their work.

Gymnastics is one of the most difficult and at the same time fascinating forms of sport, according to Dr. Porter. It demands a keen eye, well developed muscles and an extraordinary degree of co-ordination of thought and action. All this can only be gained by long practice. Few people realize the hours and days of practice necessary before a gymnast can perform a short forty-five second movement on the horizontal bar. All they see is the beauty and grace of the movement, and little do they guess at the muscular effort required or the danger involved. Yet it is just these things that make the sport so fascinating to the gymnast.

Seniors Defeat Sophs in Last Game of Vic. Baseball Series

The final game of the inter-year girls' baseball schedule at Victoria was played on Monday night at the old gym. The Seniors won a victory over the Sophs to the tune of 15-13. The game was very exciting in the last two innings. The second year girls gained a considerable lead, but lost this advantage under the efficient pitching and catching of Kay Ferguson and Fran Service respectively. Helen Hilliard, Norma Bateman and Marj. Snyder starred for second year. "Ida" Cook refereed.

OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THEOLOGOS' STATUS

be that if a regularly affiliated college has a theological faculty, undergraduates pursuing the course are in the fullest sense undergraduates of the University, and are, as such, entitled to all privileges of an undergraduate after the payment of the regular fees, just as a student who graduated in forestry desired to take, say, engineering, would be entitled to the same consideration.

VARSLITY WRESTLERS TACKLE WEST POINT

Several Ring and Mat Artists to Try for T's Against U.S.A. Army Men

DON CARRICK TO THE FORE

To-morrow the Varsity first string of boxers and wrestlers leave for West Point to take on the best that the United States Army can offer. In the past two seasons the locals have come off very well, but this season a string of unknown ring and mat artists are making the trip.

Graduation robbed a lot of last year's squad, but if this season is anything like previous ones, the powers that be will be able to round out a championship team. There is only one point of the trip this year, and hence there is not sufficient guarantee to take the full complement of the club. It is questionable whether or not Don Carrick will go this time, as Mike Pearson has been more or less monopolizing this boxer. Don has two trips this week as it is, having gone to Kitchener on Monday and to McGill to-day. He should be able to get back in time to go to the States, though, as he is one of the most consistent winners that Les Black has on his string.

Messrs. Martin and Black have a real bunch of willing workers, and many who were not quite good enough last year are putting their best foot forward to get a crack at a "T." For many of them it means do or die, as graduation has a nasty habit of depriving many of a chance to earn their colours.

CARROLL'S SERMONS JUSTIFIED BY ALICE

older at seven instead of at twenty-seven.

Few people realized that the expressions "in the soup" and "Chortle" were found in Alice, and even less did they know that "Father William," "The Walrus" and other famous Carroll poems were practically direct translations from the Greek.

Principal Hutton concluded his address by stating his confidence that at the last assizes, when the Reverend Charles Dodgson was being tried, Alice would plead for him, and that his mathematical works, even his sermons, might be pardoned for the sake of Lewis Carroll.

School Triumphs Over U.C. in Junior Interfaculty Fixture

Jr. School defeated Jr. U.C. in a fast Interfaculty fixture by a score of 8 to 0. Southon's strong pitching was the barrier over which U.C. could not climb. He had 13 strike-outs and 2 assists as a reward for his five innings work, pitching a no hit, no run game.

Jr. School appear to have good material for a championship team this year, but there might be a good many more out to practise. We believe that there is more good baseball material in School.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR HAS JUST CLOSED FOR BLUE ATHLETES

Last Year Varsity Won Many Intercollegiate Championships

TEAMS VISITED U.S.A.

Varsity Alumni Hockeyists Were Winners of Allan Cup

Last year was very successful from the point of athletics in the University of Toronto.

The University of Toronto won the following Intercollegiate championships: Senior Rugby, Junior Rugby, Harrier, Track, Senior Hockey, Intermediate Basketball, Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing, Swimming and Diving, Water Polo, and Gymnasium.

McGill University won the Soccer, Tennis and Golf; and the Royal Military College won the Intermediate Rugby and the Intermediate Hockey. The University of Western Ontario won the Senior Basketball, and the Kingston Collegiate Institute the Junior Hockey.

Special mention is made of the winning of the Senior Intercollegiate championship in the Rugby series, and the return of the Yates Cup to Toronto after four years, and of the winning of the Intercollegiate Water Polo championship for the first time in history. In Rugby, Varsity was again represented in the Senior O.R.F.U. series, and in Hockey in the Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. The Senior team again won the Hockey championship for the eighth year in succession, while the Alumni team went through the season almost without defeat, winning the Senior O.H.A. championship, and travelling to Vancouver, won the famous Allan Cup and the right to represent Canada at the Olympic games of 1928.

The Boxing and Wrestling team made its annual visits to the United States Military Academy at West Point, and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, and sustained their high reputation at these important centres. The Hockey team played in New York and Boston during the Christmas vacation, meeting Princeton, Harvard and Boston College; while the Basketball, Lacrosse and Swimming teams also journeyed across the border.

Yesterday afternoon a large army of young men invaded the campus, and it looked like the beginning of another war. Speculation was rife, but it is understood that these, numbering about 400, were the young men being shown the Parliament Buildings and University grounds under Premier Ferguson's scheme of bringing the farmer's sons to Toronto to see the big town.

VARSLITY AND M'GILL OPEN HOCKEY SEASON

Whitehead and Carrick to Play To-night on the Regular Line-up at Montreal

ST. GERMAIN M'GILL STAR

Varsity and McGill open the Senior Intercollegiate hockey season when the two teams clash at Montreal to-night. McGill have been a threat in the Intercollegiate for several years, and this season they promise to make a stronger bid than ever to break Varsity's long string of championships. The Red and White made a good start on their holiday trip, winning a majority of their games, and they may be counted on to put up a real battle against Les Pearson's fast going outfit.

The Varsity outfit will be practically at full strength for the contest with Whitehead back in the line-up. The big fellow has not had much practice for several weeks, but even at that he should be a tower of strength to the Blue. "Red" is rated as one of the best defence men in amateur hockey, and if he is able to finish the season the team will be well set for defence players with Kirkpatrick and him on the regular line-up and Carrick available for relief work.

The regular forward line of Richards, Stewart and Harley will start against the Red and White, and as three subs are used in the Intercollegiate, McMullen, Crosby and Carrick will probably be used. Perc. Devins is not feeling well and will probably not perform for a few days. Murray Snyder will guard the nets, and if a relief is necessary Herb. Little will don the pads.

As usual St. Germain is the big threat on the McGill team this year, but he is not the sole star on the line-up, and though the Blue will enter the contest favourites they will not be returned victors without a hard struggle.

FINE TELESCOPE—SECOND LARGEST IN DOMINION

The largest one is at Vancouver, B.C., and is much larger than the Toronto one, being 72 inches across.

In the ordinary type of telescope the converging of the light rays is accomplished by the use of a concave mirror. The objection is that they have to be resilvered frequently. In the new telescope the work is done by a specially prepared lens, referred to above.

The work done here has been in charge of Professor C. A. Chant, head of the Department of Astro-physics, and Professor R. K. Young. The new instrument is intended primarily for the use of students and instruction.

The faculty of the University of McGill have organized themselves into rival polo teams.

LECTURER COMPARES TWO EMPIRES

great men of Britain were "political economists in action." They did not allow war to swamp the prosperity of peace. Wars were carried on by national borrowing. This Rome could not do because of lack of public confidence and the weakness of machinery for loans. Pitt used the income tax also as an engine of war. The Roman rulers were forced to employ the direct method—they forced the transportation services of merchants and did not reward municipal offices. People ran away to avoid forced labour or taxation, and the government was put to the expense of catching the runaways.

Comparing the trade of the empires, Professor Fay said that Rome had two main kinds—first, with India and China; secondly, interprovincial. In the latter, which reached its height in the eighth century A.D., capital was highly mobile and great territorial specialization prevailed. There was also frontier trade—which was midway between the other two. The first was principally a commerce in luxuries, a healthy two-way traffic, in which Alexandria corresponded to the modern Manchester and Birmingham.

"The Roman was, in essence, a continental empire," said the speaker. The Mediterranean was more of a canal than a high sea like ours to-day. They had no professional fighting navy, but enlisted their ships from the merchants. From the East India Co., the Hudson Bay Company and the Chartered African Companies the great empires of India, Canada and Africa had sprung. There were no joint stock companies in the Roman Empire—"Roman trade followed the flag instead of taking it with them."

Rome had good waterways and first-class roads; she had an imperial post by the first century A.D.; she had aqueducts and irrigation—but no industrial canals, because she had no coal. In time, cities impoverished by extortion could not keep up their roads to Rome, and periodical famines caused social unrest.

"Commerce and public finance meet in the parlour of the central bank; for example, the Bank of England," continued Professor Fay. But Rome had no central bank. Currency was issued imperially until the empire took galloping consumption, "when the currency galloped with it." There were banks in Egypt and Italy with Rome as a financial centre, and there was a system of money transfers. This was promising, but it did not develop, and in the days of decline wine became a frequent currency. Speaking of agriculture, Professor Fay said that the Roman Empire passed through three stages—first, peasant ownership; secondly, resident landlordship; and thirdly, absentee landlordship. In the first stage the people thought of citizenship rather than profit; in the second, the tenants were partly slaves and the product was specialized; and the third was the stage of decline. The peasants merged down with the slaves, who were rising, and finally great landowners came to be the rule. To-day a system of rural credit helped the settler, and although Rome had this to a certain extent, the more important grouping of farmers for co-operative marketing was then unknown. There was no scientific farming or rotation of crops, but, nevertheless, agriculture did not decline because of exhaustion of the soil, as is popularly supposed, but because of too much virgin land and too little labour. Italy was injured by the competition of new soil. "Why did not Italy adjust herself by changing to manufacturing as did Britain?" asked the speaker. She had industry. Why was there no industrial revolution? The first cause was slavery, in whose barren atmosphere invention of machinery was not stimulated. The second cause was that industrialism must be promoted by merchant capitalists—and Rome spent her capital on war. War only turned Britain to new fields. And the third reason was that, while Imperial Rome mined metals, she had no coal. Coal led to steam engines to many other developments.

There was inequality of wages in Britain in the time of Adam Smith.

People were confined to their birth-places. The legislation that propelled that was well-meaning but mistaken—and it was not quickly abolished. The result was that unemployed young men were tied in the country in the heyday of industrialism. In Rome each person was confined to one place by social conditions, and the result was feudalism. The freedom of capital and the middle class was killed. "Thus the Roman Empire dug its feudal grave."

In the eighteenth century in Britain, continued the speaker, there were poverty and filth in the towns. Much of this was brought by Irish immigrants. Rome would have been disgusted by the condition of the cities, for it had good drainage, well-paved streets, hygienic and spacious markets, etc. These were evidences of a high civic consciousness as well as of engineering skill.

"Rome fell. Must Britain also fall?" said Professor Fay in conclusion. That she need not be evident—only war could ruin her. War is a crime until everything else fails, and then it is a virtue. Rome fell. But before she fell she left us a great literature, a great law and a great lesson.

Because he was driving a car for other than business purposes, Herman K. Mische of the University of Michigan was suspended for the remainder of the school year.

paganda into Canadian universities, and on that account should be stamped out effectively as has been already done at McGill.

"I had heard nothing of this matter until I saw it in the papers," said Mr. W. J. Dunlop, Director of Extension Work and Publicity, when interviewed by "The Varsity" concerning the statement in yesterday morning's "Mail and Empire" regarding the intended action of Premier Ferguson in connection with the Hart House debate on Wednesday evening, Jan. 18th. "I have nothing to say," continued Mr. Dunlop, "on this particular incident, and probably it is not necessary for me to say that I have no sympathy whatever with Communism in any shape or form. The sooner Canada is rid of this evil, the better for the Dominion."

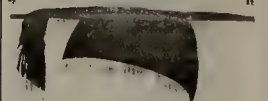

"I have never met anyone in any way connected with the University who expressed himself in any way in favour of Communism."

"The Department of University Extension provides classes for working men and women in order to provide them with facilities for cultural education, and the University as a whole recognizes; I am sure, its duty to working men and women of every station. While we do this work, and are anxious to promote it, we want to have nothing whatever to do with Communism or Communists."

It is estimated that students at the University of Pennsylvania consume about 50,000,000 cigarettes a year.

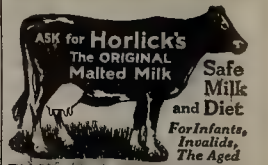

Sophomore women at Northwestern will wear scarfs as well as sophomore men. The scarf is a class emblem.

OFFICIAL NOON-HOUR NOT WITHIN REALM OF CENTRAL OFFICE

Heads of Various Departments Arrange Lunch-hour for Their Own Departments

PRESCRIBED HOURS IN ARTS

Cases Rare Where Students Compelled to Attend Laboratories During Noon-hour

An editorial which appeared in the columns of "The Varsity" a few days ago deploring the defects of the present system of lunch-hour in effect at the University of Toronto, has been causing considerable discussion on the part of the student body. The editorial, entitled, "In Due Season We Shall Eat," pointed out that, although the official noon-hour was, to the knowledge of the writer, from one to two o'clock, yet in some faculties this official hour seemed to be ignored and another substituted in its place. It further went on to state that "for many undergraduates the lunch-hour is the only time possible for committee meetings and other such engagements which seem indispensable to the active student. For many others, especially those whose homes are miles from the University, even a one o'clock lunch comes five long hours after breakfast."

Mr. A. B. Fennell, M.C., M.A., Assistant Registrar of the University, when questioned by "The Varsity" as to his opinion regarding the practicability and the possibility of a general lunch-hour in effect throughout the University, stated that it was not within the realm of central authority to fix the hours for lunch. The heads of the various departments arranged the time-tables in their respective departments.

"In the Arts colleges," he stated, "there is an official noon-hour, prescribed in the calendar for the Faculty of Arts." And in the science faculties and laboratories, it was only in cases of extreme necessity, he imagined, cases where the hours could not be worked in otherwise—that students were compelled to attend laboratories during the noon-hour.

Faculty Teas Popular Many Students Present

The increasing popularity of the faculty teas was very evident yesterday when students from practically every faculty and college in the University called at the Graduates' Room of the Library to meet members of the staff and their wives.

Mrs. Thure Hedman and Dr. Edith Gordon received the guests, while Mrs. J. E. Dale and Mrs. E. S. Moore poured tea. Assisting in serving were Miss Valentine, Miss Waddell, Mrs. Dymond and Mrs. Buchanan.

To-day's question—"Do you approve of free speech in a University?"

R. S. Jaques, IV Trinity: Yes, I do. A University is a place where all the facts should be presented.

Eddie Doyle, I S.P.S.: Yes. Everyone ought to have a chance to say what he thinks.

Miss E. M. S. and Miss K. T., III Household Science: Yes, I believe in the right of free speech. A University audience should have a mind of its own and should never be unduly influenced.

Miss M. E. F. and Miss S. A. B., Dental Nursing: Yes, I do. Everybody likes to express his own opinion, and it is only fair that they should have the chance.

Miss E. M. Stanley, IV U.C.: Sure! It makes life interesting. The J. M. Jamieson, I M. and P., U.C.: Yes. It is a person's privilege. The effects won't amount to much.

I. Warren, I S.M.C.: Yes. University students are no longer children.

MALES MORE SUBJECT TO THE COMMON COLD

Claim Made That Women
Dress More Healthily
Than Men

OPINIONS ARE VARIOUS

The announcement that the "Chemical Foundation of New York had given $195,000 to Johns Hopkins University for the purpose of carrying on research work for cure and prevention of the common cold," has aroused great interest. The news item which contained this information also intimated that women are much more subject to colds than men. This was disputed by some members of the medical faculty who thought that there was no particular difference in susceptibility, while one clinician maintains that in his experience the reverse is true. Women, he maintains, are much more sensibly dressed. When on the street they are usually attired in a fur coat or at least some coat which suits the weather, and when indoors this is removed, and they are wearing clothes light enough to prevent overheating and thus do they avoid chills.

On the other hand, the soft boiled sex don hard boiled shirts before going out of nights, as well as heavy underwear, in some cases even red flannel, heavy trousers, coat and vest, and then proceed to do a brisk three hours of gym work in an overheated room, while their lightly clad companions drift about in garments more suited for the occasion and maintain an equal physical condition throughout the evening.

Perhaps the day will come when men will discard their heavier garments in favour of some lighter and more exotic material which will give them scope for the most energetic action without undue raising of the bodily temperature. After all, the Romans, who were known as a practical people, were also practical in dress. All they had to do was to get up in the morning, take the sheet off the bed, rap it around them, and they were ready for a day's work. That time may yet come, and in winter the modern student can always switch to an eiderdown.

Varsity Draws First Blood, But Fails To Tally During Rest of Game

PLAY BY PLAY ACCOUNT

Stewart Stands Out For Varsity
St. Germain in Limelight
For The Victors

Special to The Varsity
By PHIL MATTHAMS
Sports Editor, McGill Daily

Montreal, Que., Jan. 12.—It was not what one would call good hockey which was played in the initial matches of the Intercollegiate series at the Forum to-night. The game seemed scrappy to the last period when the play livened up and Varsity showed what was really their stride. After scoring the first goal, they could not seem to get going, and in the end they wilted, so that McGill came out victors by the long end of a four to one score.

About three thousand saw the blue and red teams start out on their first clash of the season. Lovering, who was not expected to play, was out for the start. Some say that he had been specially asked. One never knows. While Varsity had a well combined team, McGill relied on one or two stars, which in the end seemed to be the thing that counted. Subs were in frequent use, and penalties were the order of the day.

With such a get-away, things looked brighter for McGill than hoped. Powers had the most shots to save, but he showed himself with a habit of being inclined to hang on to the puck too long at his saves.

There was but one man who could be said to be the outstanding man for Varsity, and that was Stewart, who, together with his wings, put up a class of passing that McGill could not show. Snyder cannot be blamed for the goals that went through, for they were to all intents and purposes unstoppable. St. Germain came out into the limelight both as a breaker of attacks and man to lead the forwards.

The crowd went away in an uproarious state.

Referee Billy Bell called the teams together to the tune of the Big Radio Noise. Right away Varsity try a shot in three seconds with no result. Powers came out to save when Kirkpatrick was all alone.

Harley makes a good skate through, but his speed carried him past a real shooting position. McTeer makes two fast skates up the ice, but on a run down by Carrick the puck was passed to Richards, who netted with (Continued on page 3)

FORESTERS' CLUB HEARS ABOUT POWER IN CANADA

Prof. R. W. Angus Discusses Sources of Canadian Power

"That the amount of power per capita developed in any country is a very good index of its prosperity," was a statement made by Professor R. W. Angus to the Foresters' Club at Hart House last night. The Professor spoke on Hydro-Electric Power Development in Canada. There were three main sources of power—wind, water and fuel.

The speaker outlined the peculiar characteristics of each. He spoke of the rapid development in hydraulic and electric machinery in the past twenty years. Installation problems were especially complex. The amount of available water and the force of ice that might be encountered have to be taken into consideration.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP IS NOT NECESSARILY FOR STAR ATHLETES

Chairman of Selection Committee for Ontario Discusses Basis of Award

POPULAR OVEREMPHASIS

Active Participation in Sports
Just One of Qualities Involved in Award

That too much emphasis is laid by the public upon the athletic side among the qualities required for Rhodes scholars, is the opinion of D. R. Mitchener, chairman of the selection committee for Ontario. A certain amount of comment has arisen, since the last selection was made, on the ground that athletic ability was not sufficiently stressed.

The qualities required of candidates for the Rhodes scholarship are force of character, leadership ability and devotion to duty, high intellectual and scholastic attainment, and active participation in sports. In an interview with a down-town newspaper, the chairman stated that the public was inclined to place too much emphasis on the athletic side of the scholarship, and this, he believed, had not been the intention of the founder. He was of the opinion that on the whole Rhodes men had conducted themselves well in athletics, and in support of this he instanced the number of scholars to be found on Oxford university teams. Mr. Mitchener further stated that this was in the face of the handicap imposed upon Canadian students, in that they were not accustomed to English games, since cricket, rowing and rugby were the major sports.

"Rhodes scholars, however, are not expected to be outstanding athletes," Mr. Mitchener stated. "This is made quite clear by reference to the qualities mentioned by Mr. Rhodes in his will, and it is by these qualities that the committee is guided in making its selection. They are not listed in any order of importance, but are to be taken as on a par with each other."

OVER SEVEN HUNDRED MEN TOOK PHYSICAL TRAINING

Many Learn to Swim, and Many Qualify for Life
Saving Award

Last year seven hundred students, and more, perspired through Physical Training in a grand total of five hundred and two classes.

307 students were enrolled in the Officers' Training Corps, and of these 240 first and second year men qualified for their Physical Training in this important branch of university education.

In co-operation with the Medical Director, Dr. Porter, Mr. Barton conducted special Corrective Classes for those men who were unable to take the regular work. 432 classes were held for 170 men, the majority of whom showed marked improvement as the year progressed.

The Swimming and Life Saving Classes, together with instruction in "First Aid to the Drowning," were conducted successfully under Mr. Winterburn, and every encouragement was given to new students to learn to swim. Of the latter 222 classes were held, and 124 men taught to swim, while out of a total of 204 men 189 won the Royal Life Saving Award. As a result of Mr. Winterburn's efficient and systematic training, the University of Toronto ranks among the first in the Royal Life Saving Society reports.

Premier Has No Intention Of Intervening in Debate

VENTILATION IN CLASSES DECLARED UNSATISFACTORY

Hart House and Library Properly Ventilated But
Lecture Rooms Not So

That the mental efficiency and health of students at the University of Toronto suffers from lack of proper ventilation in lecture rooms, was the opinion expressed by Professor J. J. R. McLeod, associate dean of the Faculty of Medicine and professor of Physiology, to the St. Michael's College arbitration commission at the City Hall. It was brought out that the matter had been taken up with the board of governors, but that the necessary appropriations could not be made at present.

Hart House and the University Library were properly ventilated, Professor McLeod told N. W. Rowell, K.C., but the lecture rooms were unhealthy. The open window was sometimes a danger if rooms were hot or persons were in the draught. He thought the ventilating system in classrooms was affecting the health and efficiency of students. Professor McLeod described a system which he believed was ideal.

M'GILL ENROLLMENT CREATES A RECORD

Registration Figures at Sister
University Show Increase Over Previous Years

MANY WISH TO ENTER

The number of students registered in McGill University, including the faculties and schools at Macdonald, exceeds that of any previous year. Never before in the history of McGill University has there been as great a number of students attending lectures. The total enrolment of regular students at McGill and Macdonald for the academic year 1927 and 1928 reaches 2,917, according to statistics available. This is 151 students in excess of the total figure given out at the beginning of the academic term last fall.

The differences between the present figures and those of last fall is explained by the fact that when the original figures were given out the figures for the number of students pursuing the diploma course in the McGill faculty of agriculture and the registration in the McGill Graduate School were not complete.

Registration in these two courses reaches 256. Enrollment figures in the various faculties now are: Arts 1,104; Commerce 215; Law 65; Dentistry 36; Medicine 460; Applied Science 311; Graduate Nurses 27; Physical Education 49; Social Workers 34; Faculty of Music 188; Pharmacy 38; Library School 28; Graduate School 179; Faculty of Agriculture 136; and Household Science 75.

The total figure reaches 2,945, but 28 students are registered in more than one faculty and they bring the figure down to 2,917.

These figures are no indication of the number of students who want to get into McGill, for due to the system of picking and choosing, many students who have passed the examinations are turned away. As an example, the Faculty of Medicine can be taken. In this faculty alone out of 600 who applied for entrance to the first year 480 were turned away.

Discusses Situation In Interview

JUST RETURNED

Doubts Wisdom of Debate

With reference to reports appearing in a certain morning newspaper regarding Premier Ferguson's attitude towards the proposed Hart House debate, the following exclusive statement was issued by the Premier to "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon:

"I had just returned to Toronto when the newspapers sought an expression of opinion from me with regard to the proposed debate. I refused to express an opinion, desiring first to make some enquiries because of disquieting statements which had reached me.

"Later in the night, when at home, a certain newspaper reporter asked for my personal opinion on the matter. I prefaced my remarks with the statement, 'This is not for publication.' When I saw what had been published the following day, and I asked him about it, he stated that it was not he who had published it, but he had mentioned it to a friend in the office, and he feared that it was the friend who had allowed it to go into print.

"In any case, what I said was simply that I was not in sympathy with a debate of that nature taking place in our premier educational institution, when our Department of Education was doing its utmost to keep the subject of communism out of the public schools. But even if I had the power to stop the debate, I would not consider it policy to do so now, for that would not improve matters."

WHAT IS THE POSITION OF THE FOREIGN STUDENT?

One of the questions which came up for attention at the recent Student Volunteer Convention in Detroit was the attitude of American students to the foreign students on the campus, and, we are informed, the frank discussion which followed disclosed a far from satisfactory state of affairs. Statements were made that the foreign student was "tolerated," or "patronized," but seldom taken into the circle or fellowship of the various groups and bodies on the campus, or, to quote one of the delegates, "In spite of our much talked of brotherhood of man and equality of all races, we make the foreigner feel that whilst we are delighted to educate him we do not wish to know him beyond the bounds of the campus." It is true that we have no large body of foreign students in the University of Toronto, so that we have no problem (as it is described in the United States) to face here, but we have some foreign students, and it would be well for us to ascertain what the position is in our University.

We are aware that there are those who would rather "leave things alone"; there are others who would see a danger in opening up such a question; whilst others might declare that we are creating something that does not yet exist. If all is well on our campus in regard to this matter, we would be delighted, but we should wish to be quite sure of this; on the other hand, if all is not as it should be, then the sooner it is remedied, or at least remedial steps are taken, the better for all concerned.

Candidly, we are a little uncertain as to what the situation actually is like in Toronto. Last academic year we bade good-bye to a very splendid young Chinese graduate of this University who had been in our midst for over four years. We asked him what impressions he was taking back to China with him in so far as University associations were concerned. He replied, "I am taking away nothing but the best of memories. You fellows have been very kind to me, and, indeed, all Toronto has been. But from my own knowledge I fear I am an exception to the general rule." On pressing the subject further we were told that remarkably few Toronto homes were open to Chinese students, that fraternities did not want them, and University women seemed afraid to speak to them. Last month a young Hungarian left us, after a few months in our midst. On leaving he made the statement that although he was amongst us he was never made to feel that he was one of us. It is possible that these are isolated cases, and it may be that the fault lies with the men in question. We hope so, but we would like to be sure of it.

We are aware of the existence in our University of a club whose special business it is to look into just such matters as we are referring to,—but we hear so little of this club and its activities. We can believe that it is accomplishing some good, but we would like to hear from it sometimes; and we would like to know particularly that in association with the Students' Administrative Council it is taking up this matter with a view to establishing the very best relationship possible between all students on our University campus, regardless of race or colour.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

No exception can be taken to the attitude of Premier Ferguson toward the forthcoming Hart House debate, as disclosed in an interview with "The Varsity" yesterday. It is not to be expected that a leader of the government of this province could well give expression to any other views than therein expressed; but it is a matter of congratulation that the Premier has not been stampeded into hasty and, perhaps, ill advised action by a boisterous press.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Quartet

The fourth concert of the Hart House series was given last evening by the Hart House String Quartet. Now that we have been privileged to hear the Flonzaley and Persinger Quartets, we may say that the local artists lose nothing in comparison with the latter, if they lack that mellowness born of long association and co-operation that gives such artistry to the Flonzaley.

Last evening's performance was chosen entirely from the works of modern composers, Sir Edward Elgar, John Beach and Maurice Ravel, representatives of the English, American and French schools. The word "modern" unfortunately suggests the sound, fury and lack of form in a quartet that existed in Hansen's composition played by the Persinger, but the numbers chosen last evening were in no way strenuously modern, and even lacked vitality en masse.

Elgar's Quartet in E Minor, Op. 83, was much more interesting in its first movement than in the two following. It began softly, the passion deepened, and then came a passage of enigmatic dissonance, followed by one of extraordinary melodic beauty. Toward the close there was a reiteration of the theme in descending fourths. In this movement the playing of M. de Kresz, First Violin, was superb. The second movement, place-vole introduced the dance with the first violin pizzicato, but there was about the whole quartet a rashly deliberate quality that seemed to rob it of any vital inspirational merit. In the third movement allegro molto, a more spirited beginning was made, and for a time the classic restraint was abandoned—but only for a time. The end was of conventional and anticipated force.

John Beach's "Poème" possessed the inspirational motivation, and the deeper content note too appeared in the first number. It was a purely elegiac composition of poignant simplicity, begun with a viola recitative, repeated, recurring and dominating the entire elegy. The "Poème" lacked any particular distinguishing characteristic, but possessed a pure lyric beauty beyond analysis.

Maurice Ravel's "Quartet in F" did not differ especially in form from the classic quartets of Mozart, but its harmonies were distinctly modern. In the second movement, assez vite, all strings were played pizzicato, and a constant tremolo was weirdly effective. The third movement was not unlike Beach's "Poème," in its sombre mournful tone, and also resembled the matchless third movement of the Debussy Quartet played by the Persinger. The last movement of Ravel's composition was rather disappointing; he reached no heights, but after a fervid beginning, subsided and then provided a conventional dramatic finale.

SOUTH OF BLOOR

Chapter V—Bound to Rise

One morning Dick Dare arose, and something very much like his conscience told him that he should start to reform. He felt that he could not fly very high if he adhered so strongly to the Left Wing and the Radicals and the Free thinkers. "When you come to consider the matter carefully, no one ever knew a Communist or an honest Ishmaelite who ever had a chaffeur, unless it was on a big black limousine with bars on the windows, and footmen riding inside." "I," said Dick, "have been a Radical too long. I have been honest too long. I have trusted people too long. I have believed in the inherent goodness and perfectibility of man for too long—now I shall become slowly but surely a pillar of the community, and sixty years from now I will have a full-column obituary in the 'morgue' of each prominent daily."

Dick had not the least idea where to begin, but he thought that College possessed the true dignity that he desired. He used four initial letters on his name, and was riotously welcomed. He joined all possible Debating Unions, all carefully-constructed societies, and MacD—C Club. He was well on the road to recovery, when it was announced that Communists would debate with him in the forthcoming orgy of chin-wagging, so he politely resigned and said measuredly to Diogenes: "My dear chap, we had things like the Taddle in the 80's for such fellows."

Dick was turning slowly. He was cultivating the broad "a" and the muted "r." Prominent men spoke to him every month, and one day he chanced to meet Amaryllis and the big Fraternity President on the campus.

"Oh, Mr. Dare!" said Amaryllis. "How are you, Mr. Dare?" said Monty respectfully.

That the government must be maintained we hold, but that the present agitation is without due basis we believe. There is not, nor will there be, any attempt to establish communism within our walls, but rather, as all those who appreciate the Hart House debating system will understand, is an attempt to be made to discuss a big problem in a fair and unbiased manner.

It is reasonable to suppose that the Premier has been bombarded from all parts of the province by people who were inclined to take too seriously that which was purely copie to certain sections of the city press. But that actual concern has been aroused we doubt, being more inclined to believe that such people are unfamiliar with the conditions, or that they are too bigoted to recognize the broad and even outlook of the student of to-day.

There is no necessity for excitement about this debate. Every student on the campus knows that. Nor has the subject any special significance, nor will its result be any more lasting or impressive than the innumerable debates that have gone before when liquor, the political parties, or what not have been mediums of discussion.

McGILL DEFEATS VARSITY 4-1 IN INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Well, there it is—McGill 4, Varsity 1. Figure it out for yourself.

Their victory over the fast-going Varsity crew certainly stamps McGill as a team to be watched not only in the Interfaculty but in the Allan Cup play-offs as well.

Earlier in the week the Red and White defeated the Victorias of Montreal in a league fixture, and are accorded quite a chance to cop the O.A.H.A. title.

Powers in the McGill net turned in a whale of a game. He had 31 shots to handle, to 29 drives at Murray Snyder. It will be seen that these shots add up to 60, which makes a shot on goal for every minute of play.

Wes Richards got Varsity's only goal in the first period. The ever-green St. Germain tallied two for the Red and White and Robertson and Doherty added one each.

The Varsity-Milton Intermediate O.H.A. game scheduled for this evening in Milton has been postponed for lack of ice. An effort was made to have the game played at the Varsity Arena, but the ice could not be secured, and a date will be arranged later. The next Intermediate game is scheduled for Tuesday of next week in Newmarket.

The Varsity Junior hockeyists clash with Marlboros, leaders of the Big Four group, at the Arena to-night. The boys in blue have an excellent chance of improving their standing if they can come through with a win, and there is no reason why they cannot. Varsity and Parkdale are tied for second place, with the Dukes away out in the lead. As the first two teams play off for the title at the end of the season, Varsity has a splendid chance yet if they can beat out Parkdale for second place.

O.H.A. DOUBLE-HEADER AT ARENA TONIGHT

Varsity Tackles Marlboros in Effort to Replace Group Leaders

WIN IS IMPERATIVE

Another one of those good Junior O.H.A. double-headers that the fans have been talking about is on the sheet for to-night's entertainment at the Mutual Street Arena. It is once again Varsity's chance to try and knock the group leading Marlboros off the top perch. Varsity, although handicapped by injuries, is sure to give the famed "marbles" a hard scrap, as those fortunate enough to have witnessed the S.P.A. playdowns will be ready to testify. The Juniors that sport the colours of this institution gave the leaders one of the biggest scares of the season. The Blues are yet to take the McPhersons into camp, and it will almost be "do or die" to-night, as the Frank Sullivan squad's hold on second place and a place in the play-offs depends upon their winning to-night's fixture.

If the Blue and White sextet suffers a loss it will be tough going getting into the playdowns. So the outlook is a strong bid for a win.

"Slang is indispensable," Dr. Paul M. Paine, of the Syracuse Public Library, told journalism students of Syracuse University. "I wish I were better acquainted with it," he added. His only stipulation was to "know when slang is being used; know the accepted word that might fill the place and then decide which is most effective, the correct word or the colloquialism."

Richard Rowden, of Columbia University, claims to have the most novel way of earning one's way through college. Rowden is the official worm supplier of the zoology department, and sells the students angle worms at 20 cents a dozen.

SR. U.C. BEATS TRINITY IN BASKETBALL FIXTURE

First Game of Group Shows Some Rugged Play; Score 23-10

In an Interfaculty basketball game in the upper gym yesterday afternoon Sr. U.C. easily defeated Trinity in the first game of their group by a 23-10 score.

Bert Dell and Bill Corbett, each with ten points to his credit, starred for the winners, while Barrett was the best man for the losers.

Schofield and Kopman, playing defence for U.C., held the opposing forwards well away from the basket, forcing them to shoot mainly long shots which were very ineffective. The U.C. team, on the other hand, worked the ball under the basket before shooting.

There was quite a bit of roughing it up, and the teams did not show the polished playing that will likely come later in the season.

The teams:

Sr. U.C.: Dell, right forward; Corbett, left forward; Maconashie centre; Schofield, right guard; Kopman, left guard; subs, Haight, Thomas, Wishart and Henderson.

Trinity: Barrett, right forward; Stubbings, left forward; Berwick, centre; Evans, right guard; Jeffrey, left guard; subs, Weir, Roney, Grey, Brownlee.

Bibles, written in the following languages: Spanish, French, Latin, German, modern Greek and Hebrew, are being made available to the students at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla., through the modern language department.

To day there is a vacancy in the R. O.T.C. stable at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla. Jug, the unit's faithful mule and long a traditional figure about the Sooner campus, has been sold at auction.

The new humorous magazine, "The Webfoot," at the University of Oregon, will be discontinued because of insufficient finances.

INTERMEDIATE TEAM IN INTERCOLLEGIATE

Squad in O.H.A. Series Admitted to Intercollegiate Play-offs

SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

Varsity has been admitted to the Intermediate section of the Intercollegiate hockey series, the western group of which is composed of Osgoode, Western, O.A.C., McMaster and Varsity. The local team will not compete in the regular series, but have been given a bye into the play-offs. The same team that represents Varsity in the Intermediate O.H.A. series will compete in the Intercollegiate series.

It was thought advisable to enter two Intermediate teams, particularly as the O.H.A. series is finished before the Intercollegiate play-offs start.

The schedule is as follows:

Jan. 20—Osgoode at Western, 4 p.m.
23—McMaster at O.A.C., 8 p.m.
26—O.A.C. at Osgoode, 4 p.m.
31—Western at McMaster, 4 p.m.
Feb. 6—McMaster at Osgoode, 4 p.m.
10—O.A.C. at Western, 8 p.m.
16—O.A.C. at McMaster, 4 p.m.
17—Western at Osgoode, 4 p.m.
22—Osgoode at McMaster, 4 p.m.
23—Western at O.A.C., 8 p.m.
28—McMaster at Western, 4 p.m.
28—Osgoode at O.A.C., 8 p.m.

"Aren't I"

Apparently our fair University can still be considered as the home of "English as she spoke" meaning that we uphold the purest forms of the mother tongue. A bombshell was dropped in our midst quite recently by hearing of the peculiar use of a certain phrase, attributed to a professor in a university in the great republic to the south of us.

The professor in question is Mr. Samuel Moore, and the phrase is the insignificant "aren't I." Professor Moore quite properly refuses to use "ain't" and considers "am I not" too cumbersome ergo; he goes around saying "aren't I."

The professors when interviewed by "The Varsity" were unanimous in condemning "aren't I." Rev. Father McCormick, Superior of St. Michael's, considered it indefensible. However, even learned men have been known to make slips, he remarked, as when a school inspector used "he don't" several times in succession. If brevity was sought, said Father McCormick, why not "amn't I"?

Even the students refused to have the King's English maltreated. One undergraduate said he wouldn't use "ain't" himself and thought it quite easy to say "am I not."

Another unbecomingly growled that it was a "damn foolish thing" to argue about anyway. But the next student interviewed warmed the cockles of our heart. He said that the American professor's English must be becoming faulty, that it was a step in the wrong direction, and inexcusable even in an American's attempt to be terse.

INTERCOLLEGIATES LOSE TO RED AND WHITE TEAM

Powers on the ice. Doherty receives a pass from St. Germain, but Snyder saves well. McGill is sadly needing McMahon on the defence. St. Germain is shifted to the wing with Doherty in the centre. The puck came right across Varsity goal with Snyder out, but there was no one there to take the pass. Kirkpatrick, picking up a bad McGill pass, turned it to Crosby, who failed to score. Paul Smith is working well on the McGill defence. Tumbles are becoming a frequent thing to the amusement of the crowd. St. Germain takes a good pass and skates up, but the score is not altered. Smith comes right through from defence and with good skating goes up the ice but shoots wide. McGill has a bit the better of the game at this period of play. Stewart, Richards and Harley go down the ice in a splendid manner and a goal seems certain. Powers saves well, but holds the puck too long. Kirkpatrick is off for tripping. McGill combine well and roar off down the ice, with the result that St. Germain scores. From the face-off McGill gets the puck again, and after two good sweeps down the ice Doherty puts in the second for McGill. A minute to go and the crowd is calling for more goals. Period over. McGill 2, Varsity 1.

SECOND PERIOD

McGill seems to be the more forceful team and have some good skating flashes. St. Germain robs his man and goes away through three of the defence men, but his shot is hampered and stopped by Snyder, who is luckywise on the ice. Snyder was lucky to save. Stewart makes an individual effort but gets robbed. McTeer gets a penalty for tripping Stewart, who was in a dangerous position. St. Germain was through again but could not score. Powers in saving a good shot from Stewart trips up and scatters the players. St. Germain goes off a little later for rather rough work. McGill covers up well and both teams resort to longer shots. Smith combines with St. Germain, but after some fast work they are called offside. Carrick is off for illegal body checking against McGerrigle. Harley went through the McGill defence like a streak of lightning, but his shot was wide. Smith is off on the penalty bench for heavy work. Ralph St. Germain is away like a whirlwind, and, after eluding two men, goes through the legs of a defence man with an unstoppable shot. Powers is showing up well in goal for McGill.

During this period it has been most of the way with McGill pressing. The Blue forwards are working well, but McGill have found a good man on defence in McTeer, but he is tiring.

THIRD PERIOD

Varsity started fast with a fighting spirit. Their rushes were telling on the McGill defence. Smith went off for a penalty with a force. A flying stick of McMullen catches Doherty over the right eye. The gash is rather a nasty one and he goes off. McTeer stops a rush by Richards and is sent off for a penalty. The crowd does not receive the decision very well. After a mix-up near the McGill goal Lovering is sent off, but, after some demonstration, Lovering is called back again on the ice. Varsity are all out for a goal and are putting their best into the play. McGill is playing scrappy hockey to keep them out. Richards is out with a penalty. McGill rushes up but are wild in their shooting. Varsity are kept on the defensive and are doing the job well. Finally Paul Smith skates away with a dash and swings behind the goal, where he passes to Robertson, who nets the puck from a scramble. The game is speeding up considerably. St. Germain skates through to score, but the shot is called offside. There is certainly some speed, and more than that, Harley gets a penalty for boring into Smith when he has not the puck. Crosby shoots at goal, and Powers saves, but after the referee has called for holding too long, the puck is nowhere to be found. Powers begins to demonstrate that he has nothing up his sleeve. Eventually the puck comes out of his glove. Play is getting forced to the McGill end, and there is a big melee in front of goal, with Powers doing a swan dive to clear. For another clearance he puts the puck well up in the crowd. There are now two minutes to go and both teams are skating fast to score. St. Germain has been waiting for an opportunity, and he gets it all alone, but his shooting is wild. McGill goal is now surrounded by all the Varsity players, who are skating in and out. Shots are peppering in on Powers, and Varsity deserve to score. Final whistle—McGill 4, Varsity 1.

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Kirkpatrick, Carrick; centre, Stewart; wings, Richards, Harley; subs, Devins, McMullen, Crosby.
McGill: Goal, Powers; defence, McTeer, Smith; centre, St. Germain; wings, Doherty, Lovering; subs, McGerrigle, Robertson, Farquharson, Kritzwiser, White.

CORRESPONDENCE

speak, and to cast a reflection charged with insult on our present staff of lecturers and professors. More than that it disparages in the eyes of the student body and the public at large a fundamental conception of the University system. Granted there are defective lectures. Suppose we attend a few more of these and make them better, instead of giving a certain down-town evening paper more material to misuse. Are a few lectures of mediocre value any reason for laying open to insult a long-cherished institution and many brilliant men?

I ask should such a debate be worthy of student support? Should it not be stopped for the honour of the University of Toronto? The authorities are in an embarrassing position. The cudgels are in the hands of the student body. What about it?

Yours for decency,

IVth Year Student.

The original manuscript of "Mary and Her Little Lamb" has been presented to the University of Washington library by W. K. Bixby. It is signed by Mary E. Tyler and dated November 22, 1883. She is supposed to be the Mary of the rhyme and received the poem from the author. For years the authorship of the verses has been a subject of controversy and it is thought that Mrs. Tyler copied the manuscript donated by Mr. Bixby from her first draft in order to verify her statement.

Fearsome Friday is Here Again
Flutters Flouted By Gay Students

Like annual examinations, eclipses of the sun, faculty teas, and winter, Friday the thirteenth is with us again. To-day the superstitious will rise from a night of fitful slumber to a day of uneasy wakefulness. They will be as men walking in the shadow of death, expecting every minute that some calamity will transpire, or ensue, or evolve out of nothing. Fearful of every look and every move, they are in for an unpleasant twenty-four hours. Nevertheless, we ourselves do not expect to be unduly weighed down or oppressed to-morrow. Dull care cannot settle on the brow of the student body as a whole; nor are the professors likely to be worried by the sinister (to some) coincidence of day of week and day of month.

The uninitiated may ask whether the University is to assume a hushed and silent attitude to-day; whether an atmosphere of stillness and quiet will permeate and pervade the air. No, we promptly reply, not even for Friday the thirteenth, will we cast off the mask of carefree revelry and whole-hearted entertainment. The strains of music will inspire the budding journalists and their more mature contemporaries on "The Varsity" to trip the light fantastic at the Women's Union, while at Victoria College also, mirth and gaiety will overflow in terpsichorean activity. We could go on to talk of many things (no, we are not quoting from Lewis Carroll), but we feel that the sceptics (there are always some) who were forecasting gloomy predictions are now convinced that there will be no "early closing" signs hung out around the University to-day. We feel optimistic enough to amend Tennyson's well-known lines from "The Brook" to read as follows:

"Friday the 13th may come and
Friday the 13th may go
But Varsity activities go on for ever."

Winter Still Lingers in Background
California Climate Coming to Canada?

"If Winter comes"—but winter shows no inclination to come. We have whistled, and coaxed, and threatened, and he remains elusive. Hence, of necessity, it appears that we shall have to do without him, or else to manufacture his effigy. And why not? There is ice on the rinks for sport; why should ice on sidewalks not also be contrived, for the sake of those innumerable deeds of gallantry annually executed for the damsel in distress? And what of the ash problem? What will be done with all the unnecessary ashes?

Perhaps, however, we might do without—just out of spite—to show Winter he is not such a necessary personage as he probably thinks. We might innovate hockey played on roller skates. Is it easier to trip a man upon eight wheels, or two blades? And the next tobogganing party could be on tea trays down the Museum steps.

But what will happen if the weather continues, if it gets warmer, and warmer, and warmer, until Ontario becomes a California? Would we work from six in the morning until twelve, then sleep, and rise, say, at four, to continue our labours? How then would the studious manage his twelve hours a day, and what difference would it make in bed-time laws of the land? It might make no difference at all, since the greatest part of the intelligencia spend part, at any rate, in the grasp of at least a semi-somnolence.

And here is a question for Diogenes: If Winter refuses to come, how will Spring be able to follow? It is no longer a case of Bo-peep's sheep losing their tails, but of the tails losing the sheep.

Letter From Parks Commissioner Some Years Back on Same Topic

PARK IS LEASED

It may be of interest to University students, especially those who come south from Bloor Street through Queen's Park, and those at Victoria College, to know that the threatened action with regard to short cuts through the park is no new thing. In November, 1924, a letter was written to Sir Robert Falconer by C. E. Chambers, Commissioner of Parks for the city of Toronto. The letter, which was published at the time in "The Varsity," was in part as follows:

"I beg to call your attention to the fact that, owing to the practice of persons making cross paths through the north section of Queen's Park, the lawns there are being disfigured and greatly damaged, and we find upon investigation of the matter that students attending the University of Toronto are largely responsible for his condition. We are not desirous of adopting too drastic measures in dealing with this difficulty, but I fear that we shall be obliged to resort to police court proceedings unless this practice be discontinued, and I would, therefore, be very glad if the students might be notified through you that the practice of making these cross-paths must cease."

No action has as yet been taken along the lines indicated but a new warning was issued this fall, reiterating the request that regulations be complied with. While the authorities seem unwilling to take forcible steps to make the wandering student see the error of his ways they are keeping a watchful eye on the proceedings.

For the benefit of those who feel that the irregularity can be got away with, if students continue as they have done in the past, it might be pointed out that Queen's Park is leased for nine hundred and ninety-nine years. Perhaps the following instructions from an erstwhile champus might be of value to students who are expecting authorities to "put their feet down": "All students who are in the habit of crossing Queen's Park on their way to work are hereby notified that when crossing the above park the gait must be a gentle stroll."

Jean St. German and Douglas A. Barlow have been chosen as the 1928 Rhodes scholars from the province of Quebec. Two scholarships are offered each year, one to an English student and one to a French student.

Twenty-nine members of the University of Missouri football squad received letters at the annual banquet.

Prof. Josef Washington Hall, University lecturer and author of books on the Orient, will conduct a student tour through Asia this summer. The tour will be similar to student tours of Europe.

SIR BERTRAM WINDLE DELIVERS SECOND LECTURE OF SERIES

States Ethnological History of Arabia is of Primary Importance

ONE-THIRD IS DESERT

Military, Fatalistic Religion of Mohammed is the Root of Recklessness

"The ethnological history of Arabia is second in importance to that of no other country in the world," stated Sir Bertram Windle in the second lecture in the series on "The Ethnological Background of Asia," on Friday. One-third of the country is desert, and most of this is uninhabitable; this is the Arabia upon which the "Revolt in the Desert" is based.

The early people include both paleolithic and meolithic races, but little is known of these. In the southern grasslands were the Semites, white people of an early date, the true Arabs. Hence spread the Semitic waves, going along the north coast of Africa, across to Spain, and on to France, where they were stopped in 732 B.C. They carried with them the philosophy which spread throughout these areas.

Mohammed was born in Mecca, and later returned to it, as sovereign of Arabia. He was forced to flee in 622, the "year of the flight," and from this date his followers reckon their time. The religion which he set up is essentially military and fatalistic, and the fatalism which teaches that "the love of every man's death is written on his forehead" inspired recklessness on the military sphere which necessitated the spread of Islam by the sword. Their paradise is only for men, and consists of eating and drinking eternally without experiencing any bad effects from the practice.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Tea as Afternoon Interlude

Do you approve of afternoon teas?

Mr. K. C. E., IV Gk. and Hebrew: Yes, particularly where they are discussion groups. Chinamen never sit down to discuss difficult questions without first providing themselves with a liberal supply of tea. They have grasped the fact that the art of living is in the accomplishment of great things without taking oneself or one's job too seriously.

Mr. M. J. P., 1st Yr. Arts: The custom certainly has survived the dark ages, but I'm not impressed with it myself.

Miss E. C. N., IV Yr. Moderns: Oh, yes, they are a relief after hard work, although sometimes a pot of tea can conceit some peculiar stories.

Miss L. P., II Yr. Arts: Yes, I'm always open to an invitation. I think afternoon teas are very interesting.

Miss V. M., IV Yr. Household Economics: I think that for the purpose of recreation they are very valuable, especially around exam. time, when one is working hard.

Mr. L. T. W., 1st Yr. Forestry: It all depends on where they are held. I'm very fond of tea dances. They are great things to get people together.

Miss C. D. K., Public Health Nursing: I don't like afternoon teas; they are too formal. I do enjoy them when they are just amongst friends though.

Will be Available to Members and Prospective Members of Flying Club

PROF. PARKIN IS SPEAKER

That the University of Toronto is keeping abreast of modern developments is amply manifested by the recent announcement of a course of lectures on civil aviation to begin to-morrow evening and continuing weekly thereafter for a period of ten weeks. The lectures which will be delivered by Professor Parkin of the University, will be under the auspices of the Toronto Flying Club, and will be available to members and prospective members of the club. The club has ordered several De Havilland machines, and as soon as the latter arrive from England, those taking the course will be taught to fly. That is, the lectures will provide the theoretical and subsequent lessons in flying, the practical side of the art of aviation.

Professor Parkin, who is a renowned authority on aero dynamics, will lecture on the following subjects:

- Jan. 17—Types of aircraft, aircraft parts, air properties and its measure.
- Jan. 24—Aero dynamics.
- Jan. 31—Theory of flight.
- Feb. 7—Aeroplane construction.
- Feb. 14—Stability and control.
- Feb. 21—Propellers.
- Feb. 28—Aeroplanes, their kinds and work.

Resume on Many Ancient Writers From the Time of Hypocrates is Given

INTERESTING SLIDES

Monasteries Were Sole Channel of Knowledge Until 13th Century Revival

"The artist taught the scientist to draw, hence the scientist saw he had to make closer observations," said Professor Coventry, with reference to Leonardo da Vinci in his lecture on Medieval Science in Convocation Hall Saturday evening. The Revival of Learning received its inspiration in Greece, and da Vinci, believing nature, as a field for possible inspiration, had been neglected, and finding it here, recorded it with great accuracy.

Dealing with science, chiefly from the biological standpoint, Professor Coventry gave a short account of the ancient writers on scientific subjects. Hypocrates and his followers had established a canon of medical method which holds to this day. Aristotle, who created the science of biology, was the personal culmination of Greek knowledge. Following Aristotle, Plato left his mark by being responsible for a scientific stagnation in Greece. His philosophy in conjunction with Christian teaching tended to prevent interest in the material world.

Pliny the Elder, a highly educated Roman, who met his death by venturing too near Vesuvius, wrote extensively, but had no scientific training. In the results of his experiments one cannot separate the true from the false. Nevertheless he was an important source for the scientific knowledge of the Middle Ages. The writings of Galen, who was by profession a practising doctor, covered a large field—atomy, physiology, medicine. A scientist of high order, he also had a comprehensive knowledge of his predecessors. Magic in herbs and

DR. BROWN OF VICTORIA ACCEPTS PROFESSORSHIP

Popular Teacher Will Assume Duties at Yale Next Fall

Yale University has recently invited Walter Theodore Brown, Ph.D., Professor of Ethics in Victoria College, to occupy the new chair of Professor of Religion there.

Dr. Brown has accepted and will assume his new duties next fall.

For the last fourteen years Professor Brown has been associated with the faculty of Victoria College, and has been popular among the staff and students alike. When it was rumoured that he was likely to be called to Yale, his students circulated a petition requesting the authorities to take steps to retain him at Victoria.

Professor Brown comes from Lakefield, Ontario. He was a student in Peterboro Collegiate. He graduated from Victoria College in 1907 and also took his M.A. there.

He did graduate work at Harvard and received his Doctorate of Philosophy there in 1912.

For a few years he taught on the staff of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine. In 1913 he came to Victoria to develop the department of Philosophy of Religion to succeed the late Professor G. J. Blewett. He has been at Victoria continuously since then.

Dr. Brown has taken a very keen interest in the discussion and arguing of religious and philosophic problems among the students.

Four scholastic awards were made by the Senate of the University last Friday. Two of these are to be presented to undergraduates and two to graduates.

Mr. R. H. Soward, four year University College, was awarded a silver medal presented by the committee in charge of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation. Candidates for this honour were required to submit an essay on some national problem. The subject of the winning essay was, "Unsolved Problems of the Canadian Federation."

The Jardine Memorial Prize was given to Mr. F. W. Burton, second year University College. This was for the best verse submitted by undergraduates and last year's graduates and is valued at $100.

The new Dental graduate research fellowships valued at $250 were the gifts of the Ontario Dental Association, the Ontario Dental Fellowship going to Dr. Helen F. Manchester, a graduate of '27, and the Ash-Temple Fellowship going to Dr. D. Trevor Waye.

Professor R. D. Defries has been appointed head of the departments of Epidemiology and Biometrics in the School of Hygiene by the Board of Governors of the University. Professor Defries was an associate director of the Connaught Laboratories, as well as an associate director of the School of Hygiene. He holds the degrees of Doctor of Public and Doctor of Medicine.

The Board has also appointed Dr. C. H. Best, M.A., M.B., as head of the department of Physiological Hygiene in the School of Hygiene. Dr. Best, who was one of the discoverers of insulin, has been assistant professor of Physiological Hygiene. He is also a research associate in the Banting-Best Medical Research, and an EDUCATION NOT NECESSARY FOR VOTING DECIDE W.C.L.S.

Affirmative Led by Mr. Newby and Negative by Dr. Coulthard

At a meeting of the Wycliffe College Literary Society held on Friday evening last, the house considered the question, "That we should have an educational qualification for voting on political issues."

Mr. M. T. Newby, M.A., who led the Government's argument, explained that he was advocating political education in the issue to be voted upon, while his colleague went on to explain the deplorable present state, in which most people see only one side of the question. The Opposition was very ably upheld by Dr. Coulthard, whose three points were: The growth of suffrage; the right of the majority; and, the right of every man to vote.

Mr. Hurley explained that men are sent to Parliament to receive political education. There were witty remarks from other members, and the question was defeated, thus giving the Opposition a chance to govern. The business of the Society was then carried out and the meeting dissolved by the Speaker.

VARSITY STAFF TRIP THE LIGHT FANTASTIC

Under Supervision of an Able Committee, Affair Was a Big Success

Despite the inauspicious date, "The Varsity" staff staged their semi-annual gambol on the Women's Union on Friday last. The fates, however, were caught napping, as the dance proved to be one of the most successful to date. The two front rooms of the Union gave ample space for the most energetic of the fifty odd couple present.

An original note on the evening's proceedings was given in the programmes, which were printed by members of the committee, and fairly reeked with technical newspaper terminology. The informality customary to these semi-annual dances was in evidence and helped make the evening the success it proved to be.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Creighton had kindly consented to act as chaperones. The members of the committee were Eve Powell, Helen Allen, N. J. De Witt and W. Sanders.

Medical Women's Undergrad Association Holds Function

On Saturday afternoon at Argyle House the Medical Women's Undergraduate Association gave their annual reception in honour of the medical faculty. In spite of the rain, a great many people were present to enjoy this one function of the year at which the members of the staff and their wives (if they have any) meet the "Medettes" in a social way. An orchestra supplied the music, while a delightful tea was being served. The hostesses were Lady Falconer, Dr. Edna Guest and Miss Rachel Haight, president of the M.W.U.A., while Dr. Stowe-Gullen, Dr. Ida Lind, Mrs. John Oille and Mrs. F. N. G. Starr poured tea.

Means Open Alliance With Communists

GOVERNORS QUIET

One Speaker With- draws His Name

The subject of the next Hart House debate, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, the social and industrial systems advocated by the Communist party of Canada are not in the best interests of the Dominion," continues to be a subject of discussion.

The Premier over the week-end repeated his disapproval of the invitation extended to prominent Communists, but believed that interference would likely result in the students holding the meeting in a place outside of the University jurisdiction.

It is also announced that one of the guest speakers in the Hart House debate scheduled for Wednesday has withdrawn, namely, Colonel Frank McFarland. He declined to give reasons for the dropping of the plans to have him oppose the arguments of Jack MacDonald and J. L. Counsell of Hamilton.

The Board of Governors have taken no action in the matter.

It is understood that Colonel McFarland's place will be taken by Professor Gilbert Jackson.

R. W. Finlayson, of University College, Second Year, will speak with Professor Jackson.

Speakers opposing the motion will be F. L. Counsell, K.C., of Hamilton, as a graduate guest, and J. H. Gringorten, University College, Second Year.

"The Financial Post," published by the McLean interests, in its last issue carries the following account of the debate:

"University of Toronto has openly allied itself with the communists. During a debate to be held next week the students will hear from Jack MacDonald, secretary of the Communist Party in Canada, who has been invited to attend and speak from the floor on behalf of communism. The subject of the debate is:

"Resolved, that in the opinion of this house, the social and industrial systems advocated by the Communist party of Canada are not in the best interests of the Dominion." (Continued on page 4)

Mild Weather May be "Cold" Weather But This Year's Colds Are Few

1. The mild weather we have been having recently responsible for a greater number of colds among students? Immediately after the holidays, as in other years, the number of those suffering from a more or less severe attack had probably reached a climax. Although the subject of colds and cold prevention has been broadcasted on all sides this year, it is not likely that there are more cases among students than we have had during previous years. In fact it is generally held that the number of absences from lectures is not so great this year due to the prolonged stretch of mild weather. Interviewing several professors on the subject, most of them stated that there was not a noticeable decrease in attendance. When asked whether they were bothered more than usual by the interruptions caused by coughing and sneezing while lecturing, the observations on this subject were pretty much the same. One professor said that he had not noticed anything out of the ordinary in this connection, that the attendance was good and disturbing barks were in the minority. This was typical of the replies of other professors, though another thought that the number of coughs per minute was even less than last year.

A general survey of conditions in the lecture rooms seems to show that snores are still drowning out the sneezes, and therefore things must be normal among the students. Of course we still have with us the man who tries to relieve the monotony by adding a long wail to a mighty sneeze, and also the man who sneezes with an "Oshaw!" or "Whooishee!"

It is noticeable on more than one occasion that some poor individual failed to get credit for his or her attendance because a raucous eruption came at the critical moment of the roll call and not hearing his or her name, remains in blissful ignorance.

However, with the above mentioned exceptions and the colds which come with every winter, we might really consider this a year which, so far at least, is quite free from colds. The two worst months, January and February, have not been completed, and it is at some time in these cold months that the family table cloth must be sacrificed to meet the demand when the supply of hankies runs out.

THE GLEE CLUB

With reference to the Christmas visit of the Harvard Glee Club here, Augustus Bridle, writing in the Toronto Daily Star, raises a question that should provoke an answer from those musically inclined within our own University.

Mr. Bridle points out that, though Harvard is able to raise a choir of fifty-five young men from a chorus of two hundred and fifty, all of whom are trained to sing some of the most difficult choral music in the world, such a thing would be phenomenal here in Canada. Though Toronto is recognized as one of the foremost musical centres in America, yet the University of Toronto, with its many thousands of students, has no choral organization except one mixed chorus at Victoria College conducted by Thos. Crawford and another at the Conservatory conducted by Dr. McMillan, both of which are fine only so far as they go but both leave untouched the vast majority of the students at the University, more especially the men.

The writer claims that "The cultural value of choral music is higher than in most of the arts because the music of any period focuses the life of the period better than any other art does it, except literature," and that "Our university should have a men's chorus second to none in America."

We blush to believe that such a statement is true, but that the University of Toronto has failed to do its share in establishing choral music we cannot but feel. That some such thought was at the back of the minds of those who recently sponsored the trip here of the Harvard Glee Club might be recognized, but that, in view of the poor attendance recorded the club's evening and the lack of student interest, it is evidence that all such purpose shall have failed unless some immediate action is taken.

The greatest handicap to be overcome in the formation of such a chorus would be the inertia of the students themselves. The other is pointed out by Mr. Bridle when he says that though Dr. MacMillan is the one man above all others to conduct such a chorus it is impossible to expect him to do the organization. Some one genius is required for that alone. "When one thinks of what Dr. MacMillan could accomplish within five years with a chorus of 200 men in the university," comments Mr. Bridle, "it will be still sensible to remember the day when Toronto taught great choral music to the leading cities of America. This is nine-tenths a matter of conductorship. Harvard sings so well because Dr. Davidson, himself one of 'the Boys'—makes good music as loveable to the boys as rugby or rowing. The marvel about his conducting is not in the baton so much as in the man."

OUR PLEASURES OF TO-DAY

"Alas and alack," said Miss Sit-by-the-Fire, "how the young people do go on! Now in my day . . ." And it's true! The people of to-day are so engrossed in their penny-seeking pursuits and par-boiled pleasures that they almost completely overlook the old customs and traditions that were so dear to our grandfathers and grandmothers. There is the Christmastide—once a time of happy family re-unions, Santa Claus and his reindeers, and brandy burning on the pudding—now, parties every minute of the holidays, Santa Claus arriving in his aeroplane, and the brandy without the spirit to burn on the pudding, even at the appearance of Brother Bill's new lighter guaranteed to light at the seventeenth try.

The optimists immediately cry—"It's the march of progress!" Yes, by all means let there be progress, but can we not retain our holiday spirit without bringing in that carousing commerciality of to-day into our play time?

Opportunity knocks at the door of most of us but once, but, at the door of old mids—it comes every four years, and here is Leap Year again. But no one seems to care, no one seems to show any outward signs of realizing that this year is significant. It has been, and is being, one of the most remarkable college years in the history

Art, Music and Drama

Sunday Evening Concert

One Hart House Concert featured the cello; the last featured the piano. Both concerts were a privilege to attend, and a musical education in themselves. The cello artist was a foreigner to this country; Mr. Viggo Kihl, the pianist, is a present resident of Toronto.

The programme last night was what one might possibly call overloaded with Chopin. While many of the selections from this composer were altogether agreeable, perhaps a greater diversity might be attained. Three ordinary numbers, two encores and the Sonata in B flat, tend to overbalance the programme.

The Sonata was naturally the piece de resistance of the evening, including the famous "March Turcque." This selection was played with exquisite technique and close sympathy by Mr. Kihl.

The first number, Prelude and Fugue in B minor, was also brilliantly played and merited the hearty applause of the audience. Mendelssohn's Scherzo was a spirited piece, and an apparent favourite.

As encores Mr. Kihl played the "Butterfly Etude" and a "Berceuse" by Chopin.

There was a decided absence of modern music from the programme. N.J.D.

Victoria College Orchestra

This evening (Monday, Jan. 16th) Victoria College Orchestra will give its Ninth Annual Concert in Burwash Hall. This organization is composed of members from almost every faculty and is representative of the best talent in the University. This year they will present a programme, under the direction of Frank E. Blachford, of particular merit.

The famous opera by Pietro Mascagni is being produced in part. It lends itself very beautifully to the symphony orchestra. The opera tells the story of broken love and a lover's revenge, which ends in tragedy. The music thrills with the story, so that one can almost feel it. It is interesting to note that this composition is the only one of Mascagni's which became famous. Its rich melody and swinging rhythm with a beauty and grace so characteristic of Italians, has made him famous. And this is not the only treat in store for those who hear this programme. It includes also:

The Henry VIII Dances . . . German A Day in VeniceNevin NailsMoses Gobani VisionsTschalkowsky Premier AmourBenoit Assisting artists are Frank E. Blachford, violinist; Miss Ruby Moss, soprano, and Mr. Scott Malcolm, pianist.

Well, the Financial Post has the w.k. paddle out and is whacking away with great clan, joy and youthful vigour. The next thing we know, they will be sticking pins into Victoria College for including scarlet in their colours.

No more puns from now on. We do note, however, that puns were prevalent as early as 485 B.C. and were also used by the w.k. Shakespeare. Now who are we to be modest?

FACULTY HOCKEY CONDITIONS

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

We have a number of Interfaculty hockey teams straining at the leash—rarin' to go—or what have you?

We have no natural ice.

But, we have a perfectly lovely Arena. That arena may not have come out of student pockets, but it did come out of the sweat and agony of students on the gridiron.

Why is it not available for Interfaculty hockey? Why not for faculty practice hours? Are there not twenty-four hours in the day? And eighteen of them equally desirable in the eyes of the ardent hockey player.

If the authorities do not give the rank and file opportunities to strut their stuff and improve the game, by making every concession possible under the tragic conditions of weather that now prevail, whence are our future representative teams to come? The Arena was made for hockey, not hockey for the Arena.

Yours faithfully,

A.A.N.

JUNIOR DOUBLE-HEADER AT THE VARSITY ARENA TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The famous Sullivan-Porter-Taylor-Trotter-Hudson-Plaxton combination, familiarly known as the Grads, will play their last game on Toronto ice at the Varsity Arena on Tuesday night. Toronto fans will be out in large numbers to bid this popular outfit farewell, but it is the students of the University who should be out in the largest numbers to send the boys away to the tune of a "Toronto." It is largely due their brilliant performances and the interest that they aroused in hockey while undergraduates that Varsity has her own Arena to-day. True, there was talk for a long time of a Varsity rink, but it must be admitted that the actual building was started at the time when interest in hockey was at its height due to the performances of the team now known as the Grads.

The Grads need no introduction to anyone at all acquainted with hockey in Canada. "Little Joe" Sullivan in the nets has been a star ever since he played junior for U.T.S. many years ago. "Red" Porter, the star defence man, and captain of the team, has been a favourite with the fans ever since he broke in with Varsity Juniors six years ago. "Ross" Taylor, sturdy defence man, and hero of many stirring contests, is the pinch hitter who comes through with goals when they are really needed. On the forward line "Dave" Trotter, the brilliant left wing, is the most sought-after amateur in the game to-day, and it is generally accepted that he could catch a regular place on any pro team in the league. In Hughie Plaxton the Grads have one of the trickiest centres in the game, and one who can and does get goals. But popular though the rest of the team may be, it is Lou Hudson who means more to hockey at Varsity than anyone else. Longer than many care to remember, Lou has been playing hockey for the Blue and White, and not only playing but starting no matter in what company he happened to be playing. The substitutes must not be forgotten, and the team is fortunate in having men of the calibre of Bert and Rogers Plaxton, Frank Sullivan, Frank Fisher, Charlie Delaney, Grant Gordon and Stuff Mueller available for relief work.

All in all, the team is one of which not only the University but the country as a whole may well be proud. But though they are known now as the Canadian Olympics to Varsity fans, they will remain the Varsity Grads.

It is no easy schedule that confronts the Varsity Seniors for the next few days. To-night they journey to Preston, the home of the Riverbros, for a Senior O.H.A. fixture, and incidentally one of the hardest in their schedule. Tuesday night they play the Grads in an exhibition game at the Varsity Arena, and on Wednesday night they play Peterboro in the latter's home town. The Peterboro game looks as good as in the bag, unless the Pites have improved greatly since their appearance here a week ago. But the Preston game is one that has the fans guessing. Varsity has met and defeated every team in the league with the exception of the Preston entry, and a victory will make them odd on favourites for the title. But Preston themselves are counting heavily on coping the honours and will put up a strenuous battle.

Varsity Juniors have their chance to get in the play-offs for the Big Four title when they meet Parkdale Canoe Club at the Varsity Arena to-night in the first half of a double-header. The Marlboro outfit is out in front at present and are practically a sure thing as far as the regular schedule is concerned. The real battle is for second place with Parkdale and Varsity running neck and neck. As the first two teams play off at the end of the season, second is as good as first as far as the standing goes, and both P.C.C. and Varsity will be out there battling for all they are worth.

Varsity Juniors Play Parkdale To-Night

Victory Means Second Place and Chance in the Play-off

Monday night is an important one in the books of the Varsity Juniors. The Blue and White sextet is tied for the second place in the Big Four group of the O.H.A. This means that the affair to-night will break the deadlock in second place when they hitch up with Parkdale C.C. A win for either means an almost sure chance to meet Marlboros in the playdowns for group honours. It should be a rip snorting battle, as the Blues got plenty of their poor hockey out of their systems on Friday night, and should be in the finest fettle at the Varsity Arena to-night in the first game of the double-header that is being staged at the Bloor Street rink.

It is expected that Bean will be able to take his place on the defence, and if he does it means hard going for the Parkdale forward line.

The Blue and White game with the Parkdale Canoeists will start at 7.30, with the second game bringing together Marlboros and Toronto C.C. immediately after.

Marlboros Defeat Varsity Juniors

Though Outscored, the Blues Fight Hard to Even the Count

FINAL SCORE IS 7-2

After turning in their worst exhibition of hockey this year, the Varsity Juniors succumbed to the Marlboro attack, taking the short end of a 7 to 2 count.

The Blue and White team started off well and held the "marbles" to a single goal lead in the first period, but the second stanza found the Dukes slowly piling up the score on the Frank Sullivan team. In the third period the Iron Dukes' forward line made it beyond doubt when they countered against the efforts of the Blues.

Although the Varsity hopes were defeated, they did not allow that to bother them, and before the game ended had all their men up on the forward line in an attempt to cut down the lead of the Big Four leaders.

The "III's" were not at their best without the services of their smart defence man, Wally Bean, who is out with injuries, and George Beal is not in the finest of form, as he is being bothered considerably with a bad hip. With the Blues in their best form, the Marlboros would not have sent the Varsity squad under to such a decisive defeat.

But coming back to the game, the III's, even though they were outclassed, never gave up trying, and that is the highest sporting compliment that any team can ever hope to get.

DATE IS SET FOR BASKETBALL MEET

Women's Intercollegiate Meet Will Be Held On March 2 and 3

NEWCOMERS WELCOME

The annual Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Meet will be held at Toronto this year on Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3. This date is rather late for Queen's, as they are planning to close a week earlier than formerly, but unfortunately it has been impossible to secure the Hart House gymnasium any sooner.

For the first time Western is entering the contest, so now four schools are represented—Toronto, Western, McGill and Queen's. Draws have been made, and on the first night Western will play Varsity, and McGill Queen's, while on the second night the losers will play an exhibition game, and the winners will play off for the cup.

The first practice for the team is being held to-day in the O.C.E. gym from 7 to 8 p.m. Every girl from every faculty is urged to turn up for this try-out. Toronto is very lucky in having most of her last year's team intact. A few have graduated, but Eile Blackwell, Marion Forward, Mildred Wilkins, and the subs, Emma Weir and Dot Kerr, left. All these girls are from Vic, or U.C. For some reason or other the other colleges have supplied no members, which should be a challenge to Meds, St. Mike's and St. Hilda's, who have not been represented for at least a couple of years.

GRADS MAKE FINAL LOCAL APPEARANCE

Opposition By Periods Will Be Undergrads, Marlboros and Subs

GAME AT VARSITY ARENA

The Canadian Olympic hockey team, commonly known as the Varsity Grads, make their farewell appearance in Toronto to-morrow night, and as is only fitting, they will appear at the Varsity Arena. They have several games scheduled before leaving for Europe, but this will be their last local appearance. Probably it will be the last chance that local fans will have to thrill to the playing of this "wonder" team, every man of which is a star in his own right.

In the first period the Grads will be opposed by the present Varsity team, and the undergrads are determined to give them the battle of their lives. It will be remembered that the two teams were drawn together in the Eastern finals last year after the Ottawa episode, but Varsity "did not choose to run" and let the Grads have the game by default.

In the second stanza Marlboros will attempt to stop the Olympic entry, and though they were beaten in the S.P.A. series they should put up a fine battle for one period. In the last period it will be all Grads, or Olympics if you like, with the regulars playing the substitutes, and what a battle that last period should turn out to be. The Grads have been considered rather weak as far as subs go, but why no one seems to know. They have seven relief men who could step on the ice and take almost any senior team in the country into camp.

INTERFACULTY WATER POLO TEAM NEEDS MORE PLAYERS

Turnout for Practices Has Not Been Up to the Mark

During the last Interfaculty water polo season some very promising players were in evidence on the various teams. None of these men, however, have taken advantage of the present opportunity of making the Intercollegiate.

At the polo practices lately we have had only about a dozen players out. Eight or nine of these men must be picked to form an Intercollegiate team unless we get some better material. Most of last year's team has been lost through graduation, so there is a chance for anyone who is willing to turn out and try to make a place. If you have any aspirations towards making a Varsity water polo team, here is a chance made to order.

The practice hours for polo are Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5.15, and Saturdays at 12.15 p.m.

The turnout of swimmers has not been particularly promising, so if you are interested in swimming, turn out to the practices. "Fran" Lorenzen and Mr. A. Goss are coaching the swimming team this year, and they will be glad to give you a few pointers if you wish to drop into the tank during practice hours.

Swimming practices are held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5.15 p.m.

The University of California is planning to maintain a tutoring staff to aid athletes who are low in scholarship.

A delightful recital was given Sunday afternoon by Mr. James Walker of the Chicago Light Opera Company and Miss Jessie McGregor. They were accompanied on the piano by Miss J. Egan, A.T.C.M. Tea was also served, closing a week-end which will not soon be forgotten by the members.

SR. DENTS SHOW OLD FORM TO TRIM MEDS 10-5

O'Brien and Corman Star for Dents and Turner for Meds

Sr. Dents are again fighting to retain the Interfaculty Baseball Trophy which they have held for the past six years, and showed the old time form when Sr. Meds fell victims in a big pitching battle which finished 10 to 5 for the Exodontists. Seven of last year's regulars are still available for the season's play.

Corman for Dents made the star play of the game when he caught Turner's hard hit liner on the first pitched ball in the initial frame. Mickey O'Brien, star catcher for the past three seasons, again showed brilliant form. Quick, O'Brien, Corman and Lawson of Dents each had two safe singles, while Turner and Boxter led the Med team with two apiece. Freddy Wansborough umpired and made each team play for their score.

Line-up:

Dents: Quick 3b, Rowland cf, Marshall s.s., O'Brien c, Corman 1b, Law-2b, Hind 1f, Somerville p, Butler rf. (Maynard lf, Findlay lf.)

Meds: Turner 3b, Miller cf, Moore s.s., Kelly c, Wright 1b, Slavinsky 2b, Harris lf, Boxter p, Wilford rf. (Stanton rf.)

Umpire: F. Wansborough.
Scorer: C. Duncanson.

stones were a feature of his writings as it was in those of Pliny and Aristotle.

After Galen, Europe passed into a period of complete reliance on the knowledge of the past, due mainly to the growth of Christianity. There was an attitude of mind which brought about a withdrawal from observation, and the relative unimportance of the material world was not conducive to scientific progress. From time to time the works of Aristotle, Pliny and other writers were copied, but many errors were introduced, and selections taken from them were usually more wonderful than scientific. Throughout this period the monasteries were the real repositories of knowledge and the sole channel of knowledge.

This attitude of a fixed reliance on the authority of the past continued till about the thirteenth century when there began to be a noticeable revival of a humanistic and rational outlook, its source being the stores in the monasteries and the importation from the east of documents preserved by Oriental scholars. Among the most important writers and observers of this time were Alfred the Great, who besides summing up the knowledge of his time, indicated clearly the gaps in that knowledge, and Roger Bacon, who definitely indicated the scientific method of observation.

Professor Coventry showed a very interesting series of plates indicating the changes in illustrative drawings, ranging from the realistic type of the early Greek scientists to the diagrammatic of the twelfth century.

interest of the people of the Dominion.

"Students and graduates will speak for each side and a Red worker will belch his propaganda under these favorable auspices.

"The debate will be held at Hart House, student centre of the university, where on one occasion, when Bonne Entente journeys were being taken by leading English Ontarians and French Quebecers, the students debated the insulting subject, 'Resolved that the French Canadian is a menace to Canada.'

"Sir Robert Falconer, president of the university, and other officers, have declined to act in the matter of the invitation to the Communist leader. One may be certain that at McGill university the invitation would never have been sent.

"Sir Robert's attitude is to allow the students absolute freedom in the handling of debates, etc.

"No one will criticize the general theory of freedom of speech. But there are many hundreds of fathers and mothers whose sons are attending Toronto University who will learn with keen regret that communistic propaganda may be preached from the floor of a Hart House debating hall, not by students but by paid agents of the most disrupting forces in the world, and this with the apparent approval of the heads of the university."

Mesopotamia was also seized by waves of the Semites. About 3500 B.C. they spread as far as Babylon. In Elam were people of high civilization, with a uniform alphabet, numerals and a system of weight and measures. They worshipped a sky-god, who ascended to heaven by the mountains. When they descended to the plain, their god lost his method of ascent, and hence was built the House of Babel.

The second Semetic wave drifted northward. About 2750 B.C. there arose a great war leader, and under him the first known empire came into existence.

The third wave started among the Chaldeans, who attacked and conquered the empire, which had sunk into degeneration by this time. Another wave came from Syria, and making Babylon its capital, established the Assyria. They collected a "brick library" of 22000 "volumes," written in cuneiform on baked clay.

In Palestine, the Hittites were the first known inhabitants. They intermarried with Semites, and were followed by the Canaanites. The Hebrews drifted in somewhere between fourteen and twelve hundred B.C. They were nomads, and at length chose as their king, Saul of Kish.

"Whale" of a game, handing out plenty of the heavy variety of bumps, while Beal and Smith turned in fine games. The latter was watched closely, and even at that he bulged the twine for a single counter. Mooney got the other Varsity goal. The work of Moran in the Varsity nets was good, most of the shots being of the "sure goal" variety. He was not given the best of protection, but it was his first game of the season and he made a good fist of his effort.

The Blues are now tied for second place with Parkdale Canoe Club. They meet in the first game on Monday night at the Varsity Arena to break the tie.

The teams:
Marlboros: Goal, Harris; defence, Irvine and Horne; centre, "Shrimp" McPherson; wings, Miller and Alex Conacher; subs, Mercer and C. Conacher.

Varsity: Goal, Moran; defence, Mooney and Carrick; centre, Beal; wings, Smith and Lister; subs, Leake and Clute.

Referee: Ernie Collett.

STUDENT REFORMERS BLAME PROFESSORS FOR OVERACTIVITY

"Lack of Intellectual Stimulus and Study Encouragement" is Deplored

AT. U. OF WASHINGTON

Student Committee Conducts Curricular Reform at Bates College

Football having passed off the boards, curricular reform is again engaging student attention in several colleges. The undergraduate reformers have taken fair notice of the criticisms overflowing current periodicals and have adopted a vigorous style in attacking their campus problems.

The University of Washington Daily, after publishing a series of student criticisms of the university and its work, has summarized by blaming the faculty "for the lack of intellectual stimulus and study encouragement prevalent on the campus." The main drawback it conceives as "the appalling over-emphasis on activities for activity's sake, that insistence on activities at Washington which results in the average collegian striving to be an activity hound from freshman days to the end of college." The faculty is blamed for having failed to eliminate superfluous activities, and the Daily presents the problem as one for the teachers to solve.

President C. D. Gray of Bates College has appointed a student committee of twelve to examine the curriculum and suggest modifications and changes. The students will carry on the work begun by a senior committee last year. Three other groups are working on the same problem, one composed of teachers, another of alumni, and a third, serving as advisory, of outsiders.

Students in the College for Women at Western Reserve University have selected representatives to serve as their agents in presenting to the faculty complaints against the curriculum. They are members of the student council, who will work in conjunction with a faculty committee, to whom they will make recommendations after passing on student complaints.

Beware of Communism

The presence of a long piece of bunting, brilliant red in hue, outside the Lecture Room of Hart House yesterday would seem to indicate that certain of our contemporaries were not so far astray when they declared Communism to be rife at the University. It is a significant argument for those who look with disfavour on the best Hart House debate that such propagandists—for what else can they be?—are allowed to walk, unhampered, through Hart House, and carry out their nefarious designs. The bunting was hung down from a window in the Lecture Room, extending for some eight feet. It was first noticed between 2.30 and 3.00 p.m. but before an hour had elapsed, it had been removed. A watchful eye is being kept in case there should be any further developments.

JUNIORS LOSE 4-3 P.C.C. ARE VICTORS

Canoeists Emerge Supreme From Close Contest With Varsity Juniors

LOOSELY-PLAYED GAME

In a loosely played but well contested hockey match last night, Parkdale Canoe Club nosed out the Varsity Juniors 4-3. Though the game was not a very fine example of good hockey, there were many exciting moments.

In the first period P.C.C. had a slight edge. Soon after the face-off Mephram scored, and repeated the performance again about eight minutes later when Carrick was off for tripping. Then Varsity woke up and the Carrick to Smith combination opened their score. With two minutes to go, Wettlaufer netted another one for the paddlers, and just as the bell went Beal smashed the puck between the posts to leave the score 3-2 for Parkdale at the end of the first period.

The second stanza was dull and dirty, with close checking by both teams and little combination. Carrick's rushes lived things up a bit and he was unlucky not to score.

Ayers notched another one for the paddlers about 15 minutes after the bell in the third period. Varsity were far from beaten then though, and after ten minutes of hard trying Carrick got another one. But although

HART HOUSE DEBATE

The Debates Committee wishes it to be understood that the debate on Wednesday evening is, as usual, open to members of Hart House and to certain guests that have been specially invited by the Committee.

The Committee also wishes to draw to the attention of those who may be considering speaking that the time of the undergraduate speakers on the paper is limited to ten minutes, and from the floor, to five, in order that as large as possible a number may have an opportunity to speak. Where convenient the Committee would appreciate it if those intending to speak would notify the Chairman of the Committee by letter addressed to the Warden's Office before the debate.

Both the undergraduate debaters on the paper are prominent in University activities. R. W. Finlayson is in his second year at University College. He is the son of the Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ontario Government. Mr. Finlayson is a well-known figure around the offices of the U.C. "Lit." He has also taken an outstanding part in athletic activities during his Varsity career. J. H. Gringorten is also a U.C. man in second year. Philosophy (E. and H.). Besides being on the Debates Committee of Hart House, Mr. Gringorten is a prominent member of the Menorah Society. He was formerly an alderman in the boys' municipal administration in this city.

NOTED SECRETARY IS SUNDAY SPEAKER

Max Yergan Recipient of Harmon Award for Religious Service Among Negroes

SERVICE IN CONVOCATION

The Toronto student delegation which attended the Convention of Students at Detroit to consider the present attitude towards missions has arranged for a service in Convocation Hall on Sunday, January 29th, at 11 a.m., when brief reports will be presented by two of the delegation, on their impressions of the Convention.

The outstanding feature of the service, however, is the appearance of Mr. Max Yergan, the noted negro student secretary. Mr. Yergan had the unusual distinction in 1926 of receiving the Harmon Award for distinguished religious service among negroes. Graduating from Shaw University, one of the best-known negro universities, in 1914, he served for two years as a student secretary under the Y.M.C.A. During the war he rendered special service in France and in Africa, and is now the National Y.M.C.A. secretary in South Africa.

Toronto has had no more outstanding visitor, from the point of view of student interest, in recent years. All students of the University should make a point of hearing him on this occasion.

There will also be a service at 7 p.m., at which Mr. Yergan will speak.

New Edict Prohibits Parking in Press-Baldwin House Area

Motoring students can no longer park their cars by Baldwin House. The recent edict is that the space between the fair of economics and the University Press must be left clear. Whether this is for the benefit of traffic in general, or simply a precaution in case of fire, or to prevent small tin automobiles of a popular make from disturbing the peace and quiet of lectures is not known.

The cold fact, however, remains that a policeman has been there since last Friday for the express purpose of shoeing away the wandering motorist from his favourite parking place.

NATIONAL FEDERATION SENDS ORATORS ABROAD

Melvin Kenny of Victoria Will Debate in England With McGill Man

Two Canadian university students will be sent on a debating tour to England next fall by the National Federation of Canadian University Students. This decision was recommended and made at their meeting in Toronto during the Christmas holidays.

The representative of Toronto will be Melvin K. Kenny, of Victoria College, vice-president of the Students' Administrative Council, and President of the Victoria College Students' Parliament. Mr. Kenny has been prominent for some time in debating affairs, and represented Toronto, along with others, on the recent trip to the University of Minnesota and Marquette.

The National Federation of University Students also appointed Bernard Alexander of McGill to go with Mr. Kenny on the debating tour of England.

SAINT MICHAEL'S BUSY WITH STUDENT ACTIVITIES

Philosophical Club in Furore Over Distributist Proposals of Joseph Ord

The various organizations of St. Michael's College have already begun their activities for the winter term. The Philosophical Club held its first meeting on Thursday of last week. The feature contribution to the discussion was a paper on the Distributist State by Joseph Ord. This item displayed a marked degree of research work and was much appreciated by all members. Rev. G. B. Phelan, Ph.D., led the open discussion.

On Friday evening the Oratorical Club held its first meeting. All members were on hand and heard five addresses by Messrs. MacCarthy, Kennedy, Daly, Sammons and MacMahon. After some discussion it was decided to devote the next two meetings of the club to extemporaneous speeches.

The S.M.C. Students' Parliament holds its first session on Thursday next with the newly formed Crusader ministry in the saddle.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY POPULAR THIS YEAR

Marked Increase in Attendance Over Same Period of Previous Year

FORTY EVENING AVERAGE

The University Library has been used much more this year than last year by both the professors and the students. In November and December there was an increase of about twenty-three per cent. of the attendance of last November and December. While the number enrolled at the University is larger than ever before the increase is not great enough to account for the increase in the number using the library. The average evening attendance, including both men and women, is about forty. No statistics are kept as to the comparative use of the library by the men and women, but on being questioned by "The Varsity" the librarians said there seemed to be about the same number in both the reading rooms. However, since there are more men at the University than there are women, the women must be using the library more than the men in proportion to the number enrolled.

Only about one hundred students used the library reading rooms during the Christmas holidays, but twelve hundred and sixteen books were taken out for the entire two weeks. During 1927 over thirteen thousand new books and pamphlets were added to the University library. This includes additions of books for the use of all the courses at the University.

The new Medical reading room is being well used. It is found a great convenience as all the medical books and only medical books have been put there, and there is much less waiting than at the main desk.

In order to further relieve congestion at the main desk and save the students' time a number of books were moved to the lower reading room.

Argyle House Illuminated Would-be Prowlers Foiled

The front of Argyle House has recently been illuminated by a new set of lights, and the portals and front yard of that institution are now bright as day though the shades of night may have long since fallen. Every nook and cranny is lit, and the glare of publicity is cast upon all who enter or leave, or even linger at the door hastening to a 12.30 leave. A recurrence of the recent Amesley episode is thereby made impossible.

Sherwood Eddy Gives Reasons for Continued Mission Work

Sherwood Eddy, the great religious worker in the United States, gave these four salient reasons for the continuation of mission work at the recent world-wide convention in Detroit:

1. Because Christianity implies unity of race and love with the full share of life.
2. The United States has the knowledge and experience of Christ.
3. It is an enormous responsibility that the United States should share, since it is the richest nation.
4. There is a stark need in the world for Christianity.

Empire-wide Organization
Formed to Foster
Aviation

The course of lectures on civil aviation which start to-day in Room 8 of the Mechanical Building will be delivered by Professor Parkin under the auspices of the Toronto Flying Club, a part of the Aeronautical Association of Canada.

This association has been scheduled by the government to carry out for the city of Toronto the government's scheme of flying clubs, and for the purpose has formed the Toronto Flying Club.

The use of the Leaside Aerodrome and two hangars has been secured, and two machines have been supplied by the Government. It is expected that several more machines will shortly be acquired, and that many members or groups of members will obtain private machines as well.

University students are invited to join the club and to attend the course of ten lectures which open to-day.

The club will supply mechanics and instructors. The club will also be of a social nature, and membership is open only to British subjects, and both sexes are admitted. Provision is also made for associate members.

The object of the club is to bring together as members persons interested in flying and to provide and maintain aeroplanes for the use and instruction of club members.

This club, though the first to be

FOUNDER'S DAY OBSERVED AT TRINITY COLLEGE

Service, Dinner and Tea Party
Included in Week-end
Celebrations

Trinity College held its annual celebration of founder's day with special services in the Chapel on Sunday, and a dinner at Trinity House on Monday evening.

The dinner, which was attended by undergraduates, graduates and friends of the college, was the closing event of the celebrations. Mr. Dyce Saunders addressed the two hundred or more guests present, revivifying the associations and sentiments connected with this day. The speaker was introduced by the Provost.

The annual celebration opened on Saturday (Founder's Day proper), when the Provost and Mrs. Cosgrave entertained students and friends at tea in the afternoon.

Student Volunteer Delegates from Kansas Visit Windsor

Windsor, Ontario, was visited specially by a large delegation from the University of Kansas to the recent Conference of the Student Volunteers at Detroit. Sixty-five were present from Kansas.

The main questions discussed, according to the Kansas delegation, were:

"Should denominationalism continue in religious missions in other countries; is Christ the way or a way; is the United States' attitude in sending gunboats to protect its missionaries explainable; are the immigration restrictions of the United States justifiable?"

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Elusive Entanglements Approved

Do you think University students fritter away too much time on social events, politics, journalism and other elusive entanglements?

Mr. N. F. Mallon, III U.C.: No. I think those are part of University life. Some of us don't take enough part in those activities.

Miss M. S., IV Pass: No. I don't think so. I think one ought to have a certain amount of diversion.

Mr. D. Currie, III C. and E.: Well, I don't know. . . If you were not at the University you would waste just about as much time, and perhaps not enjoy yourself so much.

Mr. J. McLaren, II S.P.S.: Personally, I don't think they give you much time to "fritter away." Social events have possibly as much place as studies in University life.

Miss F. H., III Philos.: Too much time perhaps is spent on the other "elusive entanglements."

Mr. J. S. Eakin, IV C. and E.: In the wider sense of the term "education," I think not. A University should be something more than a glorified trade school.

Miss Buddie Andrews, I U.C.: I think the greater percentage do not.

Mr. G. Sparrow, III Meds.: It depends entirely upon the student. There are those with special academic ability who can afford more time for such things.

Miss E. J. Robertson, I U.C.: I don't think they do. Now is the time to enjoy yourself to the full before entering your life's work.

Mr. C. Wright, III U.C.: No, I do not. A great deal of useful knowledge may be obtained by participating in social events.

Miss J. McLaughlin, IV Moderns: I think one is amply repaid for all the time one spends on such activities.

GOOD LUCK, THE GRADS

To-night all Varsity will be gay. The Grads, Canada's Olympic hockey team, is on the eve of its departure for foreign soil, with the hope and expectation of bringing a world's championship back to this Dominion. As a farewell the ex-Blue meet the present Blue in a friendly exhibition at the Varsity Arena. The undergraduates and the graduates may be trusted to give this "wonder team" a big send-off, and a hearty one. A happy night this should be.

To repeat in full the history of the Grads, the wonder team of amateur hockey, would be superfluous. Most of us can recall how a poorly rated Blue and White hockey team staggered through to win the Intercollegiate championship four years ago and then, to the amazement of all, took Niagara Falls, O.H.A. winners, into camp in both games of a two-game series. Graduates of U.T.S. in the most part, this little band of warriors possessed a fighting, determined Varsity spirit that eventually carried them into the Allan Cup play-downs against the strong Port Arthur team in Winnipeg. Experience told its tale and the Blues were eliminated by the team from the west, but only after a great struggle that demonstrated the Varsity squad to be one of the strongest machines in amateur hockey of that day.

With the experience gained during the campaign of the previous season the Blue were heavy favourites to win the eastern honours the following year. Kirkpatrick had replaced Taylor on the defence, and, along with "Red" Porter, was giving Joe Sullivan in the nets wonderful protection. Hughie Plaxton had developed into one of the greatest centre players in the game during the previous season, and Louie Hudson was commencing to play the best game of his career at right wing. In addition, the students had added to their ranks a youngster from the Prep school group, David Trotter, and after the first few games of the season it was seen that this flashy stick-handler and poke-check artist bore promise of developing into one of the greatest players that the game has ever known. Expectations were fulfilled, and once more the Blue found themselves called upon to face Port Arthur in the Allan Cup finals, neither Peterboro nor Ottawa being strong enough to hold them in check. The series against the Ports will long live in the memory of those fortunate enough to witness the dazzling speed, the lightning-like thrusts toward the opponents' goal, the extraordinary combination, the marvellous checking, and, as well, the cries and gasps of the immense crowd that characterized the greatest four-game series for the cup that the east has ever known. Richards went to the hospital after the first game with a broken knee, and from then on watched his team-mates with taut muscles and a hammering heart from the sidelines as they took the lead in the third and fourth games, only to have them tied as time was about to be called and overtime was necessary. A too strenuous campaign, Richards got out of the game, Hudson with a broken thumb, Porter under the weather, a weakness in substitutes, every man jack of them tired out, played to death, and the tale was finally told. Port Arthur at length managed to break through Varsity's reserve and captured the fourth and deciding game of the series after thirty minutes' overtime had been played and returned home with the honours for the second successive season. And that year the majority of the Varsity players graduated.

Grimly determined to profit by experience, the players of the few previous years who were now out of the jurisdiction of the University got together and enthusiastically determined to make one last desperate attempt. Richards, Devins, Kirkpatrick, Trotter and Mueller were still at school, but permission to play the latter two was obtained. The first roll-call found some thirteen experienced players in uniform last year, and again under the guidance of Conn Smythe, the greatest hockey coach that Varsity ever had, the Blue won the name of the "Wonder Team" by fighting its way into the Allan Cup finals without the loss of a single game. Against Fort William this time, the Grads tied the first game, lost the second, and

The night is fairest, Edith dear,
Because you're here;
The proudest thrill runs thro' me,
Because you're here;
The show's the best I ere have seen,
Because you're here;
Next let us dine at "Child's," my dear,
Because you're here;
There's double flavour to the food,
Because you're here;
Each tiny bit's a huge delight,
Because you're here;
And twice as prompt the waiters do
Each gladsome service thanks to you,
Alas the check is double too,
Because you're here.

Dear Friend:

I am not one of those bright eggs who know it all, but I do say that I can read, and I read especially your column. In there I saw to-day something about red coats for Varsity men and how Varsity men were going to wear red coats. Now, I say, here's where I come in. Every Christmas since long before I can remember I have had to have a new red coat made. Since I am so fat you can guess it's a pretty large coat, big enough for two slim dining Hall House men to divide between them. Now the fact is, to tell you the plain truth, that I'm pretty hard up just now, and I'd be mighty glad if I could sell my second-hand stock to some personages worthy of the said, especially since they've only been worn once, and one at a time at that. May I add that I hope you will do all you can to spread this propaganda, whether publicly or in pamphlet form. And you will oblige yours affectionately, Santa Claus.

P.S.—May I intimate that communism is my favorite occupation, and though I have to earn my living out of it, it rejoices my heart to see so many young things giving freely (as I trust I will see them) to the common cause, my purse.

C-C

On Wednesday there will be Big Doings, and we don't mean perchance. No one will be allowed into the Debate unless he can pronounce correctly "Zdravstvuyte, Tovarischi" the pure Muscovian for "Good afternoon, Comrade." All heavily-whiskered men will have their whiskers pulled by the Speaker to assure the authenticity of the aforesaid foliage. Each distinguished visitor will have his pockets frisked by a University gendarme. And don't be surprised if sometime on Wednesday night Hart House disappears in a blast of T.M.T. All of these things may happen—maybe it is fear of that made an eminent gentleman resign from the Debate!

N.A.B.

won the third and fourth, thus gaining the cup after three attempts and winning the right to represent Canada at the Olympic games in 1928. The series was stated to be the best that was ever played, and it sold the amateur game out in British Columbia. In it the team lost its only contest of the season, the second in the series.

Varsity and Toronto turned out in their thousands to welcome home that gallant little band one year ago—and the city and the University were theirs. The boys were feted and banqueted, dined and wine, applauded and decorated,—and they all promised to stick together for another season so that they might represent this University, this city, this country at the Olympic games. They did. And we are proud of that time—our team—to-day.

We wish the players a wonderful trip,—knowing the boys, we feel that they will have that,—perfect weather, ideal surroundings, worlds of experience and every success. We know that they will prove assets to ourselves and to our country,—that they will fittingly represent our knowledge, our assets, our aims, our ideals and our sportsmanship. And that they will bring back the world's championship we can have but little doubt. No finer type of manhood might one expect to find than that of which this team is composed, and it is a pleasure and a privilege for us to wish these our fellows well, God speed and good luck.

With the Theatres

SHEA'S

We hadn't been at Shea's for a long time—we're sorry. Mr. W. Cromwell Knox made us that way. His sparkling act of wit and juggling was the life of the party, in spite of our in-born belief that a juggler was something to be despised. He promised to tell H.M. King George about our reception, so he must have been good. Roy Gordon and Nell Healy in "Suite 16" make use of the old newlywed gag to put across one or two original jokes. From a rather interesting start this act graded down to 16c "vodeville" calibre. Furman and Evans and McKee O'Connor & Co. put across two average song and dance numbers. America's Fastest Charleston Dancer deserves the title—enough said. Bevan-Flint & Co. in "Love Mates" give the lie to the title. We couldn't explain—it has to be seen.

Jetta Goudal in "The Forbidden Woman" is a poor imitation of Pola Negri. The picture, like Beau Geste, is built around the love of two brothers for one another. The older marries Jetta; the younger meets her on board ship and they fall instantly in love with one another. The scene is laid in Nigeria, we believe. Now figure it out for yourselves, or else see the picture.

The Collegians complete the programme with their usual college entertainment.

EMPIRE — "WHAT ANNE BROUGHT HOME"

The play presented by the New Empire Players this week is good entertainment, but to say more of it, or to consider it as drama would denote a critical zeal entirely unnecessary. "What Anne Brought Home" is the old story of the dear little Pollyanna-Cinderella in an Indiana environment who brings home a good young lad of a husband. The latter, of course, is the butt of her well-meaning family who mock his apparent stupidity for two acts and a half, only to have him prove his ultimate worth, or rather to "get the breaks" of luck in the final ten minutes. He saves the family finances, and sells the worthless tract of land to a big promoter for a figure five times larger than anyone expected. It is rather trite stuff in its way, but the lines are fairly good and the acting is well up to the usual standard of the Empire Players. Robert Leslie as Anne's husband makes the audience sympathize with his simplicity and inherent good nature. Frank Camp as the father-in-law does his usual good work; Edith Taliaferro is her own sweet self, and House Baker Jameson is given his customary thankless role as the bragging young super-salesman. A good bit of very broad character work is contributed by Mat Burns as Uncle Henry. To conclude, the acting is on the whole most commendable, but the play itself is a little too mundane and commonplace to be tremendously interesting.

TIVOLI—"THE BIG PARADE"

"The Big Parade" is entering on its second week at the Tivoli. With last week's reviewer we most sincerely lament the apparent necessity of the conventional love motif in an otherwise so outstanding movie. If ever there was a picture capable of standing by virtue of sheer artistry and dramatic power alone this should have been the one. The section of the action devoted to the "Big Parade" itself was epic, immense, awful in the strictest sense of the word, each incident unshrinkingly accurate in terrible detail. We shall never forget "Slim," the gigantic riveter, stalking stoically through a death-ridden wood, taking huddled corpses in his stride, as without missing a step he raised his rifle and fired at a German sharpshooter high among the branches of a tree; nor how the German struggled for an agonizing moment to keep his balance, only to pitch headlong down to the ground, a pathetic crumpled body for Slim to spit upon as he strode unconcernedly on. A picture that opens with the martial blare of a brass band and later shows the hero smoking the cigarette from the lips of the dead German he had just killed—such a picture might well be shown periodically to the sabre-rattling ministries of modern bellicose states.

"COMMON CLAY"—VICTORIA

There is something about a man who knows his job that demands one's respect, no matter what the job is. Thus it is that we take our hats off to Mr. Vaughan Glaser, returning to the Victoria Theatre in "Common Clay" this week. It seems that Mr. Glaser knows all the tricks of the stock company and how to use them. The fact that his Players are one of the very few really successful stock companies in Canada is sufficient proof of this. He is remarkably successful in creating that "homey" feeling between players and audience so essential to the success of stock. Regarding the premier production, "Common Clay," the least said the better. To our minds it is a play containing the maximum of moralising (an art which Miss Ruth Amos has perfected to a fine degree) and the minimum of dramatic art. However, as Mr. Glaser evidently predicted, the audience swallowed it whole, and didn't even grimace, even when it came to the piece of flagrant gagging in the opening of the second act.

However, we have one consolation. The remainder of the season at the Victoria will contain less of the bedroom farces with which the fall season simply reeked, according to present indications.

GRADS MEET VARSITY-MARLBOROS-SUBS AT ARENA TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

It seems as though we are going to have some hockey this year after all. The weather man has had a small change of heart, and now the Jennings Cup series will get under way just a week later than the original schedule calls for.

We notice a letter in the correspondence column re playing the games in the Arena. We must remember that whenever a game is played on artificial ice quite a staff is necessary to look after the plant, and as inter-faculty sport has never been a paying proposition as far as "gates" are concerned, such a procedure would hit the various faculty athletic associations rather heavily. Rugby may have helped pay for the Arena, but the support the students are giving to the games that are played there means that a whole lot more rugby will have to be played.

The boxers and wrestlers came out on rather the short end of the scoring in their trip to the States over the week-end. The boxers seem to be just as good as anything West Point has to offer, but the wrestlers were underneath most of the time. Last year was just about the same.

But when it comes to the Intercollegiate title Varsity has been able to hold its place.

This year Queen's promise to have a good entry for the assault, and their hopes are high. The Tricolour has a good coach this year, and that means a lot to any assault team, but we are inclined to think that more than one year will be necessary to produce a winning team.

The Grads are playing their farewell game to-night, and then over the water for them. This wonder team is not expected to meet much opposition in the Olympics, but they sure will show the people at St. Moritz some real speed in hockey. Rumour has it that one of the teams that the Victoria Jennings Cup team played in their December trip has been mentioned as possibly the United States Olympic nomination. If that is so, it would be lots of fun to watch the game.

The Seniors were to have played in Preston last night, but that game has been indefinitely postponed. Even Senior O.H.A. has to bow to the will of the whims of so-called "high and low pressure."

GRADS BID FAREWELL IN EXHIBITION GAME

Allan Cup Holders Will Engage Marlboros, Seniors and Subs

OLYMPIC REPRESENTATIVES

Varsity Grads, holders of the Allan Cup and Canada's 1928 Olympic representatives, make their last appearance in Toronto at the Varsity Arena to-night. All the members of the famous team will be seen in action, and it promises to be one of the events of the season.

In the first period the Grads will play the Varsity Seniors. Three members of the present Varsity team were at one time members of the Grads' outfit, namely, Kirkpatrick, Devins and Richards. There is keen rivalry between these men and the Grads. Kirkpatrick especially takes a special delight in stepping into the Allan Cup holders.

In the second period Marlboros will oppose the Grads. The champions defeated the Dukes in the S.P.A. series, but the latter have improved greatly in the past month. In the last period the Grads will be opposed by an all-star team chosen from the other two teams and the Grads subs. There has been a large advance sale of tickets for the exhibition, and the Arena should be packed. There have been few more popular teams than the Grads, and this their last appearance in Toronto should see them greeted by a large and enthusiastic crowd.

JR. SCHOOL WIN 31-20 ST. MICHAEL'S LOSERS

New School Squad Manages to Win Opener of Group 5 Series

Junior School defeated St. Mike's 31-20 in the opening game of Group 5. School trotted out a complete array of new faces, none of last year's squad remaining, but managed to gain a slight edge over their perennial group rivals. There was a notable deficiency in foul scoring on both teams, St. Mike's netting only one out of the thirteen tries granted them through School's alleged roughness. This may be explained by the presence of a pair of well-known rugbyists on the S.P.S. squad.

Both teams are strengthened over last year, St. Mike's also being mostly newcomers. Sammons for St. Mike's and Davies for School were the opposing high scorers, the former worrying around the School defence continually.

Notice of the players concerned is drawn to a practice game between Varsity Seniors and Junior School basketball teams, scheduled for Thursday, 5-6, upper gym.

BOXERS EARN 4 WINS WRESTLERS DOWNED

Trip to West Point Results in Four-Three Victory for Boxing Squad

WRESTLERS LOSE 6 IN 7

The local boxing and wrestling squad has just returned from a trip to West Point. Though boxers gained four decisions in seven, the wrestlers came out with but one in seven. Galsky at 115 lb. was the only winner, securing a time decision over Bennett. Of the other bouts, only two falls were secured in the whole evening, and two falls in seven bouts means pretty even competition.

The boxing was more productive of action, and the first two bouts went to Toronto by the K.O. route, both Beer and McGee disposing of their opponents in the second round, while Lescombe and Mahon each gained decisions.

The results:

- BOXING
- 115 Beer defeated Morrow. K.O. in second.
 - 125 McGee defeated Forest. K.O. in second.
 - 135 Reynolds defeated Spratt. Judges' decision.
 - 145 Lescombe defeated Gavan. Judges' decision.
 - 160 Joyce defeated Jackson. Judges' decision.
 - 175 Mahon defeated Hills. Judges' decision.
 - Heavy. Muse defeated Hills. Judges' decision.

- WRESTLING
- 115 Galsky defeated Bennett. Time advantage.
 - 125 Hastings defeated Bishop. Time advantage.
 - 135 Morrow defeated Grant. Time advantage.
 - 145 Packard defeated Diprose. A fall at 4:10.
 - 158 Meehan defeated Furber. Time advantage.
 - 175 Meehan defeated Shute. A fall at 7:15.
 - Heavy. Hammock defeated Calnan. Time advantage.

Officials: Boxing—Referee, E. D. Forbes; Judges—J. P. Doyle, C. L. Diehm; Wrestling—Referee, C. G. K. Harris.

BASKETBALL ENTHUSIASTS ATTEND LARGE PRACTICE

Fourteen Try Out at U.T.S. Gym for Women's Inter-collegiate Team

Fourteen basketball enthusiasts turned out last evening to the first practice of the women's Intercollegiate team held at the U.T.S. gym. This number is exceedingly promising and shows keen interest in this sport.

Edith Buchanan and Edith Blackwell, star forwards of last year's team, were on the floor and showed old time form. Two of last year's subs, Emma Weir and Dorothy Kerr, again show marked enthusiasm. Marion Forward, who has an infected finger, will be unable to play for a week, and it is expected that Mildred Wilkins will be out next day. Francis Service, unable to play hockey, will add further interest in appearing at practices.

Representatives from the various colleges give all indications of splendid material. It has been suggested by Coach Phyllis Griffiths that if sufficient numbers turn out for practices—even those without Intercollegiate experience—two teams will be formed.

All the girls sufficiently interested in basketball to support the practices appreciate the time and effort which Phyllis expends in the hope of producing a winning team.

Eleanor Taylor has been appointed manager and anticipates an even larger turnout at the next practice, Wednesday, from 7-8, at U.T.S. gym.

Co-eds who wear cotton stockings are either over-confident or else don't give a whoop.—Battalion.

Kirkpatrick, Captain of Senior Team May Resign

It is rumoured that Herb Kirkpatrick, star defence man on the Varsity Seniors, and captain of the team, will not be in action against the Grads to-night. He is seriously considering a very flattering offer received from the Ravinas of the Canpro League and may be lost to Varsity. If he signs, his loss will be a severe blow to the Varsity outfit, but he will take with him the best wishes of the local sporting fraternity.

Parchments and Portfolios Make Attractive Display at Simcoe Hall

The visitor to Simcoe Hall these days will notice an exhibit of rare interest and beauty awaiting him immediately inside the main entrance. It is a display of the various documents conveying to the University the greetings of her sister universities in all parts of the world received during the recent Centenary celebrations.

For the student of such documents these parchments are of remarkable interest. Most of them display the crests of the institution from which they come. Some have the college colours, and there is variety enough in the script used to mystify most of us. The linguist will be in for a field day here; most of them are in our homely mother tongue; many are couched in stately Latin; and there is the odd one in French, Spanish, Italian, German, Swedish, Hebrew and other tongues at which even a reporter would not guess. The signatures are of course illegible.

Another feature of the exhibit is the collection of portfolios and cylindrical leather cases in which these greetings were sent. Many of these are handsomely lettered and decorated. Perhaps the most noteworthy is the portfolio from l'Institut Pasteur de Paris.

At the University of Michigan each graduation member of the 1927 football squad is to receive a ring.

Its scope is wide, and its suggestions will deal not only with the curriculum proper, but also with the conduct of student affairs and such matters as improvement of library lighting conditions, and prompt dismissal of classes.

The main points in an undergraduate report just presented to the faculty at The College of the City of New York propose revision of certain prescribed courses in order to permit greater freedom in the choice of electives and the institution of honors courses. In developing these points the student investigators became critical of some of the existing courses.

Has As Its Principal Object
Promotion of Good Feeling

That ostracism and social oblivion were the lot of the foreign students attending the University of Toronto was the opinion expressed by an editorial in "The Varsity" recently. Information was also sought on any society which might seek to improve the lot of these students.

"I see no evidence of it whatever," said Professor J. C. McLennan, Director of the Physical Laboratory, when interviewed by "The Varsity" in regard to the stigma imposed upon the foreign student.

Prominent undergraduates also hooted the idea of there being any drawback attached to studying here as a stranger from another country.

Moreover, there exists at this University the Association of International Students devoted to the promotion of good-will between foreign and Canadian students. Mr. V. O. D. King, a prominent member of this Association, supplied "The Varsity" with some of the more striking features of the constitution:

The objects of the International Students' Association are:

"(a) To promote friendly relationship between students of other countries in the University of Toronto and to create mutual understanding between Canadian students and those of other countries.

"(b) To study Canada from the standpoint of her political, social, economic and industrial institutions and to compare those of the various countries with those of the various countries with those of the U. of T."

Mr. E. J. Hartmann, President of St. Michael's College Student Council, when interviewed on the question, declared that in his experience foreign

Prominent King's Counsel Regards University as Proper Place for Frank Discussion

A U.C. GRADUATE OF '97

"I am debating in favour of Communism in Hart House because I was asked to do so," said J. L. Counsell, K.C., authority on Communism, who will participate in the Hart House debate this evening.

"I believe in a frank discussion of the principles of Communism in a university debate," continued Mr. Counsell, in an interview. "I first became interested in Communism when I was defending the strike leaders in 1917. I did not understand what they were talking about when they spoke of third internationals, so I made it my business to study Communism."

Toronto Professors Take Mild View, and Proprietors of Tea Rooms Still Milder

Classroom courtesy or rather discourtesy is a subject which is being hotly discussed at the University of Michigan and called forth an article in which it was stated that many students were rather more careless in their habits in a classroom than they would be in a night club.

Yawning audibly and visibly, sprawling and stretching seems to have been among the vices discussed and deprecated. Upon being interviewed, many members of the faculty said while these faults are more or less noticeable they did not bother them to any great extent.

"Of course if such habits were entirely overcome it would make the lecturer's task a much more pleasant one," was the remark of one professor. "Still no glaring exhibitions of rudeness have ever come to my notice."

Mr. Langton Gives Interesting Address on "Architectural Study"

STRESSES ORIGINALITY

At a regular meeting of the Engineering Society of S.P.S., Mr. Langton, one of the older members of the architectural profession of Toronto, spoke on "Architectural Study." Prof. Langton has spent much time in travel and study in the interests of his profession.

The meeting opened with several musical numbers rendered by "Gord" Holden and his syncopators, more commonly known as the Toke Orchestra.

Harley Russell, President of the Athletic Society, presented medals to those who had distinguished themselves in the assault-at-arms, and also to "Johnny" Goss for breaking an Interfaculty swimming record.

Chairman "Bill" Duncan introduced Mr. Langton, who chose as his subject what might be termed "a commentary on Architectural Study." He declared that the end of design was to produce the ideal, and pointed out the great study required in the fundamentals so that one might be free to think. He stressed the value of originality in planning, and stated that although the style of plan might be old, the treatment could be entirely new.

He compared at some length the two styles—Classic and Gothic, and showed by means of slides many essential differences between them.

He emphasized again the danger of following slavishly the old styles, and impressed the members of the society of trying to develop that fine taste with the absolute necessity which is so essential to good work.

At the conclusion of the meeting several members of the faculty, the Engineering Society executive, and the Architectural department met in the Sketch Room and had tea.

"I'd like to go!" he remarked. Then he added ominously, "I'd tell 'em abaat Communism!"

Toronto Flying Club Invites All Members of the University to Attend

The first lecture in the course on Civil Aviation, under the auspices of the Toronto Flying Club in co-operation with the Extension Department of the University, was delivered by Prof. J. H. Parkin last night. The subject was "Air Properties and Their Measure." This was an elementary and semi-technical talk on the fundamental properties of the atmosphere wherein they affected the performance of aircraft. After discussing the weight and viscosity of the air, and the value of meteorological observations, the lecturer proceeded to consider the flow of fluids past bodies of simple shapes, such as plates, cylinders, spheres, illustrating the eddy flow with large diagrams. He then considered in a general way the stream-lining of bodies with a view of diminishing the eddy resistance. He introduced the principle of faring of struts, which he will consider in more detail in another lecture.

The lecture was concluded by slides showing in a clear manner the form of eddies and the distribution of pressure.

WYCLIFFE WINS DECISION IN DEBATE AGAINST VICTORIA

Discussion Is On Relative Virtues of the Wife of Yesterday and To-day

The question debated last night by Victoria and Wycliffe was, "Resolved that the old-fashioned girl would make a better wife than the modern girl." R. L. Fredenberg and C. W. Leslie maintained the affirmative for Victoria, Messrs. Jackson and Perkins of Wycliffe supporting the negative. Despite the fact that discussion was largely centred on the question as to whether or no the girl of 1920 was to be considered old-fashioned, some rather interesting points of view were advanced. Wycliffe apparently condones drinking and smoking if one's prospective life-mate can make a good hundred yards dash and understands the principles of biology, whereas Victoria considers that society is at the extreme limit of a swing toward looser social relationships, and favours a return to the good old days, or rather nights, in shirt sleeves and carpet slippers in front of a roaring fire. Wycliffe won the judges' decision before the house adjourned for the customary eats.

Undergraduate Life Faces Collapse

Similar Eruption in Past at U. of M.

Is Student Government a joke?

"The Gateway," student newspaper of the University of Alberta, asks this question in a recent issue. Lack of interest in student affairs had made it impossible to carry on business at Council meetings; a number of members favoured resigning in a body.

"The Gateway" reports:

"The concluding item was the very fundamental question of attendance—or rather lack of it—at Students' Council meetings. As President Oke explained, things have come to such a pass that it is almost impossible to get a quorum at these meetings, so slight is the interest of the student body as a whole. The suggestion was made that Students' Union meetings be held in lecture hours; but as was pointed out, the authorities had granted this privilege some years ago, and, shameful to report, the naughty students had made a holiday of it.

"Such was the exasperation of the members of the Council that certain of their number favoured resignation as a protest."

Says the Editorial:

"Do the President of the Union, the Chief Justice of the Students' Court, and the Editor of 'The Gateway' take their orders from Dr. Tory (the president of the U. of A.)?"

"Will the Students' Union ever be worth a whoop in Hades to anybody?"

"Seriously, however, we must face the fact that our system of student government has come to almost a full stop. Interest in student organization is at an irreducible minimum—no one cares what happens to anything.

"It is the honest belief of many student officials that even the resignation of the entire Students' Council, and the complete cessation of activity in all student organizations, both athletic and literary, would not cause more than a ripple in the serene calm of student life at the U. of A. It would be interesting to find out."

This is the second student disturbance in the last few years. Last year the calm of the University of Manitoba was also disrupted.

SOCIAL DISTRESS IS PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITY

Prof. Urwick Will Deliver First Lecture of Series at 3 O'clock This Afternoon

"The ultimate responsibility for social distress rests upon an informed and socially-minded public, and courses such as this will play a useful part in developing better understanding," explains the Department of Social Service in introducing a course of lectures to be opened by Professor E. F. Urwick, now acting-director of the department, replacing F. A. Dale, now on leave of absence.

"The social problems of any community can never be solved by a handful of professional social workers," continued the Department. It is understood that this course is creating much interest among social service workers.

The course is under the auspices of the Extension Department as well.

The first lecture will be given to-day by Professor Urwick at 3 p.m. at 45 St. George Street.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire To Die Quietly or With Ecstasy?

Do you think that the daily papers should publish detailed accounts of the hanging and electrocution of criminals?

F. Perkin, II Vic.: No, I don't. Yet as long as a newspaper's sole ambition is to increase circulation it is useless to expect anything else. We all like our little thrill of horror, and many of us are satisfied this way.

Miss F. Ackerman, I U.C.: No, I don't. Too sordid to be brought before the eyes of the public.

Miss Jean Dow, III U.C.: No, because it caters to the morbid tendencies of the minds of the public.

H. E. Cook, I U.C.: No, I don't. I think that details are better not given to the public. They are not pleasant.

Miss H. McIntyre, III Household Science: No, because I think that they enlarge on it too much.

J. J. Knight, II U.C.: Personally such accounts pain me when I see others reading them, but I don't mind reading them myself.

Miss H. Appleby, III Household Science: No, I don't. They work on people's minds with a bad effect.

L. R. Bell, II E. and H. U.C.: No. Such lurid accounts far from preventing murder encourage many to seek fame through the accomplishment of "master crimes," e.g., Leopold and Loeb.

W. Eisenberg, II Commerce and Finance: I certainly think they should! After all, they are news-papers and should tell us everything that is news, even if it is disagreeable to some people.

E. M. Young, II E. and H. S.M.C.: Yes, I think such accounts should be published. To the imaginative person they act as an active deterrent to crime by showing what is the ultimate outcome of breaking the law.

F. R. Saxby, I C. and F.: No, I don't. It makes it altogether too gruesome.

Benn C. Littner, III U.C.: Why, certainly. We are living in an age where murder is both common and sometimes imperative. The gruesome details of the newspapers are certainly useful to humanity.

R. T. Dennis, I C. and F.: No, I don't think that is necessary.

AN END OR A MEANS?

At one time or another we have all heard a supporter of the Oxford system of education lamenting the lack of study on the part of Canadian students during the summer vacation. The objection does not apply to those in the practical faculties whose outside work supplements both their finances and their technical knowledge but is aimed of course at students in Arts.

With regard to people doing honour work in Arts the critics have undoubtedly a strong case, if we concede that we may excuse those in the general course. The honour students are required to read their authors intensely, which is only right and just. They are also expected to comment on their reading after due and leisurely reflection. It is obvious that if this programme is to be carried out properly, with proper periods of recreation and rest for the brain, little time is left either for work during the summer months or for participation in those frenzied and highly specialized student activities that crowd the winter days. And to abandon the latter is to be stigmatized by one's fellows as "a plugger," "a grind," as one who having no wedding garment (in this case, a detailed list of activities to his credit) must be cast forth into exterior darkness. It is impossible, however, to remain long in a Canadian university and not realize that a tremendous majority of the students and a fair percentage of the professors believe that student activities are as essential to a modern liberal education as the study of books.

The heavy stress placed on extra-curricular activities, both during the term and vacation, reminds us that the belief in "liberal knowledge its own end" is receiving some sharp blows as the result of political and economic changes. Believing as we do in democracy and state education, we encourage rather than disparage the man or woman who works to obtain an honour degree in Arts for professional purposes, even if he or she should slur over parts of the work and jar the sensibilities of some academic expert. The direct influence of the economic system on the university is apparent in the tendency of many arts faculties to become technical faculties. The idea is widespread that one should draw immediate money returns after getting the degree; and in the cases of people who must work so hard to pay for the said degree, the hope is a natural one. The heavy registration in commerce and finance is significant in view of its practical purpose. No one is paid very highly for teaching, and the registration in classics is small.

There is, moreover, among us the fear lest we be caught by the witchery of books and rendered impractical thereby. Books are all very well in their place but "the general idea" of a period or movement in history is sufficient. Detail is good only for technical problems of the present. Our problem, with which so many of us set out to deal light-heartedly, is to produce a mind both strong and superficial enough to survive in the modern world.

The autumn air hangs still with excitement and suspense. A thousand spectators in the amphitheatre of the world are watching. The participants toe the line and wait the gun. It seems as if the boogie man was giving the lads and lassies down in Campbellford a little thrill. However, the matter has its inconsistencies. If any green barrel with pink and white stripes started chasing us down our front hall, would we stay around to see about it? We would not. We would go away from there, right then, and snappy too.

Yet the people down in Campbellford are still on the job. If we lived in Campbellford, and such phantasma were prevalent, that town would make the w.k. Deserted Village look like the Great Hall at 12.30.

Some of the runners are weighted down with practicality, and maintain a slower, firmer tread. And now, losing his head, one rushes here and there into blind alleys, before he finds the path. There are ditches to cross, ladders to climb, and traps to trammel up the feet. Tempting wa-hoos from beyond the fence proclaim the struggle not worth while; green meadows beckon, and shady paths,—but the race goes on.

It is the last lap of the way! And still the multitudes are watching. The last great barrier is up. The trainers wait and gage the issue. Every runner is now putting forth his utmost. Many have fallen by the way. Heavy-foot is coming on at the same steady pace. Mask-face and Penant-hung are sprinting to make up for lost time. U.C. PARLIAMENTARY CLUB HOLDS MEETING

House Debates the Question
"Resolved That Manners Make the Man"

GOVERNMENT IS SUSTAINED

The recently formed administration was sustained by a small majority at the meeting of the University College Parliamentary Club which took place yesterday afternoon in the Junior Common Room of that college.

Before the debate proper, the House occupied itself with sundry business, most important of which was a motion passed empowering the government to arrange an open house debate with the University College Women's Literary Society.

The newly formed cabinet was also announced as consisting of Messrs. Gelber, McMurray, and the premier, Mr. Plumtre.

The debate, "Resolved that manners maketh the man," was then entered upon, with an appeal by Mr. R. Soward on the grounds that education and folks is to throw away the rest of the bottle.

VARSITY GRADS DEFEAT COMBINES 10-2 IN FAREWELL GAME

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity Seniors journey to Peterboro to-night to play their return game with the Petes in the Senior O.H.A. The locals experienced little difficulty in taking the measure of the Peterboro team in the game played in Toronto, but there is no telling what may happen in the return game. Last year the Grads decisively defeated the Petes in the first game, only to have the latter show a reversal of form in the second game and almost upset the dope completely.

Peterboro are considerably weakened this year by the loss of several of their star players to the ranks of the pros, but they have some newcomers who show prospects of developing into first raters. Cane and Rose are the veterans of the squad, and the former usually supplies plenty of fireworks in any game.

The Varsity undergrads were not bothered by an inferiority complex in the game last night. They waded right into the Olympics and out-scored the wonder team in their third of the game. They got half of the goals.

Murray Snyder was the hero of the first period. He handled all the hot shots that Porter and Trotter could offer him and did it with neatness and despatch.

Toronto turned out in full force to bid the Grads bon voyage, and it was a treat to see the Arena filled for a change. Incidentally the crowd was pro-Grad, giving Porter and Trotter a great hand every time they went up the ice.

SENIOR DENTS TROUNCE SCHOOL TO TUNE OF 13-7

Four Personal Fouls Are Meted Out in One-sided Basketball Fixture

Senior Dents easily won from Senior School basketball team in an interfaculty game played in the upper gym yesterday afternoon. The score was no indication of the game. The final score was 13-7 in favor of Dents.

Roland and Beube were the outstanding men for Dents, while it could hardly be said that there was any one outstanding man on School's team. They were evenly matched.

The game turned somewhat toward rugby in the last few minutes, both Beube of Dents and Swartman of S.P.S. being eliminated from the game with four personal fouls.

Senior Dents: Currings, r.f. (1); Merrill, l.f. (2); Walden, c.; Horwitz (3), Beube (3), Roland (4), Powell.

Senior S.P.S.: Collins, r.f. (1); Parkins, l.f. (3); McKinney, c.; Swartman, r.g. (1); Trimble (2); Shieds, Emerson, Ing, Woodside.

VARSITY SENIORS SURPRISE GRADS IN OPENING TUSSELE

But Olympians Pile Up Score of 10-2 in Following Fixtures Against Marlboros and Subs

SNYDER STARS IN GOAL

Last Appearance of Famous Blue Machine in Toronto Makes Fine Impression on Fans

The 1928 Canadian Olympic hockey team firmly convinced the farewell crowd at the Arena last night that they are everything they are supposed to be. The final score of the game, in which three teams opposed the Grads, was 10-2, and Varsity Intercollegiate were the only team to out-score them, McMullen passing to Richards, who counted on a long high shot at a difficult angle. The Marlboros were shut out 3-0, while the Subs allowed 7 against 1. Of those seven goals, five were scored in the last four minutes when the exhibition developed into a mere practice.

Undoubtedly the first period was the choice of the evening, when two fresh teams opposed each other, and the Intercollegiate were out to avenge their defeat of the S.P.A. series. Murray Snyder was the star player, and the way that net guardian handled the Grad offerings was nothing short of miraculous—high and low, fast and slow were all alike to him. Legon, the erstwhile Queen's player, uncorked some tricky hockey and was dangerous at all times.

Of the Grads, all that can be said is that they ARE the Grads, and whenever they took the notion to go up the ice, either combination or solo effort, a thrill was given the crowd. It didn't matter whether it was the hurdling Porter, the speedy Trotter or the tricky Hudson, a thrill was always there.

The second period was productive of less action until the last four minutes, when the Grads seemed to have recouped some energy to not only stave off the rushes of the Dukes but stage a few themselves. On two successive rushes by Trotter and Delahey, Baker made wonderful saves. Alec Carrick donned a different sweater for this period, and would have made one or two trips to the bench were it not for the fact that some crook panned off a cow bell on Referee Collett and he was ashamed to hear the tinkle.

In the final frame the "Subs" proved almost equal to the "Regulars" until old habits returned and they just "practiced."

Line-up:
Grads: Goal, Sullivan; defence, Taylor, Porter; centre, H. Plaxton; wings, Trotter, Hudson (Gordon in last period).

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, D. Carrick, A. Carrick; centre, McMullen; wings, Harley, Richards.

2nd Period—
Marlboros: Goal, Baker; defence, Nugent, A. Carrick; centre, Miller; wings, Heintzman, McPherson.

3rd Period—
Grad Subs: Goal, Mueller; defence,

INTERMEDIATES TOP NEWMARKET SEXTET

Blue and White Sweeps On With Decisive Win Over League Favourites

LITTLE STARS

Varsity Intermediates made it three straight last night when they defeated Newmarket on their home ice by the score of 2-0. The vanquished were at one time considered favourites for their group, so that the Blue and White has added a very desirable scalp to its growing collection. The Intermediates, working as they are now, represent a serious threat to league honours.

The first period was rather conservative all round from the point of view of results. Neither team could get through the opposing defence, and all the tries from outside the blue line failed. In the second stanza, however, the time changed: Varsity got going and scored. After that they took no chances and played an air-tight defensive game. Little in goal had much to do with the white side of Varsity's sheet.

Ponsonby, of last year's Junior Varsity team, was the best man on the ice for Newmarket.

Varsity line-up:

GRAHAM SMASHES MILE RECORD AT INDOOR TRACK MEET

Varsity's Star Distance Runner Clips 9 1-5 Seconds From Old Time

NEW RECORD IS 4.40 4-5

Shot-put is Keenly Contested and an Extra Throw is Required to Decide Winner

Wally Graham, Varsity's crack distance runner, established a new Interfaculty record of 4.40 4-5 for the mile run in the indoor meet last night. The old record held by McAuliffe was 4.50. Graham led from the start of the race, but was closely pressed in the latter stages by "Hap" Gilbert of U.C. and C. P. Wilson of U.C. Only four seconds separated the first three runners, all finishing under the old record. Gilbert and Wilson furnished a distinct surprise to the fans. They are both promising prospects for the distance events next year, and will do much to fill the gap left by the graduation of Wally Graham.

Harley Russell and Campbell Maheo tied in the 220 yards dash, the time being 24 seconds flat. The record of 23 4-5 secs. established by C. A. Morrison of S.P.S. will still stand. Russell attempted on a second try to equal the record, but was unsuccessful. D. J. McKenzie of S.P.S. finished third in the event.

Baldwin of Meds and McKenzie had a merry old tussle in the shot-put. At the end of the regulation number of throws they were tied at 30 ft. 8½ in. However, in a final and deciding throw both far exceeded their previous puts. Baldwin won the event with 32 ft. 3 in., and McKenzie of S.P.S. was a close second with 32 ft. 1 in. Marshall of Dents was third in this event.

The standing of the faculties to date in the meet:
U.C. 19; Dents 14; S.P.S. 12; Meds 6; Vic. 3.

From 10 to 12 per cent of the freshmen taking chemistry fail, is the conclusion reached by Prof. F. E. Brown of the University of Iowa. Professor Brown has been teaching chemistry for eleven years.

Interfaculty Hockey

All Interfaculty hockey games scheduled for to-day will be postponed. Games scheduled for tomorrow will be played if there is ice.

SMOKING VERBOTTEN IN UNIV. BUILDINGS

Members of Staff May Burn Incense at Altar of "Milady Nicotine"—In Their Rooms

CONDITION OF INSURANCE

Old King Nicotine received a severe jolt recently, when Dean Ogden of Cornell University informed the students that smoking was forbidden under the roof of any of the buildings of that university.

Within the walls of our own university edifices, at U.C., S.P.S., Baldwin House, the Library, etc., we are constantly being reminded by placards that there is "No smoking allowed in this building." The reason for this seemingly harsh prohibition is not any particular aversion on the part of authorities against the "naughty weed." It is simply that the insurance companies refuse to take the risk against fire unless this precaution is taken. As a matter of fact, they can hardly be blamed, considering the age and inflammable condition of most of our buildings, particularly University College and S.P.S.

Undergraduates in general are considered by university authorities "trustworthy in keeping this rule, for there is no one in particular appointed to enforce the regulation, nor is there any fixed penalty for its violation. This leniency is due to the fact that smoking has been found not to be very prevalent among undergraduates within most buildings. Of course the members of the staff may smoke in their own rooms. Outside of this, the staff is expected to set the example to the students generally.

The placards, however, naturally become so familiar to the student body that they go as unnoticed as the ticking of a clock. Consequently there is the occasional lighting of a pipe by some forgetful undergraduate, but he is quickly reminded of his breach and back to his pocket goes the pipe.

mutters to himself the one-finger fiend at the piano. "Why worry if the neighbours don't?"

Tonight is telephone night. The hour approaches when every man present will keep his weekly telephone date with his folks at home.

Just a few minutes' chat with mother or dad—but what a return in good spirits, in confidence. A few cents for a week's real happiness—and you can believe their folks appreciate it!

Yours will, too. "Long Distance" knows the lower evening rates to your home—ask her.

NO DISCRIMINATION

students received precisely the same treatment around the University as others. It was not possible, he remarked, for them to escape the stigma "foreign," but that would apply equally to Canadian students studying in any European university.

Mr. Frank Walters, head of the newly formed American Club at St. Michael's, was another executive who had seen no discrimination against foreign students, if American students were included in that class.

"Certainly nothing of the kind exists around St. Mike's," said the President.

STUDENTS' MANNERS

rooms with the legs over the back of seats in front of them, or who think nothing of wandering into a lecture twenty-five minutes late has called forth some caustic comments from the lecturers which usually end with an invitation to withdraw. In the main the members of various faculties seem satisfied with the manners of their classes.

When proprietors of places such as tea rooms, where students, both male and female, spend much of their leisure and allowance, had a different story to tell.

The owner of one snug little tea room which is quite close to St. George Street, and very popular with a large number of students of a more or less respectable college, remarked that as a rule she found most students very polite and considerate and enjoyed serving them very much indeed, but occasionally she met with experience which struck her as unusual. For instance, while she had no objections to the women touching up any impaired kalsomining, she did object to them combing their hair. Even a more or less credible member of the male sex was guilty of such a misdemeanor and unblushingly combed his hair, using the sideboard as a dressing table. However, the same proprietress remarked that she wished the women students wouldn't swear so much when the regular afternoon poker game went against them.

As far as restaurants, tea rooms, etc., are concerned, there does not seem to be as much mental and aesthetic anguish caused by the unrefined acts of student patrons as the conversation of medical students in Hart House or elsewhere, where entirely masculine groups of diners are banded together. Some of the conversation which ensues when the med school shop is, to put it mildly, somewhat disconcerting. How it is with the medettes, the writer has been unable to learn, but he has hopes.

NEWMAN CLUB PLANS SEVEN-DAY RETREAT

Father Basil Doyle to Give Series of Daily
Lectures

OUTSIDERS WELCOME

There are few better ways to start the New Year than by making a Retreat. So think the members of Newman Club. This year the Retreat will be held in January. Father Basil Doyle, a charter member of the club and the star back-field player of the famous Varsity team, Dominion champions of 1914, is conducting it. Since ordination Father Doyle has had many and varied experiences. He began his priestly career in New York. From there he journeyed to Portland, Oregon, and is now in Tennessee, giving missions. Father Austin Malone is authority for the statement that Father Basil Doyle is one of the best missionaries in the Paulist order.

This year the Retreat has assumed proportions fitting the dignity of the new chapel. Instead of the usual three-day Retreat there will be a complete week of lectures. It is going to be conducted in the form of a series of lectures on Catholic doctrine. The evening services will begin at 7.30 and will comprise the always interesting Question Box and the lecture. Father Doyle intends giving a short instruction after Mass, which begins at 7.45. Any questions relating to religion placed in the Question Box, which is near the door of the church, are answered each evening.

This Retreat is essentially for Catholic students of the University and affiliated colleges. Any other students, however, who might be interested in hearing a Catholic priest discuss the doctrines of his church will be very welcome.

The list of subjects to be discussed is as follows:

Sunday, Jan. 22, 10 a.m.—The Opening Sermon.

Sunday, Jan. 22, 4 p.m.—What Think Ye of Christ.

Monday, Jan. 23, 7.30 p.m.—God and Myself.

Tuesday, Jan. 24, 7.30 p.m.—The Bible and Evolution.

Wednesday, Jan. 25, 7.30 p.m.—The True Meaning of the Lord's Supper.

Thursday, Jan. 26, 7.30 p.m.—The Secret of Church Union.

Friday, Jan. 27, 7.30 p.m.—One Religion as Good as Another.

Saturday, Jan. 28, 7.30 p.m.—Holy Hour—Confessions.

Sunday, Jan. 29, 10 a.m.—Faith and Reason.

Sunday, Jan. 29, 4 p.m.—Why I Am a Catholic.

A St. John's Ambulance course was started last Tuesday for members of the Diploma course in Physical Training. There is room for about ten more in the course, and an invitation is extended to any women undergraduates, in any year and course, who are interested in first-aid, to take advantage of this opening. The classes are on Tuesdays and Thursdays at three o'clock at Lillian Massey.

Has Done Much For U. of T.

CHIEF JUSTICE

Record of Activity and Service

To-day Sir William Mulock, K.C.M.G., Chancellor of the University of Toronto and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, celebrates his eighty-fourth birthday.

Sir William, besides being among the most prominent jurists in Canada, has played a great part in the formation and unification of the University of Toronto.

When Sir William Mulock, then "Mr. Mulock," was vice-chancellor of the University, the colleges now federated were disunited and scattered.

At the suggestion of Sir William, a movement was inaugurated which, finally resulted in the University Act of 1887.

Sir William Mulock was born in Bondhead, York County. He attended the University of Toronto, graduated, and undertook the study of law. Five years later he was called to the Bar.

Sir William was elected to the Parliament of Canada in 1882, and was re-elected until 1896, when he was appointed Postmaster General. In this office he accomplished one of his greatest achievements. He turned a deficit of millions in this department into a surplus of $300,000 at the end of seven years, at the same time doubling the service and reducing the rate one-third.

Over a quarter of a century ago Sir William Mulock was described in the following language by the eminent biographer Edward Gadsby:—"Sir William is first, last and always a fighter. He stands out as a brilliant man of affairs, a statesman of large designs, a shrewd and successful administrator of national interests."

The following anecdote, in which Sir William's character is aptly illustrated, is told by Augustus Bride in his "Sons of Canada":

"Sir William Mulock once paid a thousand dollars for a street car ticket (one of the six-for-a-quarter kind, for this was in 1915). Sir William was then Chairman of the Patriotic Fund for Toronto and York County. When the returns were coming in, this ticket was one of the donations. Who sent it nobody knew. Sir William proposed an auction sale for the ticket, and himself led off. His bid was briskly raised hundred by (Continued on page 2)

Interfaculty Open-House Debate
Held Last Night at St.

PROFESSORS NOT PERFECT

Groups and Essays Suggested as System of Education to Replace Lectures

Why come to University? was the question asked by Miss Victoria Mueller of Loretto Abbey, at the women's interfaculty open-house debate at St. Joseph's College last evening, proposing the motion, "Resolved that this House is of the opinion that lectures are helpful to the undergraduate." Miss Mueller stated that "we come to University to gain ideas and data out of which to construct a scheme of life." Lectures provided a point of contact between young minds and old, a contact with culture in the universal aspect. The professor interspersed his lectures with his own personal research work which could not be obtained anywhere else. If lectures had been of no help, the correspondence course would have been ideal, but its acknowledged deficiency was the lack of personal inspiration. "Lectures," Miss Mueller concluded, "must be the vocal disquisition of experimental data."

Miss Rhoda Howe of University College, in opposing the resolution, stressed the fact that professors were not super men and women, but were subject to the same weaknesses as undergraduates. This very fact was sufficient proof that the time spent in delivering a lecture could have been better devoted to some of their own intellectual pursuits. Numerous articles had appeared in "The Varsity" and other newspapers on the failure of universities, mass production being the cause. The students had had presented to them an easy method of obtaining the required knowledge without looking up the inside data on the subject.

The aim of an education, Miss Howe stated, was to develop a viewpoint for oneself, to develop the individual. Lectures merely filled the student's mind with another's ideas, and must be replaced by more library work. It was time the student fitted (Continued on page 4)

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Are Editorials Worth Reading?

Do you read the editorials in the newspapers?

H. G. Pond, II Year Victoria: Yes, because there is a summary of worth-while news with a definite viewpoint expressed.

A. Wigmore, II Year University College: Yes, they exert quite a force in public opinion.

F. Turnbull, VI Year Meds: The Mail and Empire editorials are as indigestible as shredded wheat; but I invariably take both for breakfast.

A. Wilson, II Year University College: No. Generally speaking, my time is too limited.

M. Parmenter, II Year Victoria: As an aid to sleep, yes.

E. G. G. I Year S.P.S.: News is gossip. Editorials are wisdom.

E. E. Grainger, II Year Forestry: Only those in "The Varsity." It's the only paper that hasn't a comic page.

C. M. Hoffman, IV Year Biology and Medicine: Yes, certainly. Reading editorials and the comic strips is the only way to keep up with the times.

J. F. S. II Year Victoria: No; they're usually prejudiced and rather uninteresting. An editor shouldn't take himself seriously.

A. R. Williams, II Year S.P.S.: Yes, when I have time to waste reading fanatical outbursts against motorists, communists, political propaganda, etc.

J. S. Kitching, IV Year Biology and Medicine: Most certainly. They express public opinion in a nut-shell.

A. Macdonald, I Year Trinity: Editorials are all very well, but where in the world does the money come from to buy the newspaper? And, after all, what's wrong with the good old Champus Cat for whiling away a dreary lecture?

W. F. III Year St. Michael's: Bah! It is better to allow hot air to escape than to keep it bottled up.

AMERICAN COLLEGES REFUSE TO ARRANGE DEBATES WITH U. OF T.

Not in Sympathy With British

S.A.C. OPEN MEETING

Financial Report of Minnesota
Tour Given by S.A.C.
President

Deprecating the fact that both British and Canadian universities appeared to have a tendency "to burlesque public discussion," as evidenced by the subjects suggested by them for debate, the Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin replied to letters from the Students' Council asking if a debate could be arranged with either of these universities and the University of Toronto, that they were sorry that they had no date available as their time for forensic activities with other universities was already taken up. It was announced at the open meeting of the S.A.C., held in the Lecture Room, Hart House, yesterday at five o'clock, that advances along the same lines which had been made to two other universities in the United States had also received the cold shoulder. Mr. Currie remarked that the letters received from Michigan and Wisconsin were somewhat discourteous.

Mr. Donahue: "In some places positively abusive."

It was decided to withhold the letters from publication.

Such subjects proposed for debate as, "Resolved that the discovery of America by Columbus was an indiscretion," did not meet with an enthusiastic response from members of the debating committees of some American universities, who evidently appeared to be out of sympathy with British and Canadian debating methods.

Mr. Christie pointed out that while the letters received might be a true expression of the opinion of those in charge of debating, which in American universities is under close supervision of the faculty, in view of the enthusiastic support accorded to our debating team at North Western and Marquette last fall, by the student body, who in both cases gave the Toronto debaters the majority of the (Continued on page 3)

Study Regulation Fails to

The new ruling for the women's staff of "The Varsity" which demands that every member of the staff, editors, reporters and probationers, must turn in a record of thirty hours of study per week, including lectures, has now been in force for over a week. The fact that last week the average number of hours was over thirty-one seems to prove that some University students at least do not "fritter away" too much time on journalism and neglect their more serious work.

WILLA CATHER PAINTS LIFE OF MIDDLE WEST

Paper at U.C. Literary Meeting

REALIST OF BEAUTY

In a paper given at the U.C. Women's Literary Society in the Women's Union on Tuesday, Miss Laura McDougall declared that Willa Cather expressed the new spirit of this continent more vividly than any other American writer. Like the majority of modern writers, Miss Cather was a realist, but hers was the realism of beauty, the beauty of the wide expanses of the American prairies. Her novels did not deal with the psychology of sex, so often the theme of modern fiction, but they portrayed the simple country and town life of the American West, with its background of fertile grain fields and prosperous farms.

It was not of the American pioneer that Miss Cather had written but of his successor, the foreign immigrant, his struggles with the virgin soil and his attempts to fit into American life. The Kansas and Nebraska farmer had left something of himself in the soil as his spirit mingled with his labor, leaving him ignorant and frightened of life. The second generation had begun a search for beauty and for the genial humanity of life, and from New York the prairie has come to us in sculpture, art and drama.

The most satisfying novel of the early group of this author's work was "My Antonia," a story of foreign immigrant girls in the Middle West, which presented a vivid picture of these Bohemian girls who worked as servants in the homes of the town merchants, hoarding their small earnings. Group Hears of Activities, Speakers and Interest

An interested group of University College women gathered at the Women's Union on Tuesday to hear the report of the delegates to the Student Volunteer Convention, held in Detroit during the Christmas vacation.

Miss Edna Cress gave an account of the purpose and interests of the Volunteer Movement and the speakers who addressed the Convention. Miss Hazel Wanless told of the need of missionaries in foreign countries and the challenge they gave us, while Miss Margaret Fairbairn showed the wide scope there was for the practice of Christianity by students here at home.

OVERWHELMING DECISION

Professor Jackson Optimistic With Regard to Present Conditions

The red peril, receded from the University of Toronto as rapidly as it had come when the Hart House Debating Union in session last night carried the motion, "That in the opinion of this House the social and economic system of the Communist Party of Canada is not in the best interests of the people of the Dominion." The vote was: For the motion 342; against 116.

The Communist party, said R. W. Finlayson, in supporting the motion, is a party with no record. He characterized its supporters as "abstract politicians." The speaker cited the fact that there were but 4,200 members of the Communist party in Canada as a proof that there was little demand for such a system.

Mr. Finlayson went on to discuss features of the Communistic system. Russia was the home of trial marriage; the home of atheists, whose slogan is "There is no God"; the place where animal and primeval characteristics were beginning to dominate. The supremacy of Communism in Canada would involve three things: entire abolition of private property and of the British North America Act, and alliance with the Third Internationale.

"The present system dates back almost to Adam and Eve," declared Mr. Finlayson, discussing property. The Communists were, he thought, "substituting theory for facts." Going on to imperial traditions, he considered that adopting Communism involved "cutting the painter with the mother country." Naval defence was a vital issue which Communism could not solve.

"The party is breeding disloyalty in the British Army, broadcasting propaganda in the French Army. Who knows but that it may be broadcasting propaganda in the Canadian Army." (Laughter.) In conclusion, the speaker averred: "We are painting the world red with British justice; the Communists are painting the world red with blood."

DISCUSSION FEATURES CLASSICAL MEETING

Paper Given on Position of Women in Greek World

The U.C. Classical Association held its January meetings at the U.C. Women's Union on Wednesday as the guests of Professor and Mrs. Dale. After the reading and adoption of the minutes, and an appeal by the secretary for fees, Miss Clara Gray read the first paper on "The Position of Women in the Greek World."

The second paper, given by Mr. Charles Delafeld, dealt with the "Homeric Hymns." There were four long and twenty-nine short ones, all written by an unknown author and for an unknown purpose, in the honour of some god. They were full of wonderful descriptions of all the aspects of nature, and though not Homeric in origin or even equal to that style, they were charming and delightful.

After an animated discussion and delightful refreshments the evening was brought to a successful close.

SUMMER WORK

Signs are not wanting that those who are in a position to offer summer work to students are already looking for their men. Similarly, students who need summer employment are already answering advertisements, thus to have the matter settled if possible before commencing serious study for examinations. The Alumni Federation has rendered good service in the past to undergraduates seeking summer work, and we are sure it will do so again. We feel it our duty, therefore, in the best interests of the undergraduates, to call attention to a certain form of employment which has been offered for the past two years to men in this University, and which has proved far from satisfactory to most if not all of those who were unfortunate enough to be thus employed.

Announcements were posted on college notice boards last winter stating that men who were interested in Sunday School work, and who desired employment at a guaranteed salary of one hundred dollars a month, would find it to their interest to see the undersigned. The undersigned was a student in the College who had been employed by the American company concerned, to get them men, at a certain rate of commission. On inquiry it was discovered that the Sunday school work was the selling of a certain book of International Sunday School Lessons on a commission basis. A contract had to be signed, and in this contract the guaranteed salary of a hundred dollars per month loomed largely.

It is unnecessary to go into details. Some twenty-five men from various colleges in the University signed up; it is alleged that at least three of these never sold a single book, five sold a few books, six did fairly well. None of these received anything like the guaranteed salary of a hundred dollars a month. One man did well in sales. When delivery time came, it is stated that two entirely different kinds of books, which were on sale fifteen years ago (containing the same lessons however) were sent him for delivery in place of those he had been employed to sell. In other words, it would seem that the firm substituted other books for those their agent had offered to the public. Rejections naturally followed; the University man came under suspicion as a fraud, and although the fault was in no sense his, he did not get the guaranteed salary per month. Nothing could be done in the matter, for it was discovered that the "contract" was no contract in law. This concern is already at work with its agents in the University; we warn men to be wary. The firm is an American one with head offices in a well-known supposedly anti-British city. It possesses a local office, but does not use that office for employing students, their agents in the University being fellow students who either do not know the history, or having been bitten themselves desire to recoup by way of the commission for employing others. Last year even the employment department of the Alumni Federation were innocent victims, and recommended men to "this splendid opportunity for summer work."

A NOTEWORTHY ADDITION

Toronto may indeed be proud of the fact that she will soon have on the campus of her University one of the finest telescopes in the Dominion. The new telescope which had been modelled by two of our own professors is attracting much attention from scientists on this continent. The University of Toronto has not been behind in the rapid development of modern science. In fact this recent work by Professor C. A. Chant and Professor R. K. Young proves that she is taking a leading place in scientific development in Canada.

The field of Astronomy is attracting the cleverest scientists of the day. Within the University and the City of Toronto interest is maintained in Astronomy by the Royal Astronomical Society, which meets in the Physics Building to hear reports of local observations and progress in the realm of this science. The Society, however, as the University, has been sadly limited heretofore in

MORE OF IT!

It must be admitted right now that we heard neither the beginning nor the end of the famous Communo-Capitalistic chin-fest this evening. We arrived late as usual and were headed about for a time by the two largest and broadest members of U.T. Police Force, but after some terrifying moments we were allowed into the back of the gallery, where it was hotter than a July noon in Hades.

Mr. Finlayson had already spoken and left the little Dominion safe for a time. Then arose Mr. J. H. Gringorten and said things about our little land that were not highly encouraging. According to this speaker, Capitalistic Force had relegated our fair possibilities of progress to the eternal bow-wows. Personally we were delighted by Mr. G's unequivocal statement, so were all the honourable men. Then, like the Spirit of Unbiased Deliberation itself, Professor Jackson set out to work with a polished and well-tried rapier which left Mr. G. full of large gaping apertures. Professor Jackson stressed the futility of Communism in all of its forms, and advocated freedom of speech that would allow sufficient emission of the Crimson Torrent, so that it would be quite harmless. Indeed, the regime of the Rule by the Few was once more in the ascendant when the Professor sat down, as calmly as he had arisen.

Mr. J. L. Counsell, K.C., of Hamilton, retained counsel of the Communist Party, came forth to do battle. Forcefully if quietly he set out to undo the damage done by his learned opponent, and despite the fact that he possessed none of the calm conviction of his predecessor, he restored things to a tolerant basis, where the silk hat and the grimy cap still were on even terms.

The Debate was over, and the House thrown open for discussion. Three gentlemen with little to say and no way of saying it spoke a few floundering words, and then like the Great Lord of Luna, Mr. Jack McDonald, whose mere name caused chills in Rosedale, took the floor. Before his torrent of statistics and impassioned eloquence, the previous words were swept away like so many unlucky corks. He spoke for 15 minutes and the House swayed toward Moscow; he spoke for 10 more and outlined the industrial cycle, but the boys of easily-tired intelligence began to get restless and heckle, and the heckling grew to open discourtesy. Mr. McD. spoke ten minutes and ruined his previous chances—the House was getting restless and unsympathetic—but we rushed out to vote for the Communists and missed the rest of the Debate. A few more words were added, but the final verdict, 342-116 in favour of the Old Feudal System showed that the poor old Commune was all wrong in speaking to four hundred odd souls who depend for future sustenance on Capitalism. It would have been nonsensical to invite disaster—so, now the City Hall will not be blown up, and "The Varsity" will not ever be printed in red ink.

But on in 1996 when we are 93, we will say to our grandsons of the Tcheka Universale: "Well, by Cracky! we were there back in 1928 when the first firecracker was lit! By Heck! We even heard 'Moscow Jack' McDonald, that great man"—and they will urge us to complete our memoirs. N.A.B.

TO CORRECT US

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
It will give me the greatest pleasure to correct the word "Chinamen" which appeared in "The Varsity" January 16th, under the title "Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire." I am sure the first writer meant "Chinese," which is the literary and logical word. Thanking you for the trouble to which I am putting you, I am,
Yours very truly,

W. S. B. Wong.

A RACIAL PROBLEM

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
Your editorial of Friday, January 13, concerning foreign students on the campus was of interest to me, but I cannot altogether agree with your view.

The Detroit Convention has, as you suggest, indicated the necessity for more genial hospitality toward the foreign student, and it is timely to call the International Students' Association to its raison d'être. The foreign students are, with few exceptions, guests on our campus and we would extend to them our friendship as fellow students.

But the problem of the American campuses, as it was voiced at Detroit, does not lie in this direction. The American students appreciated the presence of the few foreign students on their campuses. Those foreign students with whom I had the privilege to talk did not feel isolated "patronized" or "tolerated." The real difficulty to the south is with the negro student. The whole set-up of American society has created a "color line" which makes it almost impossible for the negro to associate with his white fellow student on a basis of equality. While University clubs can help to dispel this race prejudice, it remains for each individual student to break down some part of the artificial barrier.

In the University of Toronto there is no "color line." There is, however, a definite race problem—call it what you will. Is it entirely fair to criticize the deficiency of the I.S.A. while we continue to disregard the imaginary line which surrounds the Jewish students on the campus?

Yours for better understanding, Canadian.

VARSITY SENIOR O. H. A. TEAM DEFEATS PETERBORO BY 3-1

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Somebody ought to fire the Weatherman.

He promises rain for to-day.

And you know what that means, more postponement of all hockey games that are not fortunate enough to have artificial ice. Ground hockey ought to be substituted.

The Intermediate O.H.A. outfit sure is showing the way for all other Varsity squads. Unless something tragic happens they should win the group and at least fight their way to the finals. They took their first two games from Bolton by handy scores, and then again on Tuesday they shut out the fast Newmarket team. They have yet to meet Brampton and Milton.

The Juniors play their final game of the series on Friday night, and though practically out of the running, they have a mathematical chance of getting into the play-offs. With that slim arithmetical chance they are prepared to give their best and show the fans that they can play real hockey.

Queen's assault team is taking in quite a few trips these days, and by all reports are getting in good trim to make a good stab for the title this year. They made good showings in their appearances at both Toronto and Montreal. Jarvis is certainly a good worker and means business.

In the meantime Coach Les Black of the Varsity squad is whipping his boxers into shape for the big test which is still a month away. It is rumoured that Don Carrick has quit the ring for this season at least, and his departure means a big hole left in the team. Don has been the most consistent winner ever since he made the team in his freshman year four years ago. If the report is true, Les will have to do some real grooming in order to fill this hole. Harry Hills has been improving steadily in the heavyweight division, and his practices with Larry Gains are showing their results.

The wrestlers are having no easy time either, and there are many aspirants for each division, and those who made the trip to West Point a week ago will have to make more work hard to make the Intercollegiate team.

The other division of the assault team is productive of just as much, if not more, enthusiasm than the other two, and the foil artists are certainly taking their parries and thrusts seriously. One disadvantage a fencer has is that there are only two men on the fencing team, and only one team to represent the University. There are about eight or ten divisions in both boxing and wrestling, while just the one in fencing. Added to that the present ruling allows only one fencer to win his "T," and this is certainly an injustice if ever there was one. Imagine about forty men fighting for a chance to win "one" colour, that is unique in the University and should be remedied.

S.A.C. DISCUSSES DEBATES WITH AMERICAN COLLEGES

votes, it should not be inferred that the student body of American universities was out of sympathy with British and Canadian debating methods.

W. A. Donahue, president of the Student Administrative Council, in his capacity as retiring chairman of the debates committee, introduced the financial report of the Minnesota tour. Total expenditure was $267.23, which was lessened by a $50 guarantee from Marquette, thus reducing expenses to $217.23. It was also remarked that intercollegiate debating served a useful purpose in fostering friendship and understanding with other institutions. The report was passed unanimously.

As no applications for the position of General Secretary of the Council had been received, other than that of the present incumbent, it was unanimously decided that he be retained in office.

COMMUNISM DECRIED BY H.H. DEBATERS

arranged horse-play featured the beginning of the speech in opposition to the motion of John H. Gringorten, University College. He wore in his pocket what looked to be a red flag. B. J. Thomson (U.C. '28), his colleague on the debates committee of Hart House, questioned him about this, and the speaker proceeded to pull out a Canadian flag.

Mr. Gringorten went on to indict the present system in Canada. "Conditions are perfectly rotten, leading to a veritable hell. He denounced the merciless exploitation of the bourgeoisie and lower classes by bridge-playing and golfing capitalists. He pictured the paupers and slums produced by "the vile greed of the capitalists." "The vicious glutony of the upper classes," a society based on a false foundation, were duly excoriated by Mr. Gringorten. Men were wealthy in proportion to their success at swindling. (Cheers and laughter.) Politics were corrupt. (Laughter and cheers.) Liars commanded respect. Hypocrisy was a virtue in our day. Communism was Mr. Gringorten's panacea.

The third speaker on the paper, Professor Gilbert Jackson, pointed out that the capitalist press was supporting the Communist party, by the publicity it had given in connection with the debate. Answering the argument advanced by the previous speaker—"conditions in this country are absolutely rotten"—he returned: "Never has wealth been more widely diffused; never has comfort been so general."

"There is a less clear-cut division into classes here than in any other country," was the speaker's opinion. In Russia the distinction between Communist and non-Communist was far more sharply drawn; the latter "exists at present in order to do what he is told."

The party planned to serve power when society was in a state of dissolution; "while society remains coherent, Communism is impotent." He admitted that the capitalist system had its faults, but argued in its favour that it was "the only industrial system yet invented that gives the greatest adaptability for production."

The idea that Communism would afford plenty for all was scouted by Professor. "There has never been a sufficient amount of capital and labour to meet the demands of the time." Productive energy, he insisted, must be rationed out.

The speaker expressed a wish that the institution of freedom of speech be retained. Communism was "a product of German logic," which had been used by one theorist for atheistic purposes, and by another on religious grounds.

Professor Jackson was followed by J. L. Counsell, once a footballer, now a Fabian, a graduate of University College and now an eminent King's Counsel in Hamilton. He began by twitting Mr. Jackson with speaking brilliantly once in Hamilton on the opposite side of the case. It was almost elementary, he claimed, that there was a system working to which everyone had to bow "in order to get by," a system which was the exploitation of man by man. From his own experience he knew that under the present system the finer feelings of man were crowded out by the race for money. The people at the top were afraid of new ideas, and consequently it did not pay to express ideas contrary to the system. He defined Mr. Jackson's position as the idea that as long as high society held together, the system was good.

"From the dawn of history there have been two classes, the exploiters and the exploited," said Mr. Counsell. This was true of Russia, where, he admitted, the capitalist system had been reintroduced. All the great empires had risen on this principle—Russia, Spain, and, in the future, the United States. Communism, he submitted, would exploit the workers, not for gain but for the benefit of the workers themselves.

Among the large crowd present were various notables. The Honourable William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ferguson administration, attended. His son was ings to buy the much needed plow or tractor for the homestead. Until "The Professor's House," Miss Cather's work was the expression of the search after beauty of the Middle Western pioneer struggling against nature. "The Professor's House" was typical of the change in the author's viewpoint, having an utter disregard for plot which would never have been condoned in her earlier writings. Here was portrayed the calm dignity and reflection of forces which make up a man's character.

"Death Comes to the Archbishop" was the author's greatest work of art, being the story of missionary ventures in the pioneer country. Before his death, the Archbishop declared that he had witnessed the fulfillment of two of his dreams, the abolition of black slavery and the restoration to the Navajos of the lands which had been seized from them. The farewell between the Archbishop and the old Navajo, who had come many miles to see his padre once again, was fraught with that devotion and gratitude which had been accorded the emissaries of the Roman Catholic Church in its missionary ventures.

the first speaker on the paper.

A long speech in support of the Communist programme was delivered from the floor of the House by John Macdonald, secretary to the Communist party, who appears on the ballot papers as "John Macdonald, machinist," and is known familiarly as "Moscow Jack." He read a detailed manifesto in powerful oratorical style against the abuses of the capitalist system. "What is your remedy?" shouted Dennis O. Mongovan of St. Michael's College. "Moscow Jack" returned that the capitalist system must give way to Communism even as the capitalistic revolution had overthrown feudalism. His speech was continually interrupted, and indeed the House was disposed to tease all the speakers from the floor in reaction from the tension during the speeches on the paper.

Varying amounts of cheers and laughter greeted the champions of both sides in the impromptu session. W. D. Mathews (U.C.) led off for the affirmative and was supported by D. G. W. McRae (S.P.S.), L. M. Gelber (U.C.), C. F. Burk (S.P.S.), J. R. Calwell (U.C.), B. D. Beamish (U.C.). On behalf of the negative, short speeches were given by J. W. Innis (U.C.), G. O. Murrel-Wright (Trinity), J. R. Wilson (Victoria), A. Arrell (Victoria). Professor Norman Mackenzie acted as speaker.

U. OF T. WOMEN FAVOR SYSTEM OF LEVURES

in with the new individual movement that had grown up as a protest against the industrial revolution leading to an overdose of mass production.

Miss Mary Coleman, of Victoria College, speaking for the affirmative, declared that in most courses, lectures were purely optional but yet were well attended. "The student should remember that the foolish learn from experience, the wise from the experience of others. The library did not solve the problem, as it contained too many books, and the average student could not discriminate between the good and the bad. A lecture is a challenger of thought, a systematizer of knowledge and a guide to the best use of time."

An alternative system of education was proffered by Miss Helen Monkhouse of St. Hilda's. Groups where the personal contact was better attained, and essays which trained one's mind to think for itself were this speaker's suggestions.

When the Speaker, Miss Cartwright of St. Hilda's, declared the house open Miss Mary Winspear stated that acquiring an education was a hectic life. By the time a student had stood first on one leg and then on the other and worn out both elbows on the library desk, searching through volumes to find information that was not there, lectures provided an opportunity for mental digestion. Their main value was this attitude of restfulness which they induced. The subconscious mind became greater as the conscious mind failed, so that the conscious mind of the professor could penetrate to the almost subconscious mind of the student. "God has been said to have denied man one gift—the gift of rest which our professors have given to us." The House voted in favour of the motion by a majority of twenty.

FAMOUS PHYSICIST DEPARTS FOR U.S. AFTER BRIEF STAY

Prof. P. Franck is Nobel Prize Winner and Friend of Einstein

RESEARCH WORK IN LIGHT

Lectured Here Tuesday and Wednesday on Molecules and Light

Professor J. Franck, Director of the Physical Institute of the University of Göttingen, and an intimate friend of Einstein, has just concluded a two-day visit to the University of Toronto. The distinguished physicist, who is a Nobel prize-winner, is conducting special researches into the nature of light. He is here through the persuasion of Professor J. C. McLennan, on his way to the University of California, where he will fulfil a three weeks' lecture engagement.

None of the physicists at the University would declare themselves able to put into popular language Dr. Franck's great achievements in the world of physics, any more than the mathematicians will venture on a pop-

RELIGION OF THE JEWS HAS SOLVED MANY DOUBTS

Oriental Society Discussion Deals with Question of Hebrew Faith

"The Hebrew religion runs the whole gamut of religious experience, states all the aspirations and the doubts of the mind in a concrete way and offers its solution." In this way did Mr. Kenneth C. Evans sum up his idea of the Hebrew religion in a paper presented at the meeting of the Oriental Association yesterday afternoon in the Senior Common Room at Victoria College. The subject of the papers given by Mr. Evans and Mr. Dingwall was "Foreign Influences on the Hebrew Religion."

Mr. Evans stated that the assimilation of foreign ideas, and indeed the whole thought world in which the Hebrew religion grew up, could be likened to the soil and sunshine necessary for the growth of a plant, but that the religion was, however, indebted only in a secondary way to its

WOMEN'S PRESS CLUB READS SHOW REVIEWS

Criticism of Martin Harvey's
"Scaramouche" Provoke
Interesting Discussion

Yesterday was "Review Day" at the Women's Press Club. At the meeting held at the Women's Union, reviews were read of Martin Harvey's presentation of Scaramouche and of various motion pictures being shown this week.

Miss Kirkwood, acting as critic, stated that reviews were satisfactory work for beginners because of the concrete material presented. To be successful a review must reveal enough of the theme to stimulate curiosity, and at the same time contain a just and impartial estimate of the acting and the presentation.

The reviews of Scaramouche were unusually well done. In dealing with the paper on the motion picture, an interesting discussion arose as to the true value and possibilities of the screen. The most interesting point raised by the reviewer was the search for the real appeal of the motion picture.

Portrait of Simcoe Gift to University

Sir Leicester Harmsworth has presented a portrait of General Simcoe and two of his friends to the University of Toronto. The picture will be hung in Simcoe Hall, which is named after the one-time Governor of Upper Canada. In the group with John Graves Simcoe are Archdeacon Andrew and John Burridge Chadwick. The picture was painted by W. Pars, A.R.A.

COLLEGES OF THE EMPIRE ARE BRITISH IN TONE

Colonel Amery Has Visited Many Universities Throughout the Empire

"A very real vitality is perhaps the most notable feature of the Empire universities," said the Honourable Mr. Amery in an interview which he granted to "The Varsity" after the Board of Trade dinner in the Great Hall at Hart House last night. He was glad to notice in his travels how many of them approximated British standards. Of course the residential system so common in English universities was quite often noticeable by its absence, but a great many colleges throughout the Empire have close resemblance to Scottish types.

Colonel Amery was at one time editor of the school publication at Harrow School, England, and expressed keen interest in undergraduate publications. The fact that "The Varsity" was a daily especially attracted his attention. He was well pleased to learn that its publication did not rest entirely in a few hands, but that since many took an active interest in it, no one was overburdened by the work done.

"You are fortunate in Canada to have all kinds of opportunities for placing your graduates," said the Colonel.

Delightful Faculty Tea

The weather man now certainly knew what he was doing when he sent showers on Thursday, realizing that we would be cheered up anyway at the Faculty Tea in the University Library. The bright lights certainly attracted a particularly large number of students, who were received at the door by Mrs. Malcolm Wallace and Mrs. J. F. MacDonald. Assisting were Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. Needler, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Barber, Miss Wallace, Miss E. Alexander and Miss Savage.

ST. MIKE'S COLLEGE STUDENT PARLIAMENT HOLD LIVELY DEBATE

Only Bona-fide Students in Residence Eligible for B.A.

GOVERNMENT UPHELD

Custom of Giving Christmas
Presents is Also Declared Illegal

A large and representative meeting of the St. Michael's College Students' Parliament was held in the College Auditorium last night. The newly-appointed Prime Minister, George Power, announced his cabinet and presented the motion: "That hereafter only bona-fide students in residence be eligible for the degree of B.A." J. T. McGarry of the Opposition opposed the motion; the Minister of Health, T. V. Kennedy, spoke third, and Mr. Edwin Rush, B.A., visiting speaker from Osgoode Hall, spoke fourth.

The Right Honourable the Prime Minister harked back to the days of the mediaeval university when true scholarship was imbued within the cloister walls.

Jack (Duke) McGarry, in opposing the motion, protested that the cost of residence being prohibitive, a portion of the student body must live at home and should not be denied a B.A. on those grounds.

T. V. Kennedy, speaking third, pointed to the examples of Oxford and Cambridge, where the residence system has been the characteristic feature of their wide success.

"We have upon the authority of the down-town newspapers that St. Michael's residence students drape themselves out of the windows in desperate attempts to establish contacts with the outside world."

A lively open-house discussion followed, featuring contributions from Mr. Maurice Daly, B.A., F. J. MacNamara, leader of the Opposition, Joseph Ord, leader of the Labour party, C. Cruise and P. Scollard.

H. J. O'Meara, Speaker of the House, called for a division, and the motion was carried by a majority of one. A private members bill, proposed by T. E. Mooney, seconded by J. Sammon, "That it be declared illegal to give Christmas presents or receive them," was opposed by T. Lawless, R. Scollard, P. Flynn, E. Garvey and H. Kendrick, but was carried by a small majority. The House then adjourned sine die.

DEBATING METHODS OF BRITISH TEAMS DERIDED IN STATES

Professor Mackenzie States That Debates Are For Purpose of Experience

BRITISH WIT IS POPULAR

Decision in Debates Should Be Matter of Minor
Importance

In reply to the charge which appeared in yesterday's "Varsity," voiced by two Middle Western American colleges, that both Canadian and British students did not take their debating seriously and were inclined "to burlesque public discussion," Professor MacKenzie of the department of Politics and Law said that he did not consider that debating was indulged in primarily to arrive at the absolute truth or falsehood of the resolution, but rather for the purpose of the education acquired in the art of speaking in public, and of presenting a subject in a way which is pleasing and interesting.

As no cognizance would be taken of the fact that the students of this or that university had decided for or against a certain proposition, he did not, therefore, believe that a weighty subject was of primary importance; rather should the practice obtained by the debaters be considered first.

Remarking that he did not think it wise for anyone to take himself too seriously, he intimated that this theory could be applied to debating societies as well.

British debaters especially had always met with a warm reception in the eastern part of the United States, and evidently their method of debating was there understood and appreciated. That the British debaters were generally accustomed to regard their subject in a less serious light than did the Americans, was granted, but that the Americans gained anything by their fervour he doubted. Rather did they miss the whole subject for which intercollegiate debating was intended. If the gravity of the subject and the importance of the decision either for or against the resolution caused a nation to stand on tip-toe, then it would be a different proposition. But this is not so what an individual collection of students at any college think on a certain matter. For instance, communism has no effect on communism or on any one else outside the college or university. There-

Tim Buck Issues Challenge For Debate

Tim Buck yesterday challenged the University to stage another debate on Communism. He made the following statement in an interview:

"The debate at Hart House was not fair. There were two speakers against Communism, and two in favor, but the latter two are not Communists, and are not entitled to talk about it. Jack MacDonald was only called from the floor of the House to speak."

STUDENTSHIP IN HISTORY AT UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

Offers to Graduates of Universities in British Empire in Research Training

The University College Committee of the University of London will award in June 1928 the Sir William Meyer studentship in European History. This studentship will offer to a graduate of a university in the British Empire the opportunity to enter upon an approved course of training in the methods of research, with a view to taking an approved higher degree in the University of London.

The studentship, which is valued at about 120 pounds, is tenable for two years subject to the satisfactory progress of the student. The candidate elected will be required to devote his whole time to his work.

Each candidate will be required to submit on or before June 1, 1928, a statement giving the full particulars of his educational career and the branch or branches of research he wishes to pursue.

For further particulars those interested should communicate as soon as possible with C. O. G. Douie, Secretary of the University College Committee, University of London, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

PRELIMINARY DEBATES AT LORETTO ABBEY

First Year Wins From Second and Second From Fourth

The second and third debates of the debating contest for the debating trophy of Loretto Abbey College were held in the College auditorium. First Year, represented by Miss Joan Hopkins and Miss Gertrude Wilson, won the decision of the judges on the negative of the resolution, "That the increase of women's political rights has resulted in a loss of her femininity," against Second Year, represented by Miss Evelyn King and Miss Helen Radigan.

In addition, Fourth Year, as represented by Miss Frances Fitzpatrick and Miss Sara Dwyer, and Second Year, represented by Miss Mary Fitzpatrick and Miss Monica Boyes, discussed the question, "That a stressing of the fantastic and fairy-tale element in childhood leads to an overdevelopment of the imagination and an underdevelopment of the reason." The affirmative, upheld by Second Year, was awarded the decision. The judges who kindly judged the debate were Mrs. Harkens, Mr. F. Watson and Mr. F. Flaherty.

CO-OPERATION WORK OF EMPIRE'S TRADE SAYS COLONEL AMERY

"Instead of dissipating our money on those who refuse to buy from us in return, we should benefit ourselves and our fellow citizens within the Empire by buying Empire goods," stated Colonel the Hon. A. S. M. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, in his speech at the Board of Trade dinner in the Great Hall last night. His whole speech was a plea for co-operation within the Empire, and judging from the attentive hearing he received and the enthusiastic applause which arose as he concluded, he struck a responsive note in the hundreds of prominent citizens who heard him.

Prefacing his remarks by a wish of many happy returns of the day for Chancellor Mulock, "the grand old

Senior Years Also Turn Out in Large Numbers to Help Make Affair Successful

Junior School held their dance at the King Edward Hotel last night. Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, Mrs. T. R. Loudon, Mrs. W. J. T. Wright, Mrs. J. J. Spence and Mrs. J. H. Parkin were patronesses and received at the entrance of the Pompeian Room, where the dancing took place.

A large crowd danced gaily to the strains of Jardine's orchestra. Owing to the fact that Senior School did not have their annual dance this year, third and fourth years were out in large numbers.

Numerous novelties and prizes were given out and contributed to the success of the evening.

The committee in charge consisted of G. H. McVean, N. D. Adams, R. M. Ferguson, W. E. Carruthers, T. W. Wilson, R. C. Williamson, C. L. Ward, W. R. C. Warren.

LACK OF INTEREST ENDS BOOK LOVERS' CLUB IDEA

Number of Names Submitted
Did Not Warrant Organization

When interviewed by "The Varsity," R. Soward, secretary of the Library Committee, stated that the idea of forming a Book Lovers' Club had been dropped temporarily at least. This club was inaugurated last November with the purpose of securing about fifty or sixty members who would have the pleasure of hearing addresses by prominent literary men several times during the year. The club was to be of an informal character with no set rules of procedure. The members were to be men only. A box was placed outside the Hart House Library for the names of those who wished to be members. However, no great interest was shown since only about fifteen names were secured. Since this number did not warrant the formation of the club the idea was abandoned. It has not been taken up since and will not in the future unless much greater interest is apparent.

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Should Exams Be Continued?

Do you think that examinations should be abolished at universities?

S. Fener, II Year Political Science, University College: Yes, I certainly do! The average student studies his work just before the examinations, with the sole purpose of passing, and forgets it immediately afterwards.

R. W. Moore, I Year St. Michael's College: To a certain extent, yes. If they were abolished, "cramping" would vanish entirely. But again, lack of interest would remain.

Miss E. C., III Year, University College: Certainly not! Examinations are the only means by which it can be ascertained whether or not the student has absorbed anything from lectures.

M. C., Medicine: In some science subjects they have already been abolished.

J. V. Farr, I Year St. Michael's College: Certainly not! To abolish examinations would be to abolish the universities.

Miss M. B., Victoria College: Yes. Universities should be places of learning, not "cramping," for there is a difference between learning with a sole desire for knowledge, and "cramping" for the purpose of securing a diploma.

M. B., II Year Arts, University College: With all its imperfections, the examination system is none the less a means of determining what a student has snatched up from the pearls of wisdom which the professors have thrown before him during the past year. Should we abolish examinations, what have we to substitute in place of them? Term work? I think that the evils of this substitute outweigh its benefits.

WORRIES ENDED

The worries, if any, of the Debates Committee are over. And so may those upon whom our indiscretions weigh so heavily forget their fear on us and once more turn to those worth while things that have thus far secured their interest. That there is at present danger of a Red influence dominating the youth of this University is more than indicated by the result of the voting on Wednesday evening. The motion was upheld by what surely should be a comforting majority, but, even so, we would wish to attempt to analyse the figure given as representative of those supporting the communistic trend of certain branches of society.

Frankly, we consider the proportion of those who supported the communistic party—one to three—surprising. We are ready to believe that a few, by the very nature of their home and social environment, would vote against the motion, but that the above proportion actually represents the correct percentage of thought in this University we most certainly do not credit. In the first place, a debate of this nature would immediately prove most attractive to partisan adherents of either the capitalistic or communistic parties, and it would seem safe to assume that all those with socialistic leanings, rather than the former class, would be on hand. Few of these would overlook such an obvious opportunity for supporting their own cause. On the other hand, the question is neither burning enough nor yet strong enough to arouse the anxiety necessary to bring forth an excited multitude of supporters in favour of the system in force on this continent to-day. Others there may have been who, heated by undue suggestion and publicity, attended the debate with the firm intention of voting against the motion, no matter what the arguments or their own beliefs. And still others may have been swayed by the arguments or enthusiasm of those speaking against the motion. We recognize the fact that the student desires to consider himself a leader of thought, and that, in many instances, if that thought be an original one or one not tolerated generally by society, the more pleased may he be. And therefore it would not be surprising if we did find some who actually embraced, or else who pretended to embrace, the Red viewpoint.

The university man, by the very nature of his training toward certain expectations in life, his fraternities, his lodges, his clubs, his games and his activities generally, is anti-socialistic. And while he may feel himself at times possessed of wild ideas and the desire to give them expression, such notions are generally forgotten when the age of adolescence has passed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

When the time closed for receiving applications for the Ontario College of Education Scholarships one week ago, forty-one applications for the two scholarships had been received. This is the greatest number to ever apply for these scholarships, and it would speak well of the academic interests of those registered at the above-mentioned college this year. Most certainly the "competition" will be keen, and it may be expected that the graduating class of 1928 will set a scholastic record that will prove difficult to better.

CAMPUS CANS BLOCK TRAFFIC

Local city firemen from station houses in the vicinity of the University of Washington are protesting that it is almost impossible for them to reach a fire because the minute a fire gong rings, the college men pile into their campus cans and block all traffic in their rush to the blaze. Measures are to be taken to keep the students from blocking the way for the firemen.

A NECESSARY EVIL

"A necessary evil" is the term applied to intercollegiate athletic radio broadcasting by athletic officials at Ohio State University. While the broadcasting of football and basketball games is one way of losing spectators, the officials say, it also is the only means of keeping alumni and friends of the university interested in the sports. So Ohio State continues the broadcasting at a cost of about $100 per game.

Financial Post must feel about as cheap as a post-dividend stock with no bids and no offers two days after the treasurer has skipped to Rio de Janeiro with the books and the treasury surplus.

Man who writes stuff on the opposite page would likely say that the foxy plays of the snappy little University Avenue aggregation were thrown for a heavy loss on their ten-year line.

Are trying to learn to write editorials like Evening Telegram.

Not many shovelfuls of snow these days, but many shovelfuls of votes were piled against Communists other evening.

The other day we were somewhat astounded on entering the office to see a black cat with white trimmings lying in our favourite chair. At first we hoped for the best but feared for the worst, as there are those on "The Varsity" who can think of nothing more sprightly than to leave defunct eats lying around where their superiors can sit on them. Reporters will be reporters.

Investigation, however, proved that the cat, if prodded, would fizz companionably. This proved its vitality. For a time we suspected that it was a reporter up from the "Financial Post" trying to sneak into the debate. This theory did not stand the test of time.

It really looked as if this paper might have a real live mascot for a while, yet, strange to say, it vanished during the big bonspiel in the Lecture Room on Wednesday, unwept, unheeded and unsung.

A significant fact concerning the above cat's disappearance is that 6 members of "The Varsity" have been carefully eating at home lately, where they can personally supervise all cooking.

"Resolved that Columbus committed an indiscretion in discovering America," was a suggested topic for debate with U.S. universities. Some mystification seems to exist among the great minds of our student government as to why the idea was received coldly. Now let's all think up some nice tactful subjects. Here's one for the University of Chicago—"Resolved that Wm. Hale Thompson would have shown more discretion if he had died young." For Amherst—"Resolved that the great alumnus, Calvin Coolidge, could win a silence match against a bust of Julius Caesar and still be three jumps ahead of a Cape Cod oyster." For Yale—"Resolved that Harvard is the world's greatest university." For McGill—"Resolved that Toronto is the most wide-awake, progressive little village in Canada and

WOULD FORM COMMUNIST CLUB

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

We, the undersigned, being among the privileged few to attend the recent debate regarding the suitability of a Communistic policy for our fair land, wish to express our approval that at last a people's doctrine has been openly advocated and enthusiastically embraced within a people's university. Moreover, being for some months rabid but secret adherents to the Communistic cause, we now feel that owing to the irresistible eloquence of Comrade Jack McDonald, we, the workers, must advance into the open and display our hand. Therefore we suggest to the fair-minded bourgeoisie of the University of Toronto that, within the precincts of this University, a Communist Club be formed, with the sole policy of publicly propagating the doctrine of economic, moral and political equality. The candid opinions of the patriotic proletariat, through these columns, are anxiously awaited by

BRAMPTON PLAYS VARSITY AT VARSITY ARENA TO-MORROW

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity Juniors have one last chance to-night of getting in the play-offs for the Big Four title. If they win and Parkdale lose, the two teams will be tied for second place, and as the first and second teams play off, the Blue still have a chance. Marlboros stand a good chance of beating Parkdale, but Varsity will have to step to take the Toronto Canoe Club into camp. T.C.C. have been going great guns lately, and they are liable to turn in a win if Varsity weakens for a minute.

The Seniors are well out in the lead in the O.H.A. with four wins in as many starts. However, if Whitehead is lost it will be a big blow to their chances. It is quite possible that the big fellow will be unable to play, and there is no one in sight who can fill his shoes. Don Carrick is making a fine showing, but he is not the star that Whitehead is by any means. And if Kirkpatrick carries his threatened retirement into effect, things will be black indeed. It will mean the promotion of Crosby from the Intermediates, and the loss to the seconds of their scoring ace.

At present the Intermediates look like a smart bet to cop the bunting in their group, as they have won three games without having an entry on the wrong side of the ledger. If they can deliver the goods to-morrow it should be easy sailing for a while. And the Intermediates' success should not stop at their group; there is no reason why they should not go a long way in the play-offs.

In addition the Intermediates are entered in the Intermediate section of the Intercollegiate with a bye into the play-offs of the Western group. This should be easy for the Blue, unless Western comes through with a surprise.

With the Jennings Cup schedule already postponed for two weeks, things look black indeed for Inter-faculty hockey series. The continued mild spell has entirely disrupted the schedule, and it may be found necessary to play a single instead of a double schedule in the various groups.

Of course there is one solution, and that is to have the Varsity Arena thrown open to the Interfaculty teams. But it is quite improbable that this course of action will be followed. The ice at the Arena is rented to outside teams to the exclusion of the Interfaculty players, for the very obvious reason that the outsiders can pay for the ice and the student teams are unable to do so.

Followers of rugby will watch with interest the experiment to be tried out at McGill next fall. On the heels of the announcement of the retirement of Frank Shaughnessy, for years coach of the McGill grid squad, comes the announcement that the destinies of the Red and White will be guided next year by a board of strategy composed of former players. This board will have charge of the general policy of the coaching and will supervise the work of a junior professional coach.

Varsity-Brampton TO-MORROW NIGHT

Intermediate O.H.A. Fixture Brings Together Two Strong Teams

The Varsity-Brampton Intermediate O.H.A. fixture carded for to-morrow at the Varsity Arena brings together two of the strongest teams in the group. Varsity are out in front with three wins in as many starts and look like a good bet for group honours. Brampton, however, are strong contenders and may make things interesting for the Blue.

Led by Captain Bob Crosby, the Intermediates have an outfit of which the University may well be proud, and incidentally one of the best that has represented Varsity in the Intermediate series for some time. Crosby and Graham form a defence that is hard to beat, and every man is capable of stepping out and getting goals. Little in the nets is playing a whale of a game, and is quite capable of taking care of anything that may get past the defence men.

McKnight, the centre man, and Evans and Parke on the wings, form a forward line that compares very favourably with any in this group at least. The subs, Gilfillan, Irwin and Algie, are capable performers, and the Junior School Defeats Sr. Vic.

Showing a brand of basketball of mid-season class, Jr. School won the closest of decisions over Sr. Vic. in an exhibition game yesterday. The score 20-19 reflects the type of saw-saw contest which was played. At half-time Vic. led 10-8, and immediately increased this to 13-8 due to fine efforts by Kenney, who was the best man on the floor, and Johnston, both of whom played full time. School, however, put on a full team of subs, and Mercer's long range baskets gave them the lead again. The subs soon weakened under a determined attack by Vic., and the latter led 19-16 with two minutes left.

At this point School fielded the full team of regulars, and two quick baskets gave them the close win 20-19.

team is not weakened when they are on the ice. Algie has not been on the line-up for the last two games, but it is expected that he will be in uniform to-morrow. In that event he may team up with Graham on the defence, Crosby going up on the forward line at the left wing position.

Varsity Gymnasts Perform Thursday

Interfaculty Competition for Wilson Cup in Hart House Gym

TEAMS TRAINING HARD

The University of Toronto gymnasts will be seen in active competition for the first time this season when the annual Interfaculty competition for the Harold A. Wilson Cup takes place in the Hart House gym on Thursday, Jan. 26, at 5 p.m. The men are fast approaching a perfected condition of training after a long and strenuous season of work. The Interfaculty competition should be of great interest to all fans and adherents of the graceful and difficult art, as it has a direct bearing on the selection of the personnel of the Intercollegiate team which will represent Varsity at the annual tilt with McGill. Each faculty will be represented by a team of three men in the struggle for the Wilson trophy, the team with the highest aggregate winning the keel, as the veterans from last year are well divided among the faculties.

The Intercollegiate squad for the present season will be picked by the showing of the men in the Interfaculty, the six men with the highest scores taking the trip to Montreal.

The boys are fortunate this year in having the additional aid of Mr. Nat Keefe, proprietor of the College Toggery Shop, at College and Spadina Ave. Mr. Keefe is one of the best known gymnasts in Canada and England and will be of great help to Mr. Barton in giving the men personal attention.

The team is practising every Tuesday and Thursday at 5 p.m., and individual attention is given to the men on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 4.30 to 5.30.

Calnan Replaces Don Carrick as President of B.W. & F. Club

At a meeting of the B. W. and F. Club executive last night, the resignation of President Donald D. Carrick was received and accepted, Vice-President Calnan automatically moving up to fill the vacancy. Carrick has definitely decided to quit the ring for this year "owing to the stress of work and other activities."

This means that there is another big hole to fill on this year's assault squad, as Harry Hills is at present ineligible for Intercollegiate competition. With these two men out of the race for positions, an added incentive should be given to aspirants in the light-heavy and heavy divisions, and Coach Les Black would welcome the opportunity of training in some men to fill the gap.

Hockey Games Postponed

The inclemency of the weather has once again necessitated the postponement of the Jennings Cup games scheduled for to-day and to-morrow. The series will start as soon as there is ice on the hockey cushions.

CO-OPERATION MARK OF EMPIRE'S TRADE

man of the University," on his eighty-fourth birthday, Colonel Amery then struck immediately into his subject, "Trade Within the Empire."

A climax in the history of the Empire was reached in the eighteenth century when the desire was placed in the hearts of British people to trade with territories under their control, populated by people of their own race. "American historians," stated the speaker, "very often ignore the success of that policy before the revolution. Due to it the little England of the seventeenth century was transformed into the great nation of the eighteenth, able to hold its own against all Europe. But as our political development did not keep pace with our economic development we lost control of English speaking America. Since that time England has initiated a new policy of co-operation in dealing with other parts of the Empire."

"There is a mighty state to the south of Canada that is not only rich in the volume of her resources, but also because of her vast extent in the variety of her resources. Each state in the United States has learned that she is not limited by her own resources, but can go forth producing to the limit of her capability because of the wide market the other states afford. So there is a constant flow of men and capital. Surely we, with our infinitely greater resources in the British Empire, ought to be able to achieve the same result. Each of us by purchasing within the Empire can exercise a great economic force. Why dissipate it like steam from a kettle? Let us rather conserve it like the steam in a great engine." The speaker continued by pointing out the mutual advantages of Empire trading.

"By the resolutions of the last Imperial conference, each government plighted itself while deciding its own fiscal policy to encourage Empire trade. By so doing, results as great, even greater, than those of the U.S. may be achieved." Colonel Amery realized that Canada had early offered such co-operation but had been refused. "We must remember how deeply entrenched some doctrines are in the Old Country. But in the Great War we in England perceived as by a sudden flash of light that in the Dominions there were fellow citizens not just friendly neutrals."

"I know John Bull is slow to move at the beginning, but when he receives a great idea he moves obstinately forward. Now we realize the meaning of the Empire, and wherever we have duties we have also preferences. Within a few years there has been a thirty-fold increase in the amount of Empire grown tobacco used in England. I assure you that wherever additional duties may be imposed in the future, there will be preferences of direct importance to Canada and the rest of the Empire."

General Mitchell, President of the Board of Trade, introduced the speaker and acted as chairman. In a short speech he thanked the University and Hart House for their hospitality, and pointed out that Colonel Amery was the third Ambassador of the Empire to visit Canada in the past six months. The Secretary for the Dominions, said General Mitchell, thrives and tires but never sleeps while guiding the Empire.

When Premier Ferguson rose to thank the Hon. Mr. Amery, he also congratulated the Chancellor of the University as the youngest old man in the Dominion of Canada. "We have listened," he said, "to one of the most cheering and acceptable messages from Great Britain. If the Empire is to lead, and it must lead, the world a scheme of co-operation benefitting the whole Empire must be worked out." He was glad to know that this year Britain intended to take an important part in the Canadian National Exhibition.

customary forty, and also that Mr. Macdonald was allowed twenty-five instead of five.

Sir, I do not wish to criticize unjustly, but I have always been of the opinion that these debates were for the good of as many as could partake of them, and I think this will be achieved if we persist in giving the first four speakers ten minutes each and the rest five as originally intended regardless of whether they are famous personages or not.

In closing may I be permitted through your column to give my last point. The opposition had stated that Communism was to come by legislative means; nothing could be farther from the truth, for Communism can come and will come in only one way, by world-wide revolution. I am here quoting from the little books that were shown Wednesday night.

To people who are pro-Communist because they do not know, I would like them to see these books. I was thunderstruck with some of their sayings. In fact, I did not believe them until after the debate Mr. Macdonald assured me they were true Communist sentiments.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. Caldwell, II U.C.

EXPERIENCE IN SUMMER WORK

Editor, "The Varsity."
Dear Sir:
The editorial on summer book selling was very timely. Would advise other students, especially those, to be aware of any selling game, whether books or not. These companies, as the editorial pointed out, have students in our midst who are paid to paint the proposition in rosy colours. They have perhaps made a fair success of it, perhaps not. If you can afford to lose a couple of hundred dollars, by all means try a season's selling. The experience is well worth while. But don't expect to clear any cash. No firm, whether it guarantees a salary or not, takes any legal responsibility, and you may be sure it has left a way for retreat without loss to itself. The student must be prepared to stand this loss.

Do not be convinced by what the other fellow is alleged to have made last year. Granting that he did, and that his expenses did not eat up his profits after he made them, there is a five in a hundred chance that you are the student who will do the same, or even break even. The great probability is that you will be poorer in cash, but richer in experience, when the summer is over. Do not fall before a barrage of last year's successes and sign on the dotted line, or pay your money deposit. If you do, kiss it good-bye. Every salesman worthy of the name has a long string of such material to fire at you when you waver.

There are a couple of bona-fide selling propositions. The writer has personal knowledge of the methods of one firm, which is a Canadian firm in Toronto, by the way. The student who is genuinely cut out for a salesman can make a success in this line, and numbers have done so. But no man can make a success with a firm like the one suggested in the editorial on Summer work, which does not treat its salesmen squarely. And it is only one of many such who prey on the students of this and other universities year after year.

We appreciate the work of the Alumni Federation in supplying summer employment to the undergraduates. But I suggest that if they do not at present investigate all selling schemes carefully, they do so. Nothing would destroy the present faith of the students in that office so rapidly as a couple of phoney selling propositions, if they should slip through it unnoticed.

Then beware of the salesman who is selling the selling proposition. His statistics are open to question, and your chance of doing well is extremely small. If you can afford to lose, and pay up if necessary, go ahead. The experience is well worth while, and will last a lifetime. But do not expect any "guarantee of salary" to be valid. You will be mistaken. Be

Mr. Dingwall in presenting his paper spoke of the influence of Egypt. He said that while the Hebrews rapidly assimilated the domestic customs of the people with whom they mingled, they preserved their religion practically intact. Reference was also made to the distinct resemblance between the Proverbs of Amenophis and chapters 22 to 24 of the Hebrew Proverbs. Following the presentation of the papers a discussion ensued upon the problems brought out. Professors Meek, Taylor and Potter spoke.

His kind of physical second sight is, it appears, a rare thing that not a dozen men in the world possess. Dr. Franck is one of the elite who move about with mental ease in the dim microcosmos of atoms and whirling electrons.

His special researches are into the nature of light, and he had in the matter of transference of atomic energies on low resonance levels been able to introduce order where before him all had been chaos.

Professor Franck lectured at the University yesterday and on Tuesday. He discussed the connection between molecules and light and these two subjects in themselves.

Still it was very easy to understand that it all had to do with atoms and spectra and light, but the light that is never seen on sea or land but only in a physicist's laboratory. ALUMNI FEDERATION CLAIM SUMMER JOBS WELL INVESTIGATED

K. B. Conn Says All Possible
Done to Safeguard
Students' Interests

MANY POSITIONS PROCURED

No Charge to Undergrads, and Only Small Fee for Graduates

That the necessary precautions to safeguard the interests of students being placed in summer positions are taken by the Alumni Federation's employment bureau, and that nearly all summer selling jobs are quite bona-fide, was the information obtained from K. B. Conn, Secretary of the Alumni Federation, following the appearance in Friday's "Varsity" of a letter purporting to expose summer selling jobs from "Twice Bitten."

"The only selling job in which the least dissatisfaction was expressed last year was one in which, at the most, so far as is known in this office, only three people were concerned, and that was not especially recommended by us. It was pointed out, however, that money had been made with this company the year before," stated Mr. Conn, who then went on to explain the system of precautions the bureau took for students, approximately 400 of whom last year were placed free of charge in various positions.

Half the working time of one member of the staff of the Alumni Federation is used in the business of the employment bureau. All companies were looked into, and the most reputable ones were endorsed. Although others were allowed to use the student lists of the bureau, this, according to Mr. Conn, did not mean that they were recommended by the Federation. "So far this year we have refused to endorse the selling propositions of four firms, while we have recommended those of two well-established and well-known firms," continued Mr. Conn.

The Alumni Federation will also provide one other safeguard for students. Any student can submit his proposed contract with any company to the Federation, who will obtain expert legal opinion if necessary concerning the validity of the contract. "This service, as all other services in the placing of undergraduates, is (Continued on page 4)

VISITORS HAD 70 MINUTES

"I had heard nothing about the statement of Mr. Tim Buck until I saw it in 'The Varsity,'" said Professor N. A. MacKenzie, of the Hart House Debates Committee, and Speaker at the last debate, when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding the challenge in Friday's issue. "I would say in reply to Mr. Tim Buck's suggestion," continued Professor MacKenzie, "that the purpose of the Hart House debates is not to provide a public platform for the benefit of Communists who are not members of Hart House or of the University. Their sole purpose is to provide the members of Hart House with an opportunity for discussing topics of interest to themselves, and where they feel that (Continued on page 4)

Blue Nose Sextette Held to Lone Tally by Stone Wall Defense of Grads

"RED" PORTER STARS

Nova Scotia Gives University
Team Fitting Send-off on Way to Olympics

Special to "The Varsity."

By BOB ANDERSON

Halifax, Jan. 22.—With the clockwork precision of a well-oiled machine Varsity Grads, Canada's Olympic representatives, swept an all-star Nova Scotian sextette into the discard here Saturday night to the tune of 14-1. It was the Grads' farewell to Canada, and it was an impressive "Adieu."

At no time could the smart Blue-nose sextette pass the stonewall defense of Porter and Taylor, and at no time could the Eastern team hold the aggressive attack of the Toronto boys as they stormed around the net again and again. Led by the great sorrel top, "Red" Porter, the team had thirty shots on goal to their opponents' one every period, and they were not playing a weak team.

Nova Scotia trotted on the ice Kuhn and Murdoch, reputed in the United States to be among the finest hockey players in Canada and who have received many professional offers. The remainder of the team was picked from the best clubs in the province but there was no holding the Toronto boys. They were out to score, and score they did.

Hugh Plaxton drove home the first one, and his was followed by goals from the sticks of Porter, Trotter and Delahay. At the end of the first period the score was five to one.

In the second, with "Stuffy" Mueller in goal, they went on the rampage and scored four more, "Red" Porter leading the attack. The long red boy was the favourite of the Halifax fans. They stood on their feet and cheered him; when he left the ice he was (Continued on page 3)

NEW COMMUNIST CLUB IS A FALSE ALARM

Letter to "The Varsity" is a Sample of Student Humour

WRITERS BACK DOWN

Curiosity which was aroused last week by the appearance of a letter in "The Varsity" purporting to be the announcement of a students' communist club, may be set at rest since the idea is now revealed as a joke.

"The idea is to be considered more in the nature of a joke, to stimulate the expression of opinions among the members of the student body, than of a serious undertaking," declared Mr. J. H. Holton, U.C. II, a "charter member" of the proposed Communist club, when interviewed by "The Varsity."

Nevertheless he was convinced, that if any attempt were actually made, the club could be easily formed. In his opinion quite a number of students agreed with the general principles of communism.

"We put the letter in 'The Varsity' as a joke," stated Mr. T. R. Brebner, U.C. II. "We have no intention of furthering the motion."

Mr. S. S. T. de Beauregard, U.C. II, also a sponsor of the organization, declined to make any comment upon the matter.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY TO BRITISH ISLES ACCOMPLISHED FACT

Short Wave System Considered
Latest Improvement in Transmission

"Commercial trans-oceanic radio telephony is an accomplished fact," as shown by Dr. Ralph Brown of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New York, in his lecture to the Royal Canadian Institute, in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening, January 21st.

"There is now a direct connection between Canada, Cuba or United States and Europe, made possible by the radio link between New York and London," Dr. Brown went on to say. Developing this link has taken several years.

Transatlantic telephone was started in 1915, when telephone engineers in America sent messages by radio to Paris and Honolulu. But this merely established a record—it was of no practical value. However, the conclusion was that sooner or later this "stunt" was to be of commercial value.

In 1924, tests were made between New York and Rugby, England. Tables of measurements were made by means of which a knowledge of static was obtained. It was found that winter time and a northern site are favourable factors in communication. Good communication, too, was determined not necessarily by the original volume of the sound, but by the extent to which it dominates the radio noise.

Static was to a great extent eliminated by the wave antennae system. (Continued on page 4)

NEW WOMEN JUSTIFIED BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

Newman Club Debaters Quote from John Erskine and Book of Ruth

BRILLIANT SPEECHES

"That this House does not approve of the modern woman," was the theme of the debate at Newman Club, Sunday afternoon. In presenting the motion, John McCullough, Meds, remarked that Lot's wife looking back at Sodom and Gomorrah had turned into a pillar of salt, but the modern woman looking backwards turns into a telegraph pole. He quoted Erskine's "Private Life of Helen Troy" as evidence. Hugh Keenan, Dents, adopted a scientific argument, speaking second. He compared the modern woman to a car having everything from an easy shift to snubbers and an all weather top. He told in a Bible story that Boaz had given Ruth honey and nectar (necked her) but couldn't vouch for its authenticity.

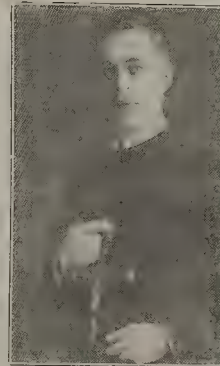

John Fallon, Meds, electrified the audience by daring any woman to call herself modern. No one responded.

John Darg, Dentistry, spoke fourth and at great length. He affirmed that no great man had lost his head over a woman.

An open house debate followed, featuring Paul Martin, Bill Donohue, Maurice Daley and Jim Maloney, and the House voted unanimously against the motion, except for the leaders of the negative.

DEPARTS FROM PRECEDENT

The annual Retreat for the Catholic students of the University opened yesterday morning at Newman Club Chapel. The Retreat this year is a departure from precedent in as much as it embraces a course of lectures on doctrinal subjects, and non-Catholic students, too, are invited. Last evening Rev. Basil Doyle, who is conducting the Retreat, spoke on the subject, "What think ye of Christ?"

The reverend lecturer asserted in the beginning that he could not hope to take up all the various proofs of the Divinity of Christ, but would confine his observations to one particular point, namely, what Christ said of Himself and what others understood Him to mean. HON. N. FINLAYSON SPEAKS

Dr. E. Zeigler Director of Penn. Forestry School
Among Students

The annual banquet of the Foresters' Club was held in Hart House on Friday night.

Among the guests of the evening were Hon. N. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests; Dr. Ed. Zeigler, Director of the Pennsylvania State Forestry School; W. C. Cain, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests; E. J. Zavitz, Deputy Minister of Forests, and Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House.

After the toast to the King, the programme continued in the Music Room, J. N. Johnston, President of the club, occupying the chair.

Mr. Bickersteth, in the double capacity of host and guest, welcomed the Faculty of Forestry, graduates and visitors to Hart House, and in a few words expressed very forcibly the purpose of our "College home." "To establish fellowship, corporate loyalty and freedom," he said, is his chief aim as Warden.

W. C. Cain, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, and a graduate of Varsity, was the next speaker. His witty remarks coupled with his words of sound advice to the younger members of the club, proved exceedingly interesting.

E. J. Zavitz, a gentleman very closely in touch with forestry in the province because of the position he holds as Deputy Minister of Forests, spoke briefly concerning the need of his department for trained men who were willing to forsake other interests and to serve the country in the capacity of creators of trees.

Dr. C. D. Howe, Dean of the Faculty and well known throughout Canada and the States as an authority in the Forestry profession, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. E. A. Zeigler.

Dr. Zeigler in his address dealt chiefly with the development of the (Continued on page 4)

Individualistic Tendencies of Clocks is Often The Cause of Confusion

There seems to be a gregarious instinct in clocks. Hart House is excellently equipped with fine if rather individualistic chronometers. In the library, for example, one may observe it is precisely 10.15; yet two minutes later the fateful pointer of the Great Gym clock points—as pointers do—to 10.12. Cheerful for the time, but the principle of the thing is belied by the villainous timepiece that presides over the affairs of the locker room below, which seems to lean toward that of the library in its accounting.

By contrast with Hart House, University College suffers from a certain paucity of clocks. Perhaps they would be superfluous, as some suggest—after all what is time to a man or woman of the world? But ha-ha—Simcoe Hall: there one may reconstruct account of time, as of money. Incidentally there is a faint reminder that spare interposes between the latter commodity and the observer—most of the time. Most students hurry through Simcoe Hall.

If in real doubt about the exact time of day, providing the weather is not overcast, the sun-dial in Hart House court is a happy arbiter. But at present the court is closed, and Old Man Time's assistant is wondering why that darn fool doesn't hurry up and get dressed.

At night the Memorial Tower clock, despite its gilded finish, is invisible. Except, of course, on moonlight nights, when no one is interested in the passage of time anyway. Such is the matter of time-keeping. Dickory-Dickory Dock!

Diogenes' Daily Questionnaire Ponderous Attacks Upon Puns

Do you believe puns are the lowest form of humour?

J. C. Johnston, I Vic: A pun? My word, I do. J. R. McGillivray, V Meds: No. I believe there are worse kinds. But of course I am speaking only from hearsay.

Ted Fell, I U.C.: Puns are not, as a rule, humorous. Most of them are merely dirty slams.

S. Cartwright, III Trinity: Yes—particularly at Trinity, where they make a specialty of them.

Bill Corbett, IV U.C.: No. A good pun is often the very best of humour.

Miss J. E. McBurney, II U.C.: Did you say puns? Yes, I like them very much, and think they are very nice, unless, of course, I happen to be the goat.

Pete Aylen, I U.C.: Yes, particularly those made by the Domestic Science students and served to unsuspecting students at the various faculty teas.

STEPPING OVER THE LINE

That a student or students may be guilty of a grave offence in a spirit of play rather than by intention would be indicated by the stand now taken by certain undergraduates who submitted a signed letter to "The Varsity" a few days ago. And that someone had the ill grace to over-step the bounds of decency would appear apparent from another letter in an adjoining column. The letter, admitted by several of those whose names it bore to be more in the nature of a joke than anything else, does brand five undergraduates of this University as being distinctly in favour of the formation of a communist club. That they are unlikely to be so regarded within college halls is beside the question; the point is that, receiving outside publicity as the letter did, certain sections of society would be only too ready to credit such intentions. It would be no new thing to find some movement, started in jest, to develop in earnest with grave and serious consequences to all. It is alleged that one of the names that the letter bore was a forgery. If so, it is painful to realize that some student within this University can be guilty in point of ethics if not in point of law. To brand one man as belonging to a certain strata of society against his wishes leaves a distinctly bad taste, and, for the benefit of all concerned, what is now an unsavoury mess should be cleared up rather than have certain other students accept what would be, perhaps, an unjustified suspicion.

THE STUDENT COMES

It is interesting to note the increase of attendance in the library this year over that of last year. The question arises—is this due to a stronger sense of duty in the student, or it is that the day of the much abused flapper co-ed passing at last? One thing is fairly certain—the libraries are not being adopted by the indolent dreamers as a comfortable place in which to drowse away a lazy afternoon. The chairs are much too hard and straight—the whole atmosphere too much that of scholarly concentration. Nor at night, when the gloomy dimness and solemnity are broken only by a circle of light from that most intellectual looking fixture, the green shade, does one choose this abode of learning for that most delectable of occupations, "killing time." The student seldom occupies himself there with a mere novel. It is the weighty encyclopaedia, the thick-looking volume of history and philosophy that hold sway. The increase of 23% in attendance during November and December, over last year's attendance, can hardly be explained by conditions within the University. Lectures and the incentive to work can have changed little. It must then be explained by a change within the student body itself—a tendency to broaden out in education. The aim is not merely to pass an examination by cramming some dozen pages of notes, but there is an indication of that curiosity which leads to research in a subject from the pure and simple desire for knowledge as its own end.

A liberal education, as is generally agreed, is the true purpose of the college, and in this respect surely the increased use of the library and of books read is a good omen.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Hart House will attempt what should prove to be a popular innovation when the doors of the theatre are thrown open to members of the House for a concert at noon hour to-day. And from what we have been able to learn, those in charge of the arrangement are to be complimented on securing a very capable and competent artist for a vocal programme that is said to be both unique and splendid. If the short concert meets with the approval and support of the undergraduate body, and it should, there is no reason whatever why such performances should not become an occurrence rather than an event.

Art, Music and Drama

Victoria Dramatics

The play presented by the Victoria College Dramatic Society this year derives its title from the song:

Ye Gentlemen of England
 That live at home at ease,
 How little do ye think upon
 The dangers of the seas;
 Give ear unto the mariners
 And they shall plainly show
 All the cares and the fears
 When the stormy winds do blow,
 Having reference to the sometimes tempestuous voyage in search of conjugal bliss.

The plot has a dual interest. Rev. Benjamin Cobb, the mild, ineffective, but beloved rector of a small English village, and Lily Cobb, his vulgar, unimaginative wife succeed most remarkably in making a complete and appalling mess of their lives. He, a brilliant scholar, with the promise of a distinguished career in the Church, degenerates into the futile nonentity of the play, and she, about to enter an equally scintillating and even more venerable calling, instead passes twenty-five years of her life in a refined purgatory of desperate ennui relieved only by periodic outbursts of insane fury. As the climax of the play, the rector dies, "... a murdered man, and his own wife killed him," to be followed with—

Dear Sir:

Do you take any interest in "English as she is spoke" among our student body?

I have collected a few precious specimens of Campus "pronunciation" (that is one), and that such gems may not be utterly lost to posterity, have enshrined two or three in imperishable verse, as follows:

A student afflicted with scarcity
 Of grey-matter had the audacity

To pose as a writer:

He's now the Big Noise on the

Yours obediently,

Sidney Q. Satan, Gang Leader of Sulphur Springs, Hell, gives Exclusive Interview to "The Varsity"

Admires New Faculty of Pyrotechnics

After an amazing journey from Smoky Centre, one of the suburbs of Pandemonium Airport, where he hopped off, Capt. Sidney Q.Q. Satan arrived here and made a perfect landing at Empyria, Eden, at 9.56 p.m. last evening. The great strategist looked grimy and somewhat weary after his unequalled journey of 9 days, or 216 hours through space. The trans-Chaotic hop is the longest ever undertaken by an airman, holy or hill-ill, in the history of aviation. Capt. Satan was accompanied only by his Carthaginian mechanic, Lieut. Michael Molock.

"The flying conditions were O.K.," said the in-famous Navigator, "and I attribute our success to the 146 gallons of Ethyle-Brimstone Super-Test that we used. It was certainly Hot Stuff." Captain Satan exhibited his cargo of "The Story" magazines with a characteristic wink. "That should wake 'em up," he asserted. During the interview a curious spectator tried to steal one of the glowing headlights of thebiplane "The Spirit of St. Lucifer," and Captain Satan blasted him to the spot with a snappy breath of sparks.

He had no definite plans for the future. "Almost any old place will suit me. I'm welcome everywhere," he smiled pyrotechnically as he divested himself of his snake-skin flying suit. He would give no views on Communism, and expressed deep regrets that he was not invited to speak at the next Hart House debate: "Resolved that this House is of the opinion that Diabolonism is not in the best interest of Theologians."

VARSITY SENIORS MEET PRESTON AT THE ARENA TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The defeat of the Varsity Juniors on Friday eliminates them from the Big Four group and put them out for the season. It seems a shame that so good a team should be forced to hang up its togs so early in the season, but it is expected that some exhibition games will be arranged. The boys have had a strenuous schedule and deserve all the trips they can get.

In the rugby season it is usual to see the Junior team still playing and landing championships long after the seniors and intermediates are out of the running, but in hockey things seem to be reversed and the big boys come into their own. Turn about is only fair anyway.

Varsity Intermediates moved up another step on the ladder when they defeated Brampton by the decisive score of 6 to 1 on Saturday. The Brampton team was supposed to be a real contender for the honours in the local group, but Varsity certainly put a crimp in their chances. The only team that Varsity has not beaten so far is Milton, and that is probably because they have not met the Brick-makers yet. The locals look as if they might go a long way in the Intermediate series this year. Last season they won their group only to be eliminated by Oshawa in the play-offs. The team is going far better than at any time last year, and it will take a real team to stop them.

Varsity Seniors have a hard task ahead of them to-night when they attempt to stop the Preston Riversides.

Led by Gunner Arnott, the Preston team are making a serious bid for the O.H.A. honours, and Varsity will have to be at top form to stop them. It is too bad that Harry Whitehead is unable to play, for the big fellow certainly knows how to annex the odd goal, to say nothing about a few of the even ones.

Don Carrick was not taken seriously by a great many of the local hockey enthusiasts when he turned out with the Seniors early in the season. They were willing to admit that he had few equals in the country as a hockey player. But Don has certainly been coming along, and while he is not ready for professional company yet, he certainly is playing a smart brand of hockey. One thing about him is that he is not afraid to step into the opposition no matter how big they are. In this respect, however, he has little on the rest of the boys, for they refuse to back away from any man's team.

The special feature story on the Grads' farewell game on Canadian soil before the team's departure for Europe and the Olympics is a graceful gesture from Bob Anderson, a member of "The Varsity" sporting staff of three years ago. Anderson is now connected with the Halifax Chronicle, but it is not difficult to feel that he still remembers the Grads as Connie Smythe's "Blue" team of three or four years ago. A booster of Nova Scotia, Anderson will nevertheless always remain an enthusiastic Varsityite.

Forestry Beats Union

Union Theological College basketball team played the Forestry turn-out in Hart House gym on Thursday afternoon. The Forestry stalwarts were victorious over the Theologs by a score of 21-16 in a scheduled game.

Dr. Lovell Murray, as chairman of the evening, introduced the speakers, who were principally "Nationals." Roy Shaw of Victoria, speaking from the Chinese point of view, said that the missionary brought an entirely new idea of God than that taught by Confucius. Someone had suggested to him, upon coming to Canada, that he should force himself to get the Canadian point of view, should become one with the Canadian. Yet how often has the missionary tried to do the same in China? Those who have realized this, have done a remarkable work.

Miss T. Shirashi, speaking for Japan, stressed the influence of the individual and as a means of better understanding. Japan to-day is sending representatives to study from our point of view.

Mr. Ebitto, graduate of Harvard and student of Osgoode, described the changed conditions in Nigeria, where ten years ago a man could hardly go, but where a woman is now safe at all times.

All speakers stressed the value of past work, and showed that the worthwhileness of the work in future will depend on the type of missionary sent out,—on his willingness to be one with the native of the country he is in.

VICTORIA BEATS WYCLIFFE AFTER BELATED RALLY

Double Plays Feature Fast Indoor Baseball Game

By means of a sixth inning rally Victoria was able to defeat Wycliffe in a well contested baseball game by a score of 13-6. In this inning the score was tied 6 all, and Cannon replaced Ashton in the box. He walked the first two men, but a fast double play De Roche to Cowan ended this threat. When Victoria came to bat for the last time they settled down to business, and by five o'clock 7 runs had been scored without anyone being out. A sparkling unassisted double play by the Wycliffe second baseman was a feature of the first part of the game.

The Victoria line-up was: De Roche s.s., Searle 2nd, Cannon c.p., Beavers r.f., Cowan 1b, Birge c.f., Hart 3b., Laing l.f., Ashton p. (Ostrander l.f., Lockhart c.) McIntire and Holton were the umpires.

almost mobbed. He played a whale of a game, one of the best of his career, and his further popularity was insured when it was announced his father was a Nova Scotian.

The Bluesones took the big boy to their hearts. The second period ended nine to one.

In the third and last period, the Grads drove in five more. They skated rings round the fast Nova Scotian forwards, and found no difficulty in stick-handling through the Bluesones defence to shoot the puck past Hanrahan, the local goalkeeper.

The game ended 14 to 1.

While Nova Scotians generally were somewhat disappointed that their own team did not stand up to the Toronto lads as was expected, the victory did a great deal towards raising the Grads' prestige in this section of Canada.

Following their defeat at the hands of Boston, local sport followers pointed out the fact that a Nova Scotian team had done just as well as against the "Hub" team as did the Blue and White.

Last night there were many of the same players on the ice as journeyed to Boston from Nova Scotia last year. The Grads tied them in knots and left them practically useless. After the game the players remarked that Boston had seen either a miracle or the Grads were so far off their game in that city they should have had invalid chairs provided for them. It was a vindication.

Murdoch, the veteran Nova Scotian hockey player, stated after the game "he believed he knew something about team work till he had seen the Grads." His remark voices the general opinion down here. Further, Murdoch, who played Boston last year, states he cannot believe Boston ever beat the Toronto boys, so that is that.

Seven thousand and five hundred rabid fans watched the struggle, and by the end of the game it is believed that seven thousand four hundred and ninety-nine were cheering for Toronto. The exception was Billy Armstrong, the manager of the Nova Scotians, who observed a discreet silence and solemnity. His Honor Lieutenant Governor Torrey, uncle of John Torrey, formerly of Varsity, faced off the puck, and after the game the team were the guests at a large civic banquet, when gifts were presented the whole party.

"Red" Porter had no parting messages for friends in Toronto. "We'll leave that kind of think till we come home," said the Olympic leader, as he boarded the Arabic here Sunday afternoon. He stated the team were all in fine shape, and they entertained great hopes of bringing back the Olympic championship that Granites carried into the Dominion a few years ago.

As the steamer pulled out from the dock and steamed slowly up Halifax Harbor, a band of loyal Varsity men sent a ringing and stentorian "Toronto" after the departing players. Another "Toronto" answered them. The Grads have left for new worlds to conquer.

INTERMEDIATES WIN FOURTH GAME IN ROW BEATING BRAMPTON

Varsity Maintains Early Lead and is Ahead at End by 6-1 Score

CROSBY AND EVANS STAR

Only One Goal Scored Against Varsity Team in Last Two Games

Varsity Intermediates made it four straight wins in their group when they defeated the Brampton team by a score of 6 to 1 at the local Arena on Saturday afternoon. Varsity had an edge on the visitors in condition, but even if the latter had been in first-class shape there is little doubt but that the Blue would have been returned winners.

Varsity got a lead of three goals in the first period, and it was not until the last frame that Brampton netted the puck for their lone tally. They had several near scores, but the sterling work of Little in the Varsity nets kept them off the score sheet till the game was sewed up.

Crosby and Evans led the scorers for Varsity with two each, and Graham and McKnight each accounted for a single tally. Crosby got his two in the first period, and Evans also got one in the initial frame.

Graham was rewarded with a goal in the second period, and Evans scored his second on a pretty shot from left wing. Bill Park was in there all the time, but did not manage to get a goal despite the fact that he lost a tooth in the cause.

McKnight accounted for Varsity's goal in the final period on a combination play. And with only five minutes to go, Brampton scored their goal. It was the first goal to be scored against Varsity in two games.

In the week by Lily, a prey to her own unbearable grief. This most unprepossessing example of apparent fiasco of a great love is used as the final argument persuading Joan Sheperley and Garry Despard to undertake the great adventure together in spite of possible incompatibilities. "Grant they wrecked themselves, but think of the stars they steered by." Such is the play by Clemence Dane; perhaps its one weakness is that Lily Cobb does not receive her vindication until interest has already turned to other quarters.

Frederick Daly, the rector, by his unvarying portrayal of all the more amiable Christian virtues and as the living embodiment of the text, "Love suffereth long and is kind," won perhaps more of the audience's sympathy than his ineffectuality in strict justice deserved. Rosamund McCulloch, as Lily Cobb, received the most sincere tribute to an emotional actress when she reduced numbers of the audience to an open exhibition of tears, an achievement particularly difficult for an actress who is known personally to a large number of her audience, and that audience, not anticipating tragedy, somewhat bewildered by a slight tendency to burlesque the lighter parts. Frederick Wansbrough took the part of Garry Despard, a victim of post-war malaise, and won the approval of the house as the lover of Joan Sheperley, the flapper who "couldn't help being so sensible, and was determined not to be sentimental—yet. This role was filled by Helen DeRoche, who in our opinion gave the most finished performance of the evening. Kathleen Christie's acting as Miss Ann Sheperley adequately carried a part that demanded greater versatility of emotion than any other. Though not cast in stellar roles, Archibald Hare, Charles Birge and Edward Jolliffe as the three friends of "Benjie" did some rather effective work; we particularly liked that of Sir "Jimmie" Fowler. The parts taken by Emily Acheson and Betty Ratz as Lady Sara and Mrs. Bewley are as difficult to appraise as

VARSITY MUST WIN FROM PRESTON TODAY

Victory Needed To-night by the Students to Assure Group Honours

WHITEHEAD OUT OF GAME

The feature game of the Senior O.H.A. schedule is carded for the Varsity Arena to-night when Preston and Varsity meet in a game which will just about settle the group honours. The two teams are out in front of the group at present, and a win for either one will go a long way toward deciding the group.

In their last game Preston showed that they are a team to be reckoned with by decisively defeating Marlboroughs. However, the local team defeated the Ducks earlier in the season, so honours are about even in that respect.

If the Varsity team can beat Preston to-night it will mean that they have defeated every team in the group and are practically assured of the title. The only thing that is worrying Varsity supporters is that "Red" Whitehead will not be in the line-up. It was thought that neither he nor Kirkpatrick would play, but it is practically certain that "Kirk" will be in action against the Riversides.

St. Mike's Beat Trinity

15-10 in Indoor Ball

In a loosely played baseball contest St. Mike's defeated Trinity 15-10. St. Mike's showed hitting ability in overcoming the 8 run lead while Trinity had piled up in the first inning by scoring 5 in the first, 6 in the second, and 4 in the third. Trinity rallied in their last inning, scoring twice, but could not overcome St. Mike's lead.

They were to act, but in the nature of things to audiences they must seem characters rather than characters. But undoubtedly served to relieve the tension which at times grew rather unbearable. Throughout, the minor cast provided excellent support.

TORONTO CANOEISTS ELIMINATE JUNIORS FROM O.H.A. RACE

Fast Play and Heavy Checking Displayed by Both Contenders

TEAMS IN GREAT CONDITION

No Goals Scored in First Period, 2-1 Score Finishes Game

The Varsity Juniors were eliminated from the Big Four group race on Friday evening at Andy Taylor's Arena Gardens, when they received an unexpected 2-1 defeat at the hands of the Toronto Canoe Club.

Both teams showed excellent condition, and as a result the game was quite fast. Heavy checking, however, was very much in evidence throughout the entire game. An unfortunate occurrence took place in the second period when Shepherd, the T.C.C. defence man, was carried off the ice and taken to the hospital, where it was found he had the ligaments of his shoulder painfully torn.

No goals were registered in the first period. The second stanza saw Smith drill his characteristicizzling shot from outside the defence to strike Haggerty's pads, drop to the ice, and roll behind the blue line—a heart-breaking goal. Carrick on left wing for Varsity felt it necessary to mix it up frequently with the T.C.C. defence. "Geordie" Beal at centre was the pivot of the majority of the forward line attacks.

With the third period came a burst of speed from the paddlers. Brydson shoved one in for them during a mix-up near Varsity's net. About six minutes later Lee lifted a second counter into the Varsity nets. The Blue and White battled hard in the last ten minutes of play to even things up, but they just did not seem to be able to make their plays effective.

In the second game of the double-header the Ducks set themselves up stronger than ever as the leaders of the group when they administered a 5-4 defeat to the P.C.C.

Line-up:

Varsity: Goal, Hummsett; defence, Bean and Mooney; centre, Beal; left wing, Smith; right wing, Carrick; subs, Lister and Clute.

T.C.C.: Goal, Haggerty; defence, Shepherd and Tupling; forwards, McIntyre, Richardson, Brydson; subs, Lott and Lee.

DETROIT CONVENTION OPENS WITH SERVICE

"Nationals" of Many Countries Present Missionary Viewpoints

EVENING SERVICE AT KNOX

The Detroit Convention follow-up services commenced Sunday morning in Wycliffe Chapel when two hundred and fifty students, in the Detroit manner, divided into four "colloquia" under Dr. F. Schofield, Rev. A. J. Brace, Miss Thomas and Miss Brown. The Devotional was led by Dr. Schofield of Japan, and Dr. W. E. Taylor, who took as his topic four words, "Come, Go, Wait, Give." Following this, a Denominational meeting was held and reports given. The London delegate led in the Devotional, and a half-hour of music by the Baptist colored choir was greatly enjoyed.

The evening service, held in Knox Chapel, gave Dr. Brace an opportunity to answer several vital questions resulting from the discussions. One conclusion reached was, not that Jesus is a way, but "He is THE way." Denominationalism Dr. Bruce likened to an orchestra, which though having many instruments, produced perfect harmony. So, while looking forward to the time when Nondenominationalism will be outstanding in the foreign field, though we may not have organic unity, we can have spiritual unity.

forestry policy of the State of Pennsylvania.

At present the cut of lumber in that state is one-seventh of what it was thirty years ago, and the reason for this, the speaker said, was that good forestry principles had not been put into practice in the earlier years of this century. However, the people have learned a lesson through experience, and to-day are lending more thought and effort to the development of forests which will prove a permanent source of supply.

Dr. Zeigler brought his address to a close by summarizing some of the uses to which state forests are being put. Besides the major use of timber production they are being utilized as sites for summer camps, state sanatoriums and state game preserves.
Recreation, he said, is coming to be a major use of the forests.

Hon. N. Finlayson, in moving a vote of thanks to Dr. Zeigler, spoke of the similarity of our own problems with those of his state.

Professor N. N. Millar seconded the motion and spoke of Forestry in Western Pennsylvania, his native state.

SORTING OUT NEEDED AT PERSIAN WEDDING

Sir Bertram Windle Lectures on the Medes and the Persians

PERSIAN POLITICS

That Darius the great was responsible for bringing into existence in the western world the well-known ham and having first introduced poultry farming into Europe, was pointed out by Sir Bertram Windle in his lecture on "The Medes and Persians," Friday afternoon in the Physics building.

"Though usurper to the throne of Cyrus, Darius was one of the greatest rulers that ever lived. He introduced 'provincial government,' dividing his kingdom into 20 districts, each under the rule of a satrap, made good roads, set up a postal system, and by means of cuneiform signs, borrowed from Babylon, the Aryan tongue of Persia came, in his reign, to be a written language."

Though Persia is an inland country, Darius grasped the importance of sea power, and established a navy, manned perforce by foreign mercenaries. Persia's efforts at conquest in Europe, however, were defeated at Thermopylae, Salamis and at Marathon.

"Sort yourselves out after it's all over," were the words addressed to a protesting bridegroom being married to the wrong bride by the harassed clergyman of a big Liverpool church on a certain Shrove Tuesday, the favorite day, in English cities, for weddings, when dozens of "couples" may line up in some of the larger churches.

"In the same way," said Sir Bertram, "there may have been some 'sorting' necessary on the wedding day of Alexander the Great, conqueror of Persia in 331 B.C. On the same day he married the Persian princess, Roxana, he had 10,000 officers of his army marry a like number of Persian women. With the same purpose in view, namely of consolidating his empire,
he sent 30,000 Persian boys to Greece

The guest of honour and chief speaker will be Professor Nathaniel Micklem, late of Selly Oak College, England, and now of Queen's University. Mr.
Micklem was one of the outstanding men in English religious life and was particularly interested in the Student Christian Movement. Music by Mr.
Davidson Ketchum will follow the dinner. Tickets, $1.00, can be obtained from the S.C.A. Office in Hart House, or from the Women's S.C.A. Office in Household Science Building.

24. Mrs. Aiken will speak on "Art and Entertainment in the Theatre." Mrs.
Aiken is an enthusiastic believer in the success of the Little Theatre

Christ maintaining His Divine without qualification. That His hearers so understood Him is proven beyond doubt in the instances when they took up stones to cast at Him, accusing Him of blasphemy, 'because Thou, being man, makest Thyself God.'
(John 10:33; 8:58, 59.)

"His answer to the high priest Caiphas, however, leaves us no room to doubt. 'I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us if thou be the Christ the Son of God?' Jesus saith to him: 'Thou hast said it' (Matt.
26:63, 64). Or as St. Mark quotes Him as replying: 'I am.' Then the high priest rent his garments, saying:
'He hath blasphemed; what further need have we of witnesses? You have heard the blasphemy; what think you?' But they answering said: 'He is guilty of death.' Jesus testified at that solemn moment, when His life hung in the balance, and under oath, that they had understood Him aright, that He was really the Son of God. Therefore we must accept His word, accept Him as very God, or reject Him utterly as an imposter.
Christianity without belief that Christ is really and truly God, without reservations, is a travesty."

A feature of the exercises is the door of the chapel and enquirers are invited to write their questions about

"As to the fairness of the commit-

I would agree with Mr. Caldwell that, on the whole, they err on the side of over-generosity. For instance, the three visitors between them took some seventy minutes, leaving a similar period of time to be divided among some fourteen student speakers.
Whether or not the speakers who spoke against the motion were Com-after all, these debates are not public confessions of faith, but rather a training in public speaking."

Reception of sound was thus limited to the one direction desired.
The latest improvement was the short wave system, but even yet, there is much need for improvement in reliability.

The effect of magnetic force was known to have been utilized by the Chinese about 2600 B.C., when a certain chariot carried an ornament which always pointed south. On its early stage the influence machine was the source of livelihood of certain persons who went about giving shocks as entertainment.

Mr. Ireton then rose to speak on cathode rays. It was pointed out that in a highly exhausted discharge tube, cathode rays originated and were found to be material particles carrying a negative charge of electricity.

In 1897 Sir J. J. Thompson investigated the ratio of the charge on a particle to its mass. In 1913 Dr.
Coolidge perfected the X-ray tube and later a cathode ray tube. Various things were subjected to the bombardment of the rays. Mr. Ireton made mention of some of the recent research on the fluorescence of solid nitrogen oxygen, etc., and showed its application to problems of the atmosphere.

Os-ke-non-ton, Indian Baritone Gives Recital at Hart House

Colourful Effect of Native Robes

MOHAWK CHIEF

Finds Mouse Under High Table

Os-ke-non-ton, "Running Deer," of the Bear-Clan, Mohawk tribe, presented to the members of Hart House yesterday a charming recital during the noon-hour. His was a programme at once amusing, impressive and artistic; his carefree manner and affable conversation combined with a solemnity in more serious moments bespoke the appearance of a true artist.

Before his appearance in the theatre Os-ke-non-ton made a tour of Hart House and also created a deal of interest by lunching at the high table in the Great Hall in full warrior's dress.

Os-ke-non-ton's first number was the deep, stern prayer to the Sun which the Indian chieftain makes upon the birth of a male child into the tribe. The singer's deep baritone made this seem a true invocation to the Sun-God. Then he sang the "Happiness Song" of the Navajo warrior, a carefree, lilting dream ballad which carries the hearer irresistibly along with the music.

A number of minor songs were sung, including the whimsical plea of the old Indian to his mocassins to not betray him when he has slunk away from home for a brief respite from care in the deep woods.

Os-ke-non-ton, with an engaging simplicity of manner, explained also the way to make a tom-tom such as the eastern woodland tribes used. At the end of the programme proper the chief manufactured fire with the primitive drill, using as tinder a mouse's nest, which, he explained naively, he had found under the table in the Great Hall. The mouse, he added humorously, had got away.

"You give me soup and nuts and everything," said Os-ke-non-ton, smiling, "then you say 'Won't you sing?'"

The audience was not satisfied with the programme being ended where it was, and clamoured vigorously for an encore. This was granted, and at the suggestion of one in the theatre, Os-ke-non-ton sang the entrancing melody, "By the Waters of Minnetonka," in his native tongue.

Os-ke-non-ton was introduced by Warden Bickersteth. The concert was under the auspices of the Daily Star.

Lindbergh!

Frosh at the University of Arkansas are not very well up on their current events. In a test lately it was asked who Charles A. Lindbergh was. One freshman had the idea Lindbergh was a Prime Minister of Sweden during the 1400's.

Another got him mixed up with Hindenberg, and said he was a German general during the Great War. Still another, also thinking of the war, thought it was the battle line which gave the Allies such a tough ride in 1918.

The fourth thought he was the master-mind of the Bolsheviks in Russia.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS AT M'GILL

Sir Robert Falconer to be Guest of Honour at Undergraduate Dinner

LARGE TURNOUT

The following item comes from the "McGill Daily":

Preparations are now being made for the annual Arts Undergraduate Dinner which will be held on Wednesday, February 15th, at one of the downtown hotels.

Sir Robert Falconer, President of University of Toronto, will be guest of honor, and it is appropriate that he should be selected this year, as this is Varsity's Centennial session, thus affording Arts undergraduates an excellent opportunity of paying their respects to their sister university.

Although the Arts Undergraduate Society has minor attractions during the year, the dinner is the culmination of everything and always attracts a large turnout of Arts men.

It will be remembered that the Reverend Bruce Taylor, principal of Queen's University, spoke at a previous dinner, and the presence of Sir Robert Falconer at the coming banquet is thus in keeping with previous precedents.

Sophisticated Seniors Allotted to Freshettes

The Sophisticated Victoria Seniors and impressive Freshettes thrilled alike at the Victoria dramatic presentation of the Mariners last Friday evening. One 2TB was allotted to every two 3TBers when the latter entertained their superiors at Hart House. After the play, the party assembled at Wymilwood, where refreshments were served.

Mr. Yergan rendered distinguished service in France and Africa during the war, and is now the National Y.M.C.A. Secretary in South Africa.

RELIGIOUS LECTURES AT NEWMAN HALL

Father Doyle Speaks on Subject of "God and Myself"

QUESTION OF MORAL SIN

"The Bible and Evolution" is the topic announced for to-night at Newman Club Chapel. Last night, Rev. Basil Doyle, who is delivering this course of lectures on religion, spoke on "God and Myself." "Mortal sin," he said, "is the greatest of all evils and misfortunes that can visit one in this life. All else pales into insignificance beside a single mortal sin. Earthquakes, famines, cyclones, wars, altogether cannot hold the balance against it. They are all of time; they have their day and cease to be. But mortal sin goes over the bounds of time into eternity."

"It may be defined as a grievous offence against the law of God. Every sin is not mortal. Some there are whose matter is very small; some are committed more through ignorance than malice; some without full deliberation. These we call venial sins. But every sin in which the soul sees that it must choose between God and the gratification of some unlawful passion, and chooses to follow the call of corrupt nature, is mortal sin. It grievously offends God and cuts the soul off from His friendship and His grace."

"Treachery is the abuse of a trust to the injury of him who has given the trust; mortal sin is that. God has entrusted us with free will with which to render Him willing service and homage, and we use it against Him in violating His commands. The essence of mortal sin is in this: we turn our back upon God in order to follow our own way, despite His commands. If we should die without having become reconciled to Him the separation will be eternal."

Before the lecture Father Doyle answered several questions that had been deposited in the "Question Box." Services begin every night at 7.30, and all students are cordially invited.

MANY NEW BOOKS ADDED TO SHELVES AT HART HOUSE

E. J. Benn's New Book "The Confessions of a Capitalist" Proves Popular

The seeker for novelty in reading matter will be repaid by a visit to the Hart House Library just now. The shelves devoted to new books are generously supplied, and this offering should satisfy every imaginable taste.

The reader with a historical bent will no doubt find food for reflection in "Confederation and Its Leaders," by Hammond; "Bismarck," by Emil Ludwig; "Mackenzie and His Voyagers," by Woolcott, and many others. He who would have the "low down" on modern diplomacy and diplomats will probably consume "The Intimate Papers of Colonel House," by Seymour. If "Moscow Jack" and his confederates made any converts in our midst they should be stimulated by E. J. Benn's "Confessions of a Capitalist." Apropos another recent discussion we have a tidy volume, "The Companionate Marriage," by Lindsey and Evans.

The sociologist, if he exists among us, will certainly read Katherine Mayo's "Mother India," a volume which has created a furore not only in England and America but in India as well, and has been hailed as a flood-light on truth by some and denounced as a "drain inspector's book" by others.

TEA FOR TWO WITH JAZZ ORCHESTRA IS LATEST DIVERSION FOR WEARY STUDENT

Large McGill Crowd Grets Opening of Tea Room at Tea Time

IDEA SPREADS

Tea. Let us repeat the word in case anyone did not hear it the first time: tea. Most of our readers will by now have gathered what the subject of this little chat is to be. Is the tea menace sweeping across Canada with devastating influence? Is this good old English custom, with all its traditional ceremony and the accumulated abuses of scores of years, working its way into Canadian universities? We are compelled to answer that we fear it is.

Take, for instance, McGill. A new tea-room, catering to both men and women students, has recently been opened there. What does this point to? (No. We are not at all ashamed of using a preposition to end a sentence with.) To an increased demand for tea, of course. And it is significant that the demand is not limited to members of the fair sex. Students, both male and female, clamour for that invigorating beverage, the stay of the lumberjack and the institution on which English society has been built.

Interesting facts in connection with the new tea-room are supplied by The McGill Daily. Its crisp and lucid style so admirably describes the outstanding facts concerning the place of refreshment that we cannot do better than quote from it:

TWO DOORS LOCKED

The icy gale of last Friday and Saturday which reminded us that this is mid-winter caused much discomfort on the campus from numbed limbs, cold motors and undignified pursuits of bounding hats.

More so was it an inconvenience for the members of Hart House who wished to enter or leave the building from the west wing. Friday morning the north door of that wing was nearly carried away by the wind. The force of the blast broke the spring of the hydraulic door-check, and tore one of the hinges loose, splitting both the door and the door jamb. The hinge was temporarily wire to hold the door in place. Yesterday carpenters took it away to be repaired. Meanwhile a beaverboard substitute blocks the doorway.

The other north door on the west side also suffered from the storm. It is necessary to keep it locked, as the door-check is out of commission.

MRS. CARROLL AIKEN TO SPEAK AT UNION

Prominent in dramatic circles and an enthusiastic believer in the success of the Little Theatre movement is Mrs. Carroll Aiken, wife of the manager of Hart House Theatre. The Women's Literary Society of University College has been fortunate in securing this talented speaker to address the open meeting of the Society to-night in the Women's Union. The subject about which Mrs. Aiken is to speak is "Art and Entertainment in the Theatre," which will probably refer to the Little Theatre movement in which the speaker is so very much interested.

Undergraduate Clubs at Oxford Require Private Income of $5,000

In the past it has been estimated that a student can spend a year at the University of Toronto with a minimum expense of $500, and can, without undue extravagance, spend up to $1,000. Yet figures recently issued by the Board of Education in England indicate that a college education in the old country is a much more expensive process than on this side of the ocean. The minimum necessary for maintenance among the grey spires of Oxford is $1,100. The average

New shipments of valuable furniture and beautiful carvings have been arriving at the Royal Ontario Museum lately. These new acquisitions are being displayed as part of an effort to encourage Canadians to have better and more attractive homes.

An exquisite Venetian chest, built in about 1550, is the finest article of the latest shipment. "It is easy to recognize it as coming from Venice," Mr. Curry said, "because it is raised on a stand. The Venetian women were too stout to bend over a low chest with any comfort." The chest is about five feet long and covered with what was once red velvet. The whole is strengthened and decorated with wrought iron work of delicate workmanship.

Sixty detail pieces of Renaissance carving have also arrived at the museum. In the last few years this carving has become enormously valuable due to the large purchases of museums in the States. These carvings are copied for book-bindings, while artists, sculptors, architects, and even wall paper designers are copying these all the time. Since as time becomes worth more and more money people find it cheaper and more satisfactory to reproduce the work of craftsmen who had leisure to work to perfection.

Mr. Curry, the curator of the museum, deprecates the present American custom of buying cheap furniture and changing it with the fashions every seven years. "Good furniture is never out of fashion," he said. From 1700 to 1750 the people of England bought more furniture than ever since. It was during this period that Chippendale was designed. To-day a set of Chippendale is worth from seven to eight thousand dollars and is as good as new; while Mr. Curry doubts if he could get ten dollars from a second-hand dealer for any modern work.

"Like the old nurse who gave the bride silver spoons for a wedding present so that she could pawn them, people," he thinks, "should give good furniture for wedding presents so that our national furniture may be an asset and not a dead loss."

The museum authorities are striving to buy rooms representative of the various periods of architecture since the Renaissance. At present they have a Wren room, a Georgian room, and an Elizabethan room.

From a single room such as the ones in the museum, an architect can visualize the whole house, and if his client likes one of the rooms he knows (Continued on page 4)

The question to-day is "Who is Lindbergh?" asked in reference to the answers given to this by students of the University of Arkansas appearing elsewhere in this issue. Although asked in all seriousness, those approached evidently viewed it as a joke.

Chas. Jennings, II Trinity: Isn't he a kind of cheese?

Robert Jaffray, II Trinity: A modern version of the Ford Peace Ship.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER

We prognosticate a new game for the coming generations entitled "Prophecies." The only necessity—a Torontonensis—and the game—to guess the interests and activities of the graduates there portrayed without reference to the list below the picture.

Already the game has been tried with enough success to be perturbing. Are we choralized, guilded, or basketballled before we arrive at the University, or do we become fatally branded after two, three, or four years of active connection?

Not only looks have, presumably, become so standardized, but one's characteristics would seem to depend on college or club. "He's a Trinity man." "She belongs to the S.C.M." "Alpha Omega."—And the subject is dropped.

Cast aside all clubs—overthrow fraternities, and organizations, and the five thousand students would proceed to build new ones and aggregate themselves in the same old way. It is natural, then, to group in with those of the same interests. But perhaps a remedy lies in a balance of interests—in keeping enough of oneself outside the group pale, to be always "moi" instead of "nous."

SQUARE PEGS AND ROUND HOLES

Freshmen are most interesting to watch. You notice how they come in, most of them, like a lot of square pegs in just as many round holes. But it doesn't seem long until the pegs wear down—they are rubbing up against other pegs, perhaps—they are being smoothed down by the combined elements of a rain of comments, a whirlwind of student activities, and a storm of criticism. A friendly professor adds a little sand-papering to the process, and presto!—all is complete! The square peg now fits its hole, and a perfect university graduate is the result.

But here is a question—a problem that faces every large university to-day in an abstract though vital way—are their graduates of a type? Are they all alike? One well-known humorist compares them to so many soda biscuits, stereotyped patterned, and symmetrical, without the gumption to decide whether they will be round, square, or have the corners cut off. Individuality counts for so much in this "one-sheep-after-another" world of to-day, that it is rather a pity that university students with every opportunity for development of the first characteristics should surrender completely to having their corners off. Let it be more of a polishing process, a shifting of the square peg until, perhaps a little worn, it finds that the hole fits.

be sort of hard on the digestion.

C-C

Just to show that dear old McGill is ready, aye, ready, to pick up the white man's burden in case Toronto should go over to the Bolsheviks, one of the litterati slings off the following epic in the Daily down there without really trying:

The students are sneering
History Essays are nearing
A travail that everyone fears.
Both rich men and crooks
Give history black looks
And the 'stud's vent their feelings with seers.

I vote we take up arms

To the skies raise our great alarms

To demolish this tyrant lets fight,

Why should we worry

Always be on the hurry

When we hear of some history bunk.

Why all the bustle

The library bustle

Art, Music and Drama

To-night at 8 o'clock the University of Toronto German Club will present two plays in the Auditorium of the U.C. Women's Union, 79 St George Street. These plays have been chosen to enable all students to understand it, including those whose knowledge of the language is limited.

"Die Meisterschaft" by Mark Twain is a very interesting and amusing comedy, partly English and partly German. Two young couples, visiting their "Vaterland" in order to learn German, find great difficulty in doing so till . . . The cast will be: Miss Madeline Lake, Miss Marion Noble, Miss Jean Hamilton, Mr. Kaspar and Mr. Davidovitz.

"Einer muss heiraten" is a one-act play full of action and humour. The roles will be taken by Miss Elsie Mason, Miss K. Mundy, Mr. Jack Scott and Mr. Frank Mellon.

All interested are urged to attend.

VICTORIA COLLEGE MUSIC CLUB

"Merrie England" by the recently knighted English composer, Sir Edward German is a real comic opera making heavy demands upon the performers from a vocal and instrumental point of view, far beyond the realms of an average musical comedy show.

It might almost be described as "national" in its scope, dealing as it does with such historical characters as "Good Queen Bess," "Sir Walter Raleigh," "Robin Hood," "Maid Marion." The appropriate tuneful musical settings have a strong flavour of old English folk-songs and madrigals.

The work was one of the most successful ever given at "The Savoy" in London, apart from the Gilbert and Sullivan masterpieces. It is now to be presented for the first time in Toronto by the students of Victoria College. No outside help has been drawn upon for this production, the entire cast being made up of bona-fide members of the club.

The principal parts will be taken by the Misses Marion Wilkinson, Alice Strong, Grace Irwin and Jean Evans, who will impersonate Queen Elizabeth, Bessie Throckmorton, Jill the Witch, and the May Queen respectively, while Messrs. Stanley Packham, Harold Kirby, Donald Cook, Clarence Ferguson and Frank Cryderman will fill the parts of Sir Walter Raleigh, the Earl of Essex, Walter Wilkins, a Shakespearean player, and Jack Tom and Big Ben, the foresters.

The musical director is Mr. Thomas J. Crawford, who is already known in city musical circles as organist and choirmaster of St. Paul's Anglican Church and conductor of the Eaton Choral Society. Mr. Crawford has had considerable experience in this class of work in the Old Country. On one occasion he prepared Sir Edward German's other opera, "Tom Jones," for Sir Edward German himself to conduct. It is to be hoped that the public will really support the students in this ambitious enterprise, which will be given on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, January 25—28th, at the University of Toronto Schools (Bloor and Spadina).

roles he accomplishes whatever he attempts. The crafty Baron Stern is foiled, the Russian countess tricked by the ancient blank-letter method and all ends happily.

Splendid acting was given by every member of the cast. As Baron Stern, Edmund Abbey was excellent; as Count Orloff, House Jameson handled a difficult accent flawlessly, and as Countess Zicka, Anne Carew returned to the company in triumph. Very fine bits of work were contributed by John Gordon, Jane Aldworth and Grace Webster. Miss Taliniero didn't seem as pretty as usual in her role of heroine, but then she was supposed to be a French lady. All in all, "Diplomacy" is a most commendable drama, and for the premiere of a long (135 minutes by actual count) drama, the performance was incredibly smooth. We compliment the Empire Players on their approach to the dramatic criterion of stock companies established in 1923 by the Cameron Matthews Players.

TIVOLI

The picture based on Gen. Lew Wallace's novel "Ben-Hur" is being revived again at the Tivoli this week. Unfortunately, the book carries far more plot than any one movie of ordinary length is capable of encompassing, and in an effort to include the whole story the sense of continuity has been sacrificed, if not mangled. If one doesn't mind that, coupled with the customary anachronism and the use of Biblical texts as subtitles, the picture provides a very fair evening's entertainment. The famous chariot race is quite dramatic though somewhat portraited, but the most realistic effects were obtained in minor episodes, such as the torturing of Simonides the bond-slave. From time to time coloured pictures are introduced, strangely reminiscent of illustrations in our early Sunday school books. Aside from the picture itself, however, a great deal of pleasure is to be obtained by careful attention to the organ selections accompanying it. Schumann, Chopin, Mendelssohn and possibly Brahms contributed some of their better known classics to the programme.

THE LIBRARY AND THE UNDERGRADUATE

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

I am writing to ask you to do me the favour of publishing in your columns a few words about an inefficient department of the University, the Library. This institution is primarily, I suppose for the use of the undergraduate body, and yet it seems in the majority of cases to cater to graduates and members of the staff.

There are many books whose use does not justify their being put on the over-night shelves, but one can hardly classify them with those volumes that at rare intervals pass beyond the stack rooms. Could these books not be allowed to be taken out for two or three days instead of a week, and their return on time demanded, irrespective of the borrower, professor, student or graduate. At present one often asks for a book of this class only to be met with such

PRESTON DEFEATS VARSITY SENIORS 4-3 IN EXCITING O.H.A. GAME

SPEAKING OF SPORT

As is indicated elsewhere in this issue, the basketballers go into action on Saturday against Western. This new entry in the Intercollegiate series sort of upset the older members last year and finished by coping the title. However, from the dope as it is at the present, Queen's University stands out pretty well, and anyone who has real serious ambitions for the bunting should not pass over the Tricolour as "just another team." But don't say that to Coach McCutcheon. He has a pretty high opinion of his proteges and was more than satisfied with this season's trip to the States. Varsity came up against some of the best teams of the Eastern States, and the travel-worn Blue squad went down only by small scores when they clashed with these highly touted quintettes. Mac sure has a smooth running team this season and they are out to give a good demonstration on Saturday.

Don Carrick has retired from the light-heavies and Harry Hills is at present ineligible for Intercollegiate competition. Just let the boxing coach know who you are and what your aims are and then see what happens.

Senior O.H.A. is good hockey, and the Preston-Varsity game last night proved it beyond doubt. Incidentally, there was a bit better crowd than usual—we could make a rough estimate of near a thousand spectators. At that, the arena will hold a few more.

The defeat last night topples Varsity from the top position in the Ontario hockey race. Preston now leads with three straight wins and no losses, while the locals have four wins and one loss.

"Mac" King, who was injured earlier in the season, expects to get working again in a week's time. His presence on the line-up will materially strengthen the team, and if the report is true that Whitehead will play in another week, that means that the team will be at full strength again, and oh how they will step into Preston and McGill.

PRESTON WIN IN CLOSE GAME

Varsity Senior O.H.A. Team
Meet Defeat With 4-3
Score

HARLEY SCORES 3 TIMES

If it wasn't the most exciting, it was the one game in the history of the Varsity Arena which aroused real rooting from the crowd when Preston defeated Varsity 4-3 in a Senior O.H.A. fixture. The rooting started with the first drop of the puck and continued to the last second of play when the whole Varsity team was trying to bat the puck past Schmaltz in an attempt to tie the score some twenty-five seconds after Harley had made the count 4-3 on one of his brilliant lone rushes.

Harley was the most outstanding man on the ice, scoring all three of Varsity's goals, two of which were lone rushes and the others on a pass from McMullen. Herb Kirkpatrick spiked all rumours of his hanging up the skates for the season by playing for only sixty seconds last night and playing a real game.

It is a toss-up between Arnott and Schmaltz for the Preston limelight. The former accounted for three of his team's counters, while the latter was unbeatable in goal. Time after time Schmaltz had the Toronto rooters groaning as he turned aside "sure" goals.

The whole game was hard played, hard fought, hard skated and hard checked. Every man on the ice gave his best all the time and that accounted for the cheers. Each goalie had lots to do both on long shots and shots close in. Kirkpatrick and Carrick took turns in carrying the puck up the ice, but it was not until after the visitors were one up that Harley took the notion to slip two in in quick succession. The second period was fully as fast as the first, with Kirkpatrick missing a golden chance when the puck hit the post. Legon, the ex-Queen's star, did good relief work.

Referee Burgoyne came in for a lot of criticism by the crowd, and there was a continued run of comments when the game seemed to get out of hand, and heavy, not always legitimate, checking featured. Dissatisfaction reached the height during a short period when Preston played seven men.

The final period was played at fever heat, with Preston taking long shots and Varsity long chances, at times only the goalie behind the Blue line. Early in the period Talbot had a goal, but got a penalty when Carrick was right in on Schmaltz. Varsity played a four-man attack for the whole of this period, and only the wonder work of the Riverside net guardian, ably assisted by Talbot and Skelley, enabled them to retain their meagre lead. A bit of comedy entered the game when Carrick picked up the puck and threw it at the net after an opposing player had removed Don's stick in an unorthodox manner. A penalty was given but not to a Blue man.

Preston's final goal came when the majority of the Blue team were attacking, and though it should have disheartened the Pearsonites, they fought back and made a most thrilling attempt to tie the game. Rush after rush was broken up, but finally Harley slipped one past Schmaltz, and the ensuing fifteen seconds was packed with thrill upon thrill as Varsity rushed and Preston shot the puck up the ice in well-known ragging tactics.

Line-up:
Preston: Goal, Schmaltz; defence, Talbot, Skelley; centre, Arnott; wings, Clark, Wade; subs, Circura, Julka.

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Kirkpatrick, Carrick; centre, McMullen; wings, Harley, Richards; subs, Stewart, Legon, Little.

After the way this T.I.M. person shot such a barrage of puns into the Champus Cat yesterday, we feel a well-defined Inferiority Complex creeping upon us. Jealousy? Huh! We sneer at the idea, but all the same we know how the late Bismarck felt when little Wilhelm began to feel his oats.

We guess that self-appointed defenders of the youthful mind will now be able to breathe easy since it turns out that the instigators of the U.C. Communistic Society were only doing it as a joke. Collich boys will be collegians, as Mr. Laemmle has it. "Yes," said Mr. Guy Fawkes, when interviewed, "I only did it as a joke."

TEA ROOM IDEA SPREADS

"The tea-room, which will be situated in the McGill Union, will be specially decorated and will provide an ideal place for men and women students to congregate and enter into interesting conversations over the tea table. It is expected that this innovation will prove very popular with the student body, as it will enable the men to become better acquainted with the fair co-eds attending McGill. Discussions on affairs of the heart, politics, theatres and modern problems of general interest will be quite in order, while conversants are partaking of refreshments."

Apparently they find money just as useful down at McGill as we do here. The following excerpt seems to bear witness to this statement:

"The crowd was somewhat slow in coming in. Many men seemed to be in doubt whether they should go to the cafeteria or the tea-room. Eventually, the lower prices of the cafeteria won most of these."

Judging by another story from the same newspaper, the tea menace has not only descended upon McGill and covered it like a blanket, but has insinuated itself into student life there in a particularly virulent form—the Jazz Tea. For the benefit of the uninitiated, we will reprint the following item in order to explain what a Jazz Tea is:

"This," says the McGill Daily, "was the first event of its kind in that the patrons of the new tea-room were able to listen to the bewitching strains of Fred Gross' Orchestra, who were playing in the cafeteria across the hall. There has been some form of entertainment, usually of a musical nature, for the tea-room patrons ever since its inception a month ago, but those who attended were treated to this novelty."

"A crowd assembled early in the cafeteria, attracted by the news that Gross and his orchestra were to entertain them, and help to drive away cobwebs incurred by the all-terrible proximity of exams and the consequent frantic attempts, fruitless though well-meaning, of trying to learn at least a little so as not to disappoint the professors."

"The hungry and jazz-craving ones alike found solace in the fare, both of exactly what they want. Because the Georgian room, for example, was not the whim of one man, but the expression of the temperament of an old age, which was so imbued with classical lore that they depicted Wolf on the Plains of Abraham in a Roman toga. The Georgians also want restful homes, which effect they secured by a perfect simmetry of every detail. The Elizabethans, on the other hand, didn't want rest and quiet. They were always just popping out to blow up someone's house. Hence if anything balances in a house of that period it was an accident.

special interest to the student body. The illustrations are worthy of special mention.

The general reader will find "Genius and Character," by Emil Ludwig, of interest since it analyses the character of some of the greatest men in statecraft, art and letters. There is the usual quota of recent fiction, including, of course, Upton Sinclair's "Oil." If all we hear is true, this should be worth reading.

Not long ago we read something from H. J. Phillips on "Jazzing Up Our Public Libraries." His suggestions included greater variety in colours and shapes of the volumes. Nothing new is evident in shapes, but we think we can detect a departure in the direction of more sprightly bindings. Leon Trotsky's "Towards Socialism or Capitalism" appears in a jacket of flaming crimson. The possibilities in this direction are infinite, and if the movement proceeds it should soon be possible to diagnose the contents of any given volume by a casual glance at the cover.

a reply as "Professor so and so has only had that book out for a week. Could you not wait for a few days?" Even if you do not wait, a recall takes several days, and even then you are not sure of your book, if another professor happens to share your desire.

One is also struck by the importance of those mysterious files and ledgers, which seem to need so much attention at the busy hours of 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. It is not unusual to spend half an hour getting two or three books, out of which the material can be obtained in ten minutes.

The above is not meant as a destructive criticism, but only as an attempt to draw attention to a situation that is certainly in need of a remedy.

COLLEGE ATMOSPHERE

That the student in the small university or college receives more out of his college activities and that he retains a clearer and more vivid memory of his undergraduate days is an expression often heard here and there about the campus. In large educational centres such as our own, where one's activities may be as large or as varied as it is wished, the fact invariably presents itself that few, if any, of our activities do receive the whole-hearted co-operation of the university body; that our activities are largely disjointed and unconnected, and that the faculty system, the presence of fraternities and the fact that a large proportion of our numbers have homes within the city does not tend to foster that elusive thing known as "university spirit."

Take, for instance, Queen's University, Kingston. One does little more than step off the train at that centre before he feels that he is within a university town. Kingston may have been built before Queen's, but university atmosphere hovers over the place to-day. In fact it is difficult to determine whether the undergraduate or the average resident is "most Queen's." With but a small radius within which to venture, the student at Kingston is forced to confine his activities within a localised area, and there he meets others of his kind or else those who look favourably toward him. And with the circle from which he may make his friends thus limited, it falls that not only will he know his fellow students best but appreciate them more and retain pleasant memories of them longer than the undergraduate at a university such as this where activities, pleasures and associates may be so many and so widely scattered.

As a university we have but little night life. We hold pretty well to Toronto traditions, and, with the exception of one or two down-town restaurants and two dances a year, few opportunities are provided for the meeting or association in a social way of the students from the scattered faculties. And it is the common social associations that aid in helping to build up and in fostering a real university spirit.

At McGill, with its large undergraduate body but smaller number of faculties, we find a different spirit, perhaps, than that in any other Canadian university. There, with no Hart House and little opportunity for strictly university functions, the student invariably gathers at night clubs, hotels or fraternities. But the gathering places are so well known and the rounds made so frequently that there is hardly a time but that a "McGill" will arouse a multitude of earnest supporters ready to do anything or to carry on in any manner for the Red and White.

With the large number of students available that are registered here we should be able to make a decided success of everything that we attempt, but the fact remains that our clubs and executives receive poorer support than they would in colleges of one-quarter the size. The remedy is difficult to seek, but it would seem apparent that our residences are too scattered, our faculties too dissociated, our interests too far removed from those purely connected with the university, and transportation too difficult to promote the best college atmosphere.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

We wish to thank Mr. Corbett for calling our attention, in a letter printed in an adjacent column, to an error that crept into an article by Diogenes in a recent issue. And we also wish to state that we regret that our correspondent was falsely quoted. "Diogenes" was initiated as a means of discovering student opinion on pertinent matters. It was our hope that those interviewed would take pains to give sincere answers and that we, on our part, would make an endeavour to reproduce them accurately. For the most part both the persons interviewed and the reporters doing the interviewing have done their part; but we would like to point out that we would consider it a favour if any similar breaches to the above were reported to us.

Art, Music and Drama

That German, as a spoken language, may seem more than "swearing, mainly," and a perfectly intelligible medium for humour as well, was quite ably proved last night by members of the German Study Club, who presented two short plays at the Women's Union. The first, "Die Meisterschaft," showed Mark Twain, the dramatist, to be almost as entertaining as Mark Twain, the novelist. The play is a comedy of errors: the humour depends largely on the fact that four young people endeavour to acquire "not grammatical German, but German just the same," much more expeditiously than usual so their conventional proposals may be made, and their resultant attempts are delightfully ludicrous, particularly when amazement and indignation loosen the tongues of the two young ladies. Added to that is the amusing spectacle of a stern father (who eventually capitulates) and a helpful landlady (who nevertheless sympathizes), finding themselves the unwitting abettors of this and discovering to their amazement a willing accomplice in the maid Gretchen, to whom they had attributed this marvellous and sudden linguistic development. The acting of Miss Barthelme, as the maid, was especially noteworthy. The only appreciable weakness in the play occurs in the third act when the stage is left empty for a moment two or three times.

The characters of the one-act comedy which followed were equally happily chosen. "Einer Musz Heiraten" presents two hopeless bookworms—brothers and professors to boot—confronted with the evil necessity of marriage in compliance with their father's last wishes. The question is: Which shall it be and whom will he marry? Their aunt thoughtfully provides the bride—her niece, Luise—but when they draw lots, fate less thoughtfully thrusts the role of groom upon the elder brother, Jacob. He finds himself quite unequal to the task of proposing to the lady and gladly accepts Wilhelm's offer of instruction. But when the latter genuinely falls in love with Luise, complications arise, for Jacob too finds her charming—though not to such an extent that he cannot allow himself to be placated and left content among his books. The work of Mr. Casper as Jacob was particularly good.

The entire cast was very well chosen and exceptionally well trained, and the two plays were a revelation of what students can accomplish in the way of good acting in spite of the initial difficulty of the foreign language.

At St. Hilda's Literary meeting held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock the members of 278 presented G. Martin-scerra's comedy "Siceno de Una Noche de Agosto," which being translated—with more or less accuracy—means "The Romantic Young Lady," at least so we gathered from the programmes, which were quite ambitious, bringing briefly to our notice that the play was presented at Teatro Esclava, Madrid, in 1918, Royalty Theatre, London, in 1920, and St. Hilda's College, Toronto, in 1928!

The well chosen caste was as follows:

Rosario Agnes Combe
Dona Barbara Katherine Foster
Don Juan Florence Allen
Maria Pepa Florence Allen
Irene Eileen Ditchburn
Amalia Mary White
The Apparition, Luis Felipe de Cordoba Helen Oliver Emilio Dorothy Fraser
Mario Marion Chisholm
Pepe Margaret Keggie
Guillermo Constance McKittrick

Miss Combe as "the romantic young lady" took her part exceptionally well. Miss Foster's representation of the worldly wise shrewd grandmother was very convincing, as was Miss Allen's characterization of Maria Pepa, the gossip-loving family servant. Miss Oliver was an attractive gallant author with whom the romantic young lady's affections had become engaged.

Miss Finlay acted as stage manager. Miss Cox and Miss Motoda were in charge of the properties, and 278 co-operated to produce their play very cleverly. The meeting closed with Meta-gona Stephanos.

To-day we have decided to run a Notes and Comments Column after the style of the "Toronto Globe." If the vein of luck holds out, and we find ourselves capable of dashing off these Comments every so often, we may get appointed to the Birdie Brigade of the "Globe" and go sleuthing after January robins.

A recent despatch in these columns indicates that more students are using the Hart House Plunge. This is an example of the desire of every true University student to be in the swim. It also proves that you can't keep a true Canadian down.

The pool at Lillian Massey is also well patronized. Just exemplifying the buoyancy of the true British lassie. Victoria College students in certain courses have to walk to Baldwin House in the morning. Another example of the old Varsity bulldog spirit.

In spite of the hardness of seats in the University of Toronto, students continue to sit in them. Just demonstrating the fact that a Canadian student is never deterred by anything, no matter how hard.

More than a thousand students eat daily in Hart House. A young Britisher will attack anything.

A young student in Victoria is reported to have gone insane. He doubtless knows when he is well off.

The Hart House Barber Shop continues to prosper. Instead of being alarmed by danger, the real collegian does not mind, nay, enjoys a close shave.

Students when paying fees are not allowed to lean against the wall. Naturally, a Canadian never has his back to the wall. In fact, he is so upright

DOESN'T LIKE PUNS

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In an editorial of Monday's issue you voice a sentiment which I heartily endorse. It is, as you remark, "distinctly bad taste" to "brand a man as belonging to a certain strata of society against his wishes" by using his name without permission.

Now of the various strata of society in the University which are undesirable and objectionable there is one from which I particularly desire to dissociate myself. This is the group of persons who indulge in the use of puns—especially the puerile specimens inflicted on a long suffering public by the Toronto Daily Star and Champus Cat. On Monday "Diogenes," in his daily quest for truth, brings a majority opinion to bear against the pun.

Mr. Editor, what was my surprise to discover, after reading your very excellent editorial, that quite without my permission Diogenes quoted me as endorsing the pun. There seems to be a difference of opinion on your staff.

W. C. Corbett, IV U.C.

that he never needs any support.

The Bursar's Office experiences difficulties in collecting fees from some students. Another case of the old bulldog spirit which never lets go.

Recent additions have been made to the library. It is now, we suppose, a building of many stories.

BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS HERE SATURDAY, VARSITY vs WESTERN

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Remarks have often been passed to the effect that there are too many activities going on in the University. Maybe the weatherman has heard these remarks, because yesterday he sent a gentle snow which soon developed into what is now conceded to be a characteristic January rain. Poor old Jennings Cup!

Somebody is always taking the joy out of life. In our story of the Preston hockey game we said that Kirkpatrick played just sixty minutes of the game, and then some joy-killer went to work, and yesterday's paper intimated that Kirk played some sixty seconds.

McGill is sitting pretty as far as Intercollegiate hockey is concerned. They have run up two wins in their two starts, and as there are now only three teams in the senior loop you can easily figure it out how the Red and White stand.

On Saturday afternoon the Pearsons entertain the University of Montreal in the first home game of the Intercollegiate series; and as McGill defeated this team 3-0, and our team 4-1, Saturday's tussle should be productive of some real hockey and a worth-while game to attend.

Many papers seemed to gloat in the rumour that "Herb" Kirkpatrick, since he did not turn professional, had decided that amateur hockey was not good enough for him. Well, the way that defence man stepped into anything that Arnott, Wade, Clark and company had to offer on Monday night was quite enough to convince us that he still appreciates the "simon-pures."

On several occasions in the Preston game, players seemed to prefer to take a two-minute rest rather than let an opposing man take a shot which he has earned. A two-minute rest for a goal saved seems to be a rather light penalty, and there might not be much harm done if in cases like that the time were to be increased.

To-morrow the boxers and wrestlers take a little jaunt to Guelph to see how the boys at O.A.C. perform in the ring or on the mat. This is an annual training trip and one which helps put the team in good condition for the Intercollegiate assault. Only practical work will show up on a team like this, and the more the better. In the Senior assault, Guelph has always sent down a strong team and has had enough entrants to cop the silverware. That is where the Toronto faculties fall down; they have only a small team entered, and naturally they do not win so many preliminary points, and these preliminary points mount up.

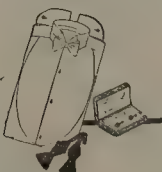

In the past, the University has not been in the habit of sending a fencing team to the Dominion Championships when the tournament is not in Toronto. Therefore, in view of the fact that the fencers do not cost the Athletic Union any appreciable amount of money (neither of the instructors are paid, and all advanced fencers provide their own equipment), an agitation is on foot to have a team sent to Montreal this year. Last year when the tournament was held in Toronto, Montreal sent down a strong team, and there were other entrants from Buffalo, New York and Winnipeg. This year it would only be fair to send a team down to Montreal, especially since three of the four titles remained in Toronto.

C. O. T. C.

Members of the C.O.T.C. and attached members of other units who have expressed their wish to take the O.T.C. examination in March next are notified that unless all homework is brought in by Friday, the 27th instant, and they are favourably reported upon by the Sergt-Major Instructor with regard to drill, they will not be recommended for permission to take the examination. The names of those recommended will be submitted to National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, on Monday, January 30th.

The attention of candidates is drawn to important notices at C.O.T.C. headquarters with reference to this, which should be seen immediately.

TWO RECORDS BROKEN AT INDOOR TRACK MEET

U.C. Wins the Day by Margin of 4 Points; S.P.S. Second

Gordon Jermyn of U.C. outclassed a formidable field in the 440 yards dash to establish a new interfaculty record for the event in the indoor track meet last night. His fast time of 53 1-5 secs. is a great improvement on the old record of 53 4-5 secs. Jermyn has speed, judgment of pace, and stamina. His remarkable showing in the middle distance runs resulting in new records for the 440 yards dash and the 880 yards dash has featured the indoor season.

Duff Thompson of S.P.S. was the surprise package of the quarter. He captured second position in 54 1-5 secs. Thompson is a new man in Varsity track circles, but will bear watching. Harley Russell of S.P.S. recorded 54 2-5 for third place. Graham and Mabey completed the field.

The one mile walk went to C. Daly of St. Mike's, the time being 7:29. His brother, M. Daly, likewise of St. Mike's, was second about 50 yards back, and "Click" Wilson of U.C. took third place. Wilson is better known as a distance runner, being the two mile champion of the Spartan A.C.

D. J. McKenzie leaped 9 ft. 9 3/4 in. in the standing broad jump to win the event for S.P.S. Balies of Meds provided the keenest of competition with a jump of 9 ft. 7 3/4 in. Jack Marshall of Dents jumped 8 ft. 10 in. for third place, despite the handicap of an injured foot.

McKenzie, Russell and Thompson brought the S.P.S. team within striking distance of University College in to-day's events. The point standing is: U.C. 25; S.P.S. 21; Dents 15; Meds 9; St. Mike's 8; Vic. 3.

Mid-semester reports at Ohio Wesleyan University showed that the juniors were the best scholars, while the frosh were the worst.

BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS ON SATURDAY

Much New Blood is Infused Into Intercollegiate Basketball Teams

HARD SEASON PROMISED

The University of Toronto basketball fans will have their first opportunity to see the Varsity boys in action this season when they swing into competition against Western University at Hart House on Saturday of this week. Western come to Toronto with a remarkable season behind them, having managed to capture last year's Intercollegiate championship when the fans were calling some of the old time teams to win. Advance reports from London show a stronger line-up than last year, practically all of the veterans being back and several noteworthy additions from across the line. The old forward line of Ladouceur, Hind and E. Hauch have had to step this year to keep two newcomers, Vatz and Evans, from nosing them out for positions. Turville and Bice still hold down the pivot position at centre. The two other Hauch brothers will be seen teaming up on the defence and will be assisted by a stranger from Detroit, Ford by name.

With a formidable line-up such as the above, the boys from Toronto will have no easy task facing them. The team this year will present a lot of new faces to the followers of Intercollegiate basketball, Roy Currie, the popular defence player, being the only veteran on the squad. Currie is captain this year, and judging from pre-season indications is in for his biggest year in Intercollegiate basketball. Teaming up with Captain Currie on the defence are two players who are both showing a marked improvement this year, Sakler, from last year's Intermediates, champions of last season, and Sammy Hurwitz, star defence player on last season's Varsity Juniors, T. and D. champions. Holding down the centre position will be Newman, a freshman from St. Catherine's, who got his basketball with the St. Catherine's Rowing Club. Newman's game is one of the treats of the present team. Relieving Newman at centre will be Gord. Johnston, of last year's Intermediates. Johnston has been slowed up this year to quite an extent by injuries to his ankle and knee, but these are responding to treatment nicely, and he should be in good condition for the game on Saturday night. The forward line is entirely new to Intercollegiate basketball. "Mc" Mitchell, the Varsity track star, is showing the biggest improvement of any of last year's Intermediates and has turned in a star game in every exhibition fixture. Mitchell is a hard and tireless worker, and his back-checking is a treat to see. Teaming up with Mitchell on the forward line will be Carl Faber and Lin Sharpe, both new to the Intercollegiate game, although both had senior experience with Broadview Y last year, where they turned in star games. Sharpe and Faber are both good ball handlers, Faber standing out in this department of the game. Both are excellent dribblers and may be counted upon for their share of the points against any opposition. While the fans may miss such old faces as Hutcheson and the

St. Mike's Defeat O.C.E. in Interfaculty Basketball

Yesterday St. Mike's defeated O.C.E. in the upper gym in a fast basketball game by a score of 30-14. St. Mike's showed more experience at the game and were superior throughout the contest. However, if they are going to defeat Jr. S.P.S. and win the championship of their group they must improve considerably. Sammons of St. Mike's was the individual star of the contest, playing a stellar all-round game, besides being high scorer. He scored four baskets and three fouls for a total of eleven points. Each member of St. Mike's team made one or more baskets. Galloway was the best for O.C.E.

Potter brothers, their places are ably filled by the new members of this year's squad, and the spectators are to be shown a team that work well together and that will display some of the finest team work that has been seen around Varsity in years.

As a preliminary fixture the Varsity seconds will engage the McMaster quintet in a scheduled Intermediate Intercollegiate game. The Baptists are a new entry in the college race, and are of a somewhat unknown calibre. From advance reports they are quite strong and will have to be contended with for the honours.

The first game will commence at 7:30 p.m., the senior game following immediately. After the games there will be music from ten to twelve. Tickets are on sale at the Athletic Office or from members of the teams.

The line-up:

O.C.E.: Galloway (9), Lockwood, McManus (1), Dean (2), Barley (2), Ledger, Whelihan.

St. Mike's: Riley (6), Sammons (11), Cassidy (2), Steves (4), McMahon (7), G. Flick, Quigley, O'Hare, Patterson, J. Flick.

STUDENT DRAMATICS

is usually held in the Alumni Hall or else in the chapel.

Mr. Paul A. Gardner, a well-known amateur player and producer, stated that the U.C. Players' Guild found their wants fairly well supplied by the auditorium in the Women's Union. Mr. Gardner stated that the policy of the Guild was to study plays, more than to make them remunerative, consequently they did not need a large audience such as would necessitate presentation of their plays at Hart House. The hall at the Women's Union holds about 250, and for their weekly presentation it was stated that the average attendance was about 75 to 100.

At St. Michael's College still another plan is in force. All debating and amateur dramatics are presented in a large common room in the basement of the college, a room capable of holding 300 to 400 persons. At Newman Hall students of St. Michael's hold their dances and often oratorical contests. The chapel is also utilized for meetings of a religious nature.

The Dramatic Society of Trinity College also present their annual play at Hart House Theatre. It was stated that there was no difficulty in procuring the theatre. Students from Trinity College also take their turn in ushering at the theatre. Practices of their play and debates are held in a large common room, as their convocation hall is not yet built, but it is hoped, will be erected in the near future.

Wycliffe College has its own Convocation Hall on the Tower Road, which is used for the annual convocation, debates and oratorical contests. At Knox a large class room is used for debating and public lectures. This lecture room seats about 100 and is sufficient for the present needs of the college. More religious meetings are conducted in the chapel, which has a capacity of about 500.

U.C. DEBATE

The speaker concluded with the statement that "the existence of the British Empire depends on Singapore."

Mr. E. Henry, the first speaker for the negative, began by stating that "protection by armaments means not security but further war." A naval base at Singapore, he explained, would not be of much practical value to the colonies. "At present Britain has every assurance for permanent peace in the Far East," the speaker went on to say, then why the necessity of such lavish expenditure of British funds on a remote possibility?

The third speaker, Mr. Wood, opened his remarks with: "Britain is justified in establishing a naval base at Singapore if only for the protection of her enormous trade and commerce in the Far East. A chain is as strong as its weakest link. Singapore is that link in the case of the British Empire," the speaker finally concluded.

Mr. J. Millar, the last speaker, stressed the fact if Britain did as the resolution called her to do, she would be leading the world in a new race for armament building, which would eventually culminate in another world war. "What will the Japanese think of this?" he asked.

The decision was granted to the negative. The later vote of the House on the resolution further proved that it was opposed to the building of a naval base at Singapore.

SUPPORT FOR ATHLETIC TEAMS HAS NOT YET IMPROVED

City newspapers are now taking the undergraduate to task for not supporting university athletic teams, and particularly sarcastic do they become in connection with student attendance at hockey games. Anyone in the least familiar with hockey conditions in and about the university for the last five years will admit that this depreciation of student support is more than justified and that, in view of the fact that the university now has a fine artificial ice plant of its own and that every consideration has been shown the undergraduate in connection with the purchase of season tickets, the college man should bow his head in shame rather than to endeavour to find excuses for his callous indifference.

We believe that the majority of the students are interested in the University of Toronto hockey teams. The records made by Blue and White squads for years back cannot but have created some spark of enthusiasm in the average breast, and hardened indeed would be he that could not feel some pride at the mention of honours gained and victories yet to be fought for. Certainly either criticism or applause for the "big" team may be heard on every hand, and generally it could be understood that most every undergraduate hopes for success at the hands of his representatives. But so wishing he forgets or else dislikes to remember that that good, honest, hearty support has done so much to win victories for college teams as have the efforts of the players themselves. He passes up his opportunity to help his team and follows the account of the game in the newspaper. He will not do his share to help his representatives win and yet blames the squad if it loses. In actuality he is a "poor sport."

On Monday night Varsity and Preston staged one of the most thrilling encounters that has ever been seen on Varsity ice. Certainly he who was there will tell you that; for enthusiasm ran high and the murmuring applause and excitement were continuous. Varsity's support was small, but it was hearty, and every one of those loyal rooters present will not pass up another of the games this season for the proverbial million dollars. On Saturday afternoon the undergraduates will have another opportunity of contributing to the success of their team, and it would appear to be distinctly up to them to get out in force and do all in their power to aid their fellow students out on the ice along. Varsity must win against the University of Montreal if the local college is to retain her proud position in the Intercollegiate that she possesses to-day, and Saturday's attempt should be half-hearted on the part of neither the players nor their should-be supporters. And the student owes sufficient to the athletic spirit of his university to make certain that no interfering dates or programmes are arranged.

ENCHANTMENT

There is a dream to-night
Upon the burning sod—
A golden road of flame
Whereon my feet have trod.

There is a dream to-night
Within yon glowing star—
Of silver hope divine
That morning may not mar.

I dreamed a dream last even,
Ask me not where nor how—
It passed like a burning wind . . .
For it is morning—now!

Art, Music and Drama

Last night in U.T.S. Auditorium, Victoria College Music Club gave its first presentation of the light opera "Merrie England." Brilliant colour and action admirably depicted a May Day Festival in the time of Queen Elizabeth, the plot centering around the love story of the Queen, and her court. The same stage setting was used in both acts, but lighting effects were employed to advantage, while the large company and limited stage room made elaborate scenery unnecessary, if not impossible. The production was featured by excellent chorus and solo singing. Miss A. Strong as Bessie Throckmorton showed the most outstanding vocal talent amongst the ladies, sharing the honours with Mr. Stan Packham, who admirably took the part of Sir Walter Raleigh. Mr. I. D. A. Cook as Walter Wilkins, a would-be Shakespeare, kept the audience in good humour with his jokes and antics. The sustained action was interrupted throughout, however, by Bottom-like puns and word-plays.

Miss Grace Irwin won acclamation in the part of Jill-all-alone, a pathetic figure, denounced for witchcraft. Mr. H. Kirby as the Earl of Essex, and Miss J. Evans as the May Queen successfully filled prominent roles.

The director, Thomas J. Crawford, is to be congratulated on the successful performance of a pleasing and colourful presentation.

A.E.P.

Here is a riddle for students of French only:

Q.—What is the first thing a doctor does after operating on your father?
A.—C'est je role main.

It is rumoured that a well-known professor was observed walking across the campus the other morning, clad only in pyjamas and slippers, and was heard to murmur, "Dear me! How extraordinary! This is the third time I have had this dream recently!"

"Just pasteurize that time," said the old-timer as the greenhorn peeked over the top.

However, after these remarks we feel like putting on a plug hat and punterly walking between the hind legs of a duck.

Still, on thinking it over, we do not own a plug hat, and as there is no duck handy, we will refrain for the present.

But "a cat's a cat for a' that," as Burns said, and his Wordsworth a great deal.

ZRDTSKI—NOTICE

Secret Order of Trotzarians.

To celebrate the inaugural of Trotzkyism in our fair university we proclaim a week of fellowship and brotherhood. However, in face of such extreme opposition it is an absolute necessity that our celebrations be in secret. Members must abide by the following decrees:

1. In order to hide our activities all members and adherents are compelled to let their beards push. Two roubles for longest piece of chinwork. Red beards must be dyed.
2. Red must be restricted to underwear. Red flannels suggested.
3. Our national flower, the Blunderbus Rannuculaceae Pistilus, will be used to dust off any too ambitious member.
4. Vodka, she must be drunk.

The date of our mass meeting is to be kept in the dark. It is understood, however, that Red Dee will be in the chair. The following Reds will be indicted: Red Ridinghood, Red Astrich and Red Jester. During the induction we will be favoured by a solo entitled, "Twas only a comb with broken teeth, but we found it hard to part with."

We must conclude with a pun (finish off so to speak). How about errata?

"Ptiomane poisoning claims another victim, a Victoria student. It has not yet been discovered whether he was poisoned at a Wymilwood tea errata Hart House dinner."

C.C.

Having stepped out of the editorial churn for a few days, we see that terrible things are beginning to happen. The Amalgamated Order of Punterers are meeting and feverishly thumbing over all dictionaries for useful words. We hereby endorse the charge of the valiant knight Corbett, who has put his finger in the dyke to stem the overflow. Indeed he deserves the tribute of a limerick:

There was a brave critic called Corbett,
Who said: "You may think that I'm sore but I loathe and detest
The Pun at its best,
For it wallows good taste from its orbit!"

VARSIY SENIOR ASSAULT TEAM PERFORMS IN GUELPH TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Well, gang, how do you like it? Just take a look at the other inside page, and for the sake of our "little known" university spirit, inhale it deeply.

That's all we can say on that subject.

That's all we want to say on it too.

As a little postscript though we MIGHT add that attendance at basketball games is not what it might be. There are two peppy games on the cards for Saturday night, and after those are run off, a peppy orchestra will be on and the fans can trip the light fantastic for a couple of hours.

The only team left in the group for the Varsity Intermediate O.H.A. sextet to defeat is Milton, and if comparison of scores means anything at all, the boys under the guidance of Jim Robson should not find too much difficulty there. The Blue seconds have been showing a world of good stuff in all their league fixtures to date, and when they meet Brampton in the flower town to-morrow night we have a strong suspicion that the lilies will remain right at Brampton.

Last night the Varsity Seniors and Intermediates had a practice game in which both Whitehead and King were participating. It was good to see "Red" and "Mac" out again, even though they did not work the whole game. And incidentally, with those two playing on Saturday, the University of Montreal outfit should not be able to run in very many counters. As things stand now, some will expect the visitors to have the edge because McGill defeated the Pearsons by a larger score than they did the Frenchmen.

There has been some talk in the past of removing the F. part of the B. W. and F. club and joining it with some other phase of athletics. Originally the assault-at-arms consisted of gymnastic exhibitions and other floor performances, various styles of bayonet work, a tug of war, and a side sample of boxing and wrestling. What is an assault now? Boxing and wrestling bouts with one or two samples of fencing, and those fencing bouts are often considered so much time wasted. That is, the boxing and wrestling fan considers the time wasted because he does not always understand the moves, and when the moves are made, they are so fast that the uneducated one does not appreciate it.

The Interfaculty sports may now be considered under way. Yesterday saw a couple of hockey games, and of course the basketball and baseball schedule has been going on despite the weather. Who can tell, though—it might rain again to-day. Interfaculty gymnasts are called into action to-day, and in this meet the team to represent the University of Toronto will be picked. The Intercollegiate meet is in Montreal this year.

SWIMMING COMPETITIONS WILL BE HELD NEXT WEEK

Goss, Latchford and Thompson to Compete

Next week the best swimmers in Varsity will compete for the Durnan Cup; in other words, for the all-around championship of the University. There are many fine swimmers at Varsity this year, and the meet promises to surpass by far last year's meet. Johnny Goss, S.P.S., Leo Latchford, U.C., and Ross Thompson, U.C., three of last year's stars, will compete. Gundy (Meds), Boddy (U.C.), Marsh (Dents), Scott (U.C.) and Sinclair (Dents) are among the future luminaries.

The events will be:
Monday at 5.15 p.m.—50 yards free style; 200 yards free style.

Wednesday at 5.15 p.m.—100 yards back stroke; 100 yards breast stroke.

Friday at 5.15 p.m.—Diving; 440 yards free style.

All entries must be handed to Mr. Winterburn by Saturday noon.

The Intercollegiate water polo practices Tuesday and Thursday at 5.15 and Saturday at 12.15. "The team will be as good as last year," says Mr. Winterburn, coach. "We lost several players by graduation, but the new blood is showing up fine." There will be an exhibition game with West End "Y" on Friday of next week at 7 p.m.

VARSIY GYMNASIS WILL PERFORM IN BIG GYM TO-DAY

Winner of Wilson Cup and Four Others Go To Montreal

GOOD MATERIAL OUT

This afternoon in the Big Gym at 5 o'clock the best gymnasts in the University will stage their annual Interfaculty meet, and anyone who wants to see some real feats of skill and precision is well advised to be on hand to see Don Barton's boys do their stuff. This squad works from early fall to the end of the winter in preparing for this and the Intercollegiate meets, and they do it all for an ultra love of the sport; they get little student support, and this is perhaps due to the fact that there is no regular schedule, a thing which always tends to bring it before the public eye.

The winner of the Harold A. Wilson Cup and the four next highest are the ones who make the trip to Montreal this year for the meet on February 25. Jack Williamson, Ross Gunn, Ross Lymburner and Wilf Heslop are all veterans of last year's squad and are again in the competition this year, as is Doug Campbell, who was spare man last year. Malone, Stone and MacDonald are all promising newcomers, while Adams, a graduate of O.A.C., is another. It is expected that some 18 or 20 will be entering.

In scoring, the highest three from any one college is considered the team. The judges to-day are Mr. Bonney of Central Y.M.C.A., Mr. Keith, Frank Halbus and Dr. F. Adams.

Nineteen Teams Entered in Contest for Sifton Cup

STANDING TO DATE

The race for the Sifton Cup and the Interfaculty basketball championship of the University is away to a good start with all of the nineteen teams showing great enthusiasm, and judging from the closeness of the majority of scores the race will be a close one.

Jr. and Sr. Meds have both been successful in winning their two opening games, and will have to be watched closely in the race. Jr. School, Sr. Mike's and Sr. Vic. are also favourites and will not let the championship slip away without a hard fight.

VARSIY WILL MEET O.A.C. IN ASSAULT

Boxers and Wrestlers Will Come Up Against Strong Competition

Varsity boxers and wrestlers journey to O.A.C. to-day for their annual Guelph assault. The team meets at Hart House at 1.30 p.m. in time to take the Guelph radial at 2.30 p.m.

Second string boxers are getting their chance to make good. The wrestlers will as usual have the strong competition for which O.A.C. men are noted, and have prepared carefully for this trip. They will have to be at top form to win the majority of bouts.

Again let it be announced that men of 175 lbs. or thereabouts are wasting time in not catching a place on the Canadian Intercollegiate boxing team as light-heavyweights or heavyweights. They should be out in force next week.

Harry Hils, last year's light-heavy, is in training for a bout with Cobb of Camp Borden about February 9. Judging from his present form he should win this affair without trouble.

Basketball Game Cancelled

The exhibition basketball game between Sr. Meds and Jr. School scheduled for to-night, 5-6, is called off. The School team will be absent on an industrial trip to Buffalo.

CURTAIN OF CALISTHENICS

use the same cubicles as are used by those taking physical training, there is a continuous stream of water down the aisles. The girls must pack three or four at a time in one tiny cubicle.

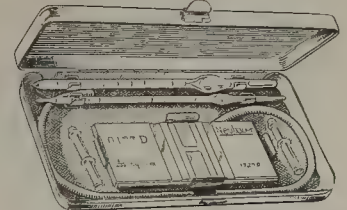

Of the 802 women who should take compulsory physical training there is room for only 256. This means that only the skilled athletes may use the gymnasium. Those who would play for pleasure alone are exempted, and many are deprived of the benefits of co-operation and friendly competition derived from sport.

The students training at the Ontario College of Education to be future high school teachers must also have the certificate of physical training proficiency. These are granted without proper experience, owing to the difficulty of obtaining the gymnasium for the required training. Thus collegiate principals now look elsewhere for their physical instructresses.

The Graduate council of Princeton, an alumni organization, has pledged itself to raise $2,000,000 for a fund to be used in raising the salaries of the university faculty.
